SUMMARY.

Search for the bodies of the victims in the Canadian disaster has now been finally abandoned.

Though all outside the steamer have been found, it is estimated that 800 still are entombed in the hull.

Experts from New York are making a survey, preliminary to an attempt to raise the liner.

A suffragist succeeded in gaining admission to the Court, and fell on her knees before the King.

Stretching out her hands, she cried, "For God's sake, your Majesty, stop torturing women."

Special precautions are being taken against suffragist outrages at Ascot. The buildings are under supervision night and day.

Admiral Sir Percy Scott said that submarines and hydro-aeroplanes had rendered Dreadnoughts practically useless.

He advised the Admiralty to concentrate on submarines, hydro-aeroplanes, and a few fast cruisers.

"As submarines," he said, "cannot fight submarines, possibly sea fighting will come to an end."

Six persons were injured during a storm, which completely destroyed two towns in Pennsylvania.

Over the eastern States of America a heat wave is sweeping, many cases of prostration being recorded.

On the other hand, severe snowstorms are raging in Washington, and heavy gales on the Californian coast.

Owing to the engine becoming disabled, two military airmen were drowned in the vicinity of Calshot Castle.

The Chinese bandit, "White Woolf," looted and burned Tao Chow and a famous Tibetan monastery at Chonl.

Government troops subsequently defeated the bandits, who are now surrounded near Tao Chow.

Herr Leibknecht has published a series of letters from Messrs. Siemens and Schuckert to Herr Herman at Tokio.

Their gist is an allegation that almost the whole of the Japanese Ministry of Marine was bribed.

Great Britain and Germany have expressed their willingness to send a warship each to Durazzo.

They stipulate, however, that the other Powers should do likewise, if Prince William of Wied is in danger.

Sir Thomas Lipton's Shamrock IV. has begun her trials. She is apparently an excellent sailer and fast.

King George received the Maori embassy, who wore Maori costume, at Buckingham Palace.

A double dissolution has been granted by the Governor-General under section 57 of the Constitution Act.

Mr. Cook announced the news of the dissolution yesterday morning in the House of Representatives.

The announcement came as a great shock to both sides of the House, despite constant previous rumours.

All necessary arrangements are being made to contest the coming election with clean rolls.

It is generally believed that both Houses will be enabled to reassemble by October at latest.

Mr. Cook has issued a serious appeal to all electors to rally to the Federal standard.

It is probable that the date on which the election will be held will be in about nine weeks.

A bill to amend the anti-trust law was introduced in the House of Representatives yesterday.

The Minister for Labour yesterday insisted that the miners must respect the Industrial Arbitration Act.

"Personally," added Mr. Estell, "I have always been against the afternoon shift, but the law must be maintained."

A P.L.L. deputation recently asked the Premier to include some women in his nominations for Legislative Council appointments.

Yesterday Mr. Holman stated that at present women are not legally eligible for appointment to the Legislative Council.

The railway and tramway revenue shows great expansion, the last week in May marking an improvement of £28,802.

The railway service accounted for £21,832 of the total increase, and the tramways for £970.

Mr. H. Y. Braddon yesterday presided at a special meeting of members of the Sydney Chamber of Commerce.

Consideration centred wholly upon the present scale of charges for sorting and stacking on the wharfs.

Consignees expressed considerable dissatisfaction with the present conditions. A joint committee of inquiry was appointed.

During the whole of yesterday the Interstate Commission was occupied with evidence relative to the duties on paper.

Apparently the northern mining position is not altered by the meeting yesterday of the Miners' Delegate Board.

Mr. Holman yesterday again referred to the Canadian shipping disaster, also to newspaper attacks on his former criticism.

He repeated his opinion that the Canadian-Pacific Company directors should be put on their trial.

The Executive Council has formally approved the appointment of Mr. Justice Street as Meat Trust Commissioner.

The commission will be officially known as the Royal Commission on the Meat Export Trade.

The Perth Labour Federation Council rejected the Church Committee's proposals regarding the building trade trouble.

Captain Penfold jumped safely from the North Sydney Suspension Bridge yesterday, a height of 150ft.

He used a new patent parachute, which, he claims, might be used by airmen or people on burning buildings.

Damage to the extent of £2000 was done by a fire which destroyed a garage at Kempsey.

M. Maurice Guillaux established another sea-plane record yesterday, by ascending to a height of 10,000ft above the harbour.

He ascended as high as it was possible for him to breathe without the aid of an oxygen inhaler.

It is claimed that this is the greatest altitude yet attained by any airman in a sea-plane.

King George's Birthday will be celebrated on Monday next as a public holiday.

Norfolk Island will formally come under the control of the Commonwealth on July 1.

Mr. Glynn, Minister for External Affairs, said he would interfere as little as possible with existing conditions.

On the Sydney Stock Exchange yesterday business was active, and a large number of sales was made.

The majority of these were made at slightly advanced rates, though there were a few substantial falls.

A good volume of business has been carried through on 'Change at irregular prices during the week.

Wheat was steady but dull at 3/10½ to 3/10¾ for parcels and 3/10 for growers' lots.

A further fall of 10s in copra to £20 5s per ton f.o.b. export steamer was recorded.

At the tea sales yesterday 1/6 per lb was refused for a line of fine Darjeelings.

Yesterday's cables, stating that lead and tin prices in London were slightly better, had very little effect locally.

There is, indeed, a growing suspicion among local operators that the metal quotations are often rigged.

Speculation, therefore, remained slack, no signs of a return to activity or buoyancy being shown.

Yesterday's demand for case eggs was strong, prices being firmly maintained at the previous day's levels.

The cheese market was firm. Stocks of fresh butter were light, but prices were still unchanged.

Onions dropped £s a ton, owing to the arrival of a large shipment of 1491 bags from Geelong.

Weather Forecast.—Fine generally, except for a shower or two in the extreme North Coast, becoming cloudy with northerly winds and some light showers in the far west.

HUDSON'S
EUMENTHOL TOOTH POWDER,

THE GREAT ANTISEPTIC POWDER, which contains no Acid, and is Guaranteed ABSOLUTELY HARMLESS TO THE ENAMEL. In contact with moisture the Powder liberates free active Oxygen, and it is the Oxygen which whitens the teeth so wonderfully and wards off decay as no other preparation for the Teeth can or will do.

"The Lancet," London, January 17, 1914, states:—
EUMENTHOL TOOTH POWDER.
"This tooth powder is designed on sound principles, and is very agreeable to use. The distinctive feature about it is that in addition to some approved germicides it contains magnesium peroxide, which readily parts with free oxygen, as our experiments have shown. This probably leads to a favourable cleansing action upon the mouth, and a slight whitening effect upon the teeth. The powder is finely divided, and is free from harmful constituents and gritty substances."

SKANDIA, SKANDIA, SKANDIA,
The Successful Semi-Diesel Engine.
MARINE, STATIONARY, PORTABLE.
Specially constructed to use as fuel,
KEROSENE, HEAVY OIL, and RESIDUAL OIL.
Further records to the long list:—
The Federal Government, after exhaustive search for an auxiliary vessel to operate in the Northern Territory, to be used in lighthouse construction work, have purchased the Auxiliary Ketch "Forbes Bros.," in which is installed a SKANDIA ENGINE of 30 b.h.p. On the trials, and over the measured mile this craft attained a speed of 6½ knots. This is a remarkable speed when considering the dimensions of the hull are length 75ft, beam 22ft, and depth of hold 6 feet 8 inches, with 110 tons carrying capacity. Cost of running this engine is 1/6 per hour on full load, and the Federal Government have since purchased another Skandia of similar power. Another addition to the motor fleet in this harbour is the launch Pegasus, with a 10-h.p. Skandia Engine installed. She cannot be mistaken. She is painted green, and moored at Fort Macquarie, between the hours of 1 and 2 p.m. Do not fail to view this little craft. She is absolutely up-to-date. Cost of running, 6d per hour on full load. We guarantee the power and a little in reserve.
Manufactured in accordance with Lloyd's Survey, from 8 to 400 b.h.p., with special advantages.
NO WATER DRIP BATTERIES, CAMS, or GEARS to get out of order.
Specially suitable for every class of marine motor craft; and PUMPING, ELECTRIC LIGHTING, and INDUSTRIAL SETS.

The saving by the use of KEROSENE on this UNION ENGINE, as against BENZINE, will amount to nearly £10 a month, which is worthy of consideration.

This one is now sold to run in a Government Tourist Boat, and a large number of other Motors are now ordered and sold, and many more promised.

HAROLD BAUER.
MASTER PIANIST.
London "DAILY TELEGRAPH."
"A Pianist who can at least hold his own with the giants in the land—PADEREWSKI, D'ALBERT, and so forth—stands in little need of mere praise. A GREAT MUSICIAN, A GENUINE ARTIST, and AN AMAZING PIANIST—that is Mr. HAROLD BAUER."
SATURDAY, JUNE 27.

MONDAY, JUNE 29,
WEDNESDAY, JULY 1,
THURSDAY, JULY 2.
Messrs. J. and N. TAIT have the honour to announce the FIRST APPEARANCE in AUSTRALIA of one of the GREATEST MUSICIANS of the CENTURY, Mr.
HAROLD BAUER,
HAROLD BAUER,
MASTER PIANIST.
In presenting Mr. Bauer as their IMPORTANT MUSICAL ATTRACTION for 1914, Messrs. J. and N. TAIT have been guided in their selection of this famous artist by the following facts:—
HAROLD BAUER.
In the judgment of the WORLD'S CRITICS HAROLD BAUER has gained the foremost place in his art, at a time when the standard seems to have reached the limit of physical and intellectual possibilities.
HAROLD BAUER.
He has a reputation which is not confined to English-speaking countries, but a reputation which ranks with such music-makers as Liszt, Rubinstein, Paderewski, D'Albert, etc., in Germany, France, Switzerland, Russia, Denmark, Spain, Austria, Hungary, where reputations are won only by sterling merit and exceptional talent.
HAROLD BAUER.
His fame is worldwide, and his talent without limit, to quote the London "Daily Telegraph":—
"A GREAT MUSICIAN, A GENUINE ARTIST, and AN AMAZING PIANIST—that is Mr. HAROLD BAUER."
HAROLD BAUER.
It is, therefore, with every confidence that Messrs. J. and N. TAIT present Mr. BAUER as a successor to the MANY VISITING STARS it has been their honour to bring before the notice of their patrons, and as a continuance of the policy, which they feel safe in claiming has met with unqualified success, of presenting only ARTISTS of the VERY FRONT RANK and UNDOUBTED MERIT.

World's Criticisms:—

ENGLAND.

The Musical Times says:—"Where, let us ask, is there a fiddle enthusiast living who would not go into ecstacies at hearing Elman play the Tschaikowski Concerto as he alone can play it, or who can give us Wieniawski's Faust Fantaisie, Sarasate's Caprice Basque, or Saint-Saens' Rondo Capriccioso, with such ravishing tonal beauty and bewildering brilliancy? He sets one's mind in a whirl with his startling feats of virtuosity, which embrace every school of writing, every style and every period."

Also, The Charming Cantatrice, Mdlle. EVA GAUTIER, Mdlle. EVA GAUTIER, Mdlle. EVA GAUTIER, AT THE PIANO, Mr. PERCY KAHN, Mr. PERCY KAHN, Mr. PERCY KAHN, and GRAND ORCHESTRA, GRAND ORCHESTRA, GRAND ORCHESTRA, Of Seventy Players. Under the Direction of Mr. Joseph Bradley.

FRANCE.

Le Matin says:—The boy is a genius. This is no exaggerated statement, when considering in the past such players as Tartini, Viotti, Rode, Spohr, down to Ernst Vieuxtemps, Paganini, etc., while all great in their own way, all became famous through playing their OWN WORKS. Their interest was centred in their own style; but here is a boy when he appears amongst us, still in knickerbockers, plays, and continues to play, with increasing excellence all the important violin works ever written by the abovenamed players, plus every important modern work written up to date.

TWO YEARS RUNNING

THE VICTORIOUS (BRITISH) VAUXHALL

(THE MOST LUXURIOUS CAR, AND BEST VALUE OFFERING) has won the A.C.A. PETROL ECONOMY TEST to the Mountains.

LAST SATURDAY.—A 25-h.p. Vauxhall won with 63.9 ton miles per gallon, 31.97 miles per gallon, loaded up to 2.025 tons.

LAST YEAR.—A 20-h.p. Vauxhall won the same event.

VAUXHALL PERFORMANCES IN AUSTRALIA

MARCH 4th and 5th, 1910.—Won A.C.A. Reliability Touring Contest, Sydney to Goulburn and back via Nowra. Also won both the Hill Climb on Bald Hill and Petrol Test of this run.
JUNE, 1910.—First and second in A.C.A. Coogee Hill Climb and fastest times.
FEBRUARY, 1911.—Won A.C.A. Hill Climb on Artillery Hill and fastest time.
MARCH, 1912.—Won A.C.A. Hill Climb on Artillery Hill.
APRIL, 1912.—Dead-heated for first place in A.C.A. Reliability Touring Contest to Bathurst, via Jenolan Caves, won the Hill Climb up Mount Victoria Pass, and four Vauxhalls made the four fastest times. The Vauxhalls proved very economical in petrol.
AUGUST, 1912.—Second in A.C.A. Petrol Test.
OCTOBER, 1912.—Won Hill Climb in connection with A.C.A. Sydney-Bathurst-Orange-Yass Reliability Trial.
1912.—Won A.C.A. Prize for best record in all club events during the year.
MARCH, 1913.—3rd and 4th in Sydney-Melbourne Reliability Trial, 4th and 5th in the Hill Climb 24 and 23 miles per gallon respectively. The two Vauxhalls were the only two cars of one make to score full marks for Reliability, though other teams competed.
APRIL, 1913.—1st, 3rd, and 4th in the A.C.A. Hill Climb on Artillery Hill; the three Vauxhalls made the three fastest times.
AUGUST, 1913.—Won A.C.A. Petrol Economy Test Sydney to Mudgee, averaging 27.2 miles per gallon, weighing 22¾cwt loaded, climbing over 3000 feet to Mudgee.
SEPTEMBER, 1913.—2nd, 4th, and 5th in A.C.A. Reliability Touring Contest, Sydney-Mudgee-Singleton; 2nd, and 3rd in the Hill Climb up Hassan's Walls, where the two Vauxhalls made the two fastest times. The two Vauxhalls were 1st and 2nd in Petrol Economy Section of this trial, averaging over 25 miles to the gallon loaded to about 35cwt.
SEPTEMBER, 1913.—Won A. C. Victoria Hill Climb and established fastest time of day from amongst 107 competitors.
SEPTEMBER, 1913.—Won Qld. A. Club's Petrol Economy Test, averaging 23 miles per gallon loaded to 37cwt, on a very wet day.
NOVEMBER 3rd, 1913.—Won A.C.A. Novice Hill Climb on Artillery Hill, and made fastest time of the day.
NOVEMBER, 1913.—Won A.C.A. "all-in" Hill Climb on Artillery Hill, and made fastest time of the day.
DECEMBER, 1913.—Won 20-h.p. Class in A. C. Victoria Hill Climb, and made fastest time.
JANUARY, 1914.—In Interstate Reliability Touring Contest, Melbourne-Sydney, a two-year-old 20-h.p. Prince Henry Vauxhall performed very creditably against the very latest high-efficiency cars. The time of 20-h.p. Vauxhall was only beaten in the two Hill Climbs by a car of much more power, in the petrol section Vauxhall averaged over 26 miles per gallon.
MARCH, 1914.—A.C.A. Hill Climb on Artillery Hill, 20-h.p. P.H. Vauxhall won private owners' section under 20-h.p.; 25-h.p. Prince Henry Vauxhall second in private owners' section over 20-h.p.; 20-h.p. P.H. Vauxhall 3rd in Trade Section under 20-h.p. The three Vauxhalls scored fastest times of the day in the three classes.
MARCH, 1914.—A 25-h.p. Prince Henry type Vauxhall covered 594 miles, from Melbourne to Adelaide, in 14 hours 54 minutes, no less than 3 hours faster than the Express train takes. The average was 40 miles per hour, and the Petrol Consumption 20 miles per gallon. An average of 35 miles per hour was maintained for 90 miles through the notorious Coolong desert. For one stretch of 10 minutes an average of 82 miles per hour was recorded. This is the best and severest performance ever put up by car or man in Australia.
APRIL, 1914.—In the A.C.A. Reliability Touring Contest, Sydney to Goulburn and back via Macquarie Pass and Bolli Pass, a 20-h.p. Vauxhall scored full points for reliability section, and made fastest times in both Hill Climbs, beating several cars with much larger engine.
MAY, 1914.—Won Class "B" over 18-h.p. in Automobile Club of Victoria Hill Climb, also established best performance of the whole day from amongst 40 competitors, the two Vauxhalls competing won this event.
MAY 30th, 1914.—25-h.p. Prince Henry Vauxhall, weighing 2.025 tons, loaded, won A.C.A. Petrol Economy Test to Katoomba, averaging 31.57 miles per gallon, or 63.92 ton miles, from 19 competitors, this being the second year running that Vauxhalls have won this event.
Another 20-h.p. Vauxhall was sixth in this Test, with 46.06 ton miles, averaging 26.06 miles per gallon.

IF THIS IS NOT CONSISTENCY, WHAT IS? CUT IT OUT AND KEEP IT FOR REFERENCE.

A TRIAL RUN will convince you. A VAUXHALL CATALOGUE will educate you.

PALMER CORD TRIPLE-RIB TYRES.

THE BEST FOR WET AND GREASY ROADS.

PALMER CORD TYRES.

The heavy triple-tread originated in Palmer Cord Tyres. It has been widely imitated, but the tyres themselves are inimitable. The construction is based upon a layer of impregnated rubber cords, impervious to moisture and resistant of friction. These cords are looped round "Anchors" at the head which they strengthen wonderfully. The BEST tyres, in every way.

THE CAR
BUICK.
THAT GLIDES.

"The Car is going good as gold. I am glad I bought her, as there are other makes of Cars that if I had happened to have seen them first I am afraid that I should have make the mistake of buying in preference to the Buick. But, since I have had the chance of seeing them on the roads, I am glad that I was fortunate enough or lucky enough to have bought the Car I did. I can call it such, because when a person was like I was, that is, knew nothing about a Car, the elaboration on some of the present models is apt to cause him to buy; but when I compare my Car along with some I see, and the trouble they cause, I thank my lucky stars that I missed buying one of them."

G.W.K. 10-H.P. ALL-BRITISH LIGHT CAR.

READ THIS:—

Wandsworth Wool-scouring Works. Established 1905.
May 27, 1914.

Dear Sirs,—Just a few lines re the little G.W.K. which I purchased from you. It gives me the greatest pleasure to sit and pen you these few lines. I have given her one of the severest tests on roads hardly fit to take a bullock team over, and she has behaved wonderfully, making no fuss on the severest of hills. Never had a puncture, never put the pump on tyres since taking her off truck. She has been greatly admired in all the country towns where she has passed through. I can safely say I have done 40 to 41 miles to the gallon. I can do anything with her in traffic, being so simple to manage, which is a large consideration to me, only having one hand. My advice to any in search of a light, reliable, cheap car cannot do better than invest in a G.W.K. for reliable work and cheap upkeep. Wishing the firm every success in the sale of the wonderful little G.W.Ka. You are at liberty to make whatever use you think fit of this letter, or refer intending purchasers to me. Yours very faithfully,
(Signed), G. E. PARSONS.

METZ "22."
STILL ANOTHER WIN!!
SYDNEY TO KATOOMBA.
PETROL ECONOMY TEST.
36.6 MILES PER GALLON!!!

Economy is what you want, and economy is what you undoubtedly get when you buy a METZ "22" AT £190 NET, ready for road service. The Automobile Club of Australia held another contest last Saturday, and the SPECIAL PRIZE (kindly given by Mr. BOYD EDKINS) for the "MOST MILES PER GALLON OF PETROL" went to the competing METZ—and there were no less than 19 starters!

YOU CAN'T AFFORD TO IGNORE FACTS.

Hard, practical Road Results are what you must look for, not handsome catalogues bound up with silk ribbons. Facts and figures all about this highly-popular Car are yours for the asking, and you can have a beautifully finished 1914 Model METZ for the moderate sum of £190.

DON'T FORGET THIS—

The competing METZ was a 1913 model—the same car that in March, 1913, ran from Sydney to Melbourne, gaining full points for Reliability, and in January of this year, from Melbourne to Sydney, losing only 2 points for Reliability, and covering 31.5 miles per gallon of petrol—for how much?

TWENTY-TWO PENCE. (1/10.)

Remember also that Saturday's Run was against a cold westerly head wind, and that Katoomba is 3800 feet higher than Sydney—a long steady climb. As for the roads—same as usual. Vile!

COMPARISONS.

TWO APPLES MAY LOOK EXACTLY ALIKE ON THE OUTSIDE, BUT WHAT ABOUT THE CORE?

Two Cars to the unskilled motor car buyer may look exactly alike—and as far as concerns many cars they MAY be alike or JUST AS GOOD; but DOWN IN THE CORE there is an engine, on which depends the successful operation of the whole thing. Discriminating car buyers who know realise the vital importance of the engine and chassis, and will not accept without question any old thing, even though it may have an elaborately finished body. SO EXAMINE THE CORE OF THE CAR YOU ARE BUYING AND LOOK OUT FOR WORMS.

You can dig right down in the heart of the "Detroiter" and you will not find any defects. This "Detroiter" is fitted with full floating axle, Bosch magneto, detachable rims, and complete with electric lights and good equipment—the price of which is £330. If you are interested in a cheap car it will pay you to inspect the latest model "Detroiter," which has given excellent satisfaction.

ALTERATION IN PRICE.

Owing to the rise in the selling price of the "Singer" Runabout in England, due to it now costing us more to land. We therefore notify intending purchasers that after Saturday, the 6th of June, the price of this little car will be raised from £275 to £295.

"SINGER" RUNABOUT.

For months past every "Singer" has been booked to arrive. Last week we sold eight of them. This week three so far. According to registrations we are selling more "Singers" than all other baby cars combined in this State.

ANOTHER CAR THAT is booming is the "Oakland." This machine has exceeded our expectations. It has leaped ahead of all value for money cars. The "Delco" electric starting and lighting system is the only proven one. (It won the Dewar Trophy in England under observation by the R.A.C.) The five oversize tyres on interchangeable rims; the low-set, thickly-upholstered body with easy door and child's seat in tonneau; the khaki-coloured hood with envelope and curtains; the deep mudguards; the gear and brake levers on driver's right, all make the

the most up-to-date, best finished, most luxurious, and highest grade car selling around the 400 mark. We can show purchasers that we have sold these cars to some of the most influential men, and largest firms in the city and country. Results speak for themselves. The "Oakland" is good and looks it. DO YOU FEEL LIKE GIVING UP?

DOES your back ache constantly? Do you feel dull, miserable, and tired all the time? Do you wonder why ordinary daily duties wear you out? Do you have "blue" days and restless nights?

Kidney Sickness silently plays out the strongest person. A dull, draggy ache in the small of the back will tell on the healthiest man or woman. And if the Kidneys fail in their task of filtering uric acid poisons from the blood it leads to painful attacks of neuralgia, rheumatism, sciatica, gravel, headaches—to worrying attacks of dizziness, nervousness, heart palpitation, scanty, painful, and too frequent urination.

Don't neglect weak kidneys. There is danger of running gradually into dropsy, Bright's disease or diabetes. At the first sign of backache or disorders of the urine use Doan's Backache Kidney Pills. A remedy that has benefited your neighbour will benefit you.

DOAN'S BACKACHE KIDNEY PILLS

MAKE SYDNEY PEOPLE WELL.

FOUR YEARS CURED.

Mrs. C. Horne, Boot Store, 52 Abercrombie-street, city, says:—"For years I suffered from severe pains in my back and hips, caused through my kidneys being weak and disordered. Other symptoms were loss of appetite, sleepless nights, bad headaches, and a dull, tired feeling, which I could not get rid of. No one has any idea how I suffered, and I was beginning to think life was a misery to me, but I am thankful to say all that is changed now. I heard someone speaking of my wife of Doan's Backache Kidney Pills, so got a bottle to try them, and this wonderful remedy soon drove the pain out of my back, and restored my kidneys to a healthy state. I now feel a different woman, and I am very grateful to Doan's Backache Kidney Pills for my lasting cure. I have been perfectly well since these Pills cured me two years ago, and I have no fear of my ailment ever returning."

Mrs. Horne confirms the above two years later:—"I have had no trouble with my kidneys since Doan's Backache Kidney Pills restored them to a healthy state four years ago. I need say no more, the facts speak for themselves."

THREE YEARS CURED.

Mr. Joseph Abrahams, 25 Bourke-street, Redfern, Sydney, says:—"I have been suffering for over 40 years from kidney disease. I have had dreadful attacks, and have had to stay in bed for a fortnight at a time. I suffered intense agony with my back, and spent hundreds of pounds on doctors and medicines, but obtained no relief whatever. A friend of mine advised me to take Doan's Backache Kidney Pills, and I got some and commenced to use them, carefully following the directions. I did not have much faith in them, having tried so many remedies without success. However, Doan's Backache Kidney Pills proved the exception, they cured me. I cannot say enough in praise of these wonderful Pills. I hope many will benefit by my experience, and give Doan's Backache Kidney Pills a trial. Should any sufferer call on me, I shall be pleased to give fuller particulars of my thorough cure."

Three years later Mr. Abrahams says:—"Doan's Backache Kidney Pills cured me of backache and kidney trouble over three years ago, and I have been well ever since. Before I took this remedy I was a terrible sufferer with my back, but now I am absolutely free of every ache and pain."

TWO YEARS CURED.

Mrs. W. J. H. Richards, 16 Cook-road, Marrickville, says:—"For about seven years I was a martyr to kidney trouble, and only those who have suffered in this way have any idea what I went through. My back used to often ache so much that it felt like breaking, and every movement was positive torture. When the pains were very severe, it was impossible for me to stoop, and I was almost crippled. Other symptoms of kidney trouble were dropsical swellings on my legs and ankles, and disordered secretions. During the time I suffered I was treated by doctors and others, but they failed to do me any good. About six months ago Doan's Backache Kidney Pills were brought under my notice, so I made up my mind to give them a fair trial. After using the first bottle I realised I had at last got a medicine that was benefiting me, so I continued taking the Pills until I was quite cured, using in all six bottles."

Two years later Mrs. Richards confirms the above:—"I have had no trouble with my kidneys since Doan's Backache Kidney Pills cured me over two years ago—a fact that speaks well for this splendid remedy."

Get what you ask for. Get DOAN'S. Don't accept something "Just as good." All chemists sell DOAN'S BACKACHE KIDNEY PILLS, and will give you what you call for. Some may endeavour to substitute an article they make more profit on. Insist on getting the genuine, and save money and misery. Price, 2/9 per bottle, or will be posted on receipt of price by Foster McClellan Co., 76 Pitt-street, Sydney.

LIFE IN LONDON AND THEREABOUT.

(CONTRIBUTED BY SIR HENRY LUCY.)

Arthur Balfour and Bonar Law.—Sherlock Holmes on a New Track.—The Royal Academy.

WESTMINSTER, May Day.

Looking at Mr. Arthur Balfour on the rare occasions when he comes down to the House of Commons, and with obtrusive modesty finds a seat low down on the front Opposition bench, the quarter affected by minor ex-Ministers, I would give a silver penny for his thoughts. This week he has seen his successor in the Premiership persistently interrupted when answering questions. He has heard the leader of the Opposition deliberately accuse him of telling lies, an example quickly followed by one of his men below the gangway breaking in on the Premier's statement on a particular point by inquiring "Who tells lies on a Sunday?" Mr. Balfour shares in especial degree the reverence for the dignity of the House of Commons cherished by all members of old standing, to whichsoever side they may belong. Had he retained the Leadership from which he was shouldered by the roughs of the party the House would have been saved from the depth of degradation into which it has sunk. Being, after all, only human, he cannot be expected to regard without a slight tinge of malice a state of things directly traceable to feeble leadership.

The muddle in which the Unionist party find themselves, with Tariff Reform thrust to the background in order to adopt the dangerous policy of encouraging armed revolt in Ulster, is responsible for the unseemly scenes in the House. Bonar Law not only does not check his men by person l example. He encourages them in practices which the other night drew down upon one of them the unprecedented rebuke from the Chair that "If the hon. member wants to make himself offensive, he had better go out into the Lobby." Mr. Raymond Asquith, brilliant son of a great statesman, speaking at Derby the other day, summed up the leader of the Opposition in a sentence that will stick to him for life. Referring to his having on two separate occasions publicly called the Prime Minister a liar, and promising to do it a third time, Mr. Raymond Asquith said: "I have less scruples, therefore, than I might have had in saying what I think of Mr. Bonar Law. He is one of those unfortunate persons who contrive to be violent without being forcible, and vulgar without being funny, combining in distressing degree the uncivilised vocabulary of the schoolboy with the unbalanced temperament of the schoolgirl." As a characterisation, naturally bitter but closely accurate, this leaves nothing more to be said about Mr. Bonar Law.

Through the agency of Sherlock Holmes, Sir Arthur Conan Doyle has for many years entranced the reading public by a succession of cunningly-contrived, dramatically-worked-out detective stories. His latest: "The Case of Oscar Slater," if not absolutely the best of the series, stands in the first rank. It possesses the crowning attraction that whilst the others were fiction, this is a record of facts. Up to Christmas, 1908, Miss Gilchrist, an old lady of 82, lived on the first floor of a flat in a populous residential quarter of Glasgow. Her domestic establishment consisted of one servant, who had been with her three or four years. She spent a lonely life, having few acquaintances and fewer friends. Comparatively well off, she had a fancy for spending her surplus income upon jewellery, of which she amassed a collection of the value of £3000. The treasure was kept in a wardrobe, carefully hidden among her dresses. It was the custom of the servant maid to leave the house at 7 o'clock in the evening to buy a newspaper, an errand that withdrew her from the flat for a maximum period of 10 minutes.

On the night of December 21 she thus departed, leaving her mistress reading a magazine by the fire in the dining-room. Returning at the end of the 10 minutes and reentering the dining-room she found Miss Gilchrist lying upon the floor done to death by blows that smashed her skull and broke nearly every bone in her face. Police inquiries showed that of the jewels the murderer had taken with him only a crescent diamond brooch. On the evening of Christmas Day they hit upon what seemed a safe clue. Learning that a man named Oscar Slater had been trying to sell the pawn-ticket of a crescent diamond brooch, they proceeded to his lodgings, found he had fled, and was already on his way to New York. Thither he was followed, the police being accompanied by witnesses prepared to swear to the identity of a man seen leaving the flat on the night of the murder. It turned out that the diamond brooch had never been in the possession of Miss Gilchrist, being the property of Slater's mistress. As for identification, it was weak and contradictory. Nevertheless, by a majority of nine out of the jury of 15, Slater was found guilty and condemned to death, a sentence commuted to one of penal servitude.

The story is necessarily told here in briefest form. It is written in full in a sixpenny pamphlet, in which Sir Arthur Conan Doyle analyses the case with insight and skill not excelled by Sherlock Holmes, and comes to the conclusion that Slater has been the victim of a tragic miscarriage of justice. There being no Court of Criminal Appeal in Scotland the case is now being reheard in the privacy of his room by a Glasgow Sheriff, who will report to the Secretary for Scotland. The issue is awaited with profoundest interest.

When on Monday the doors of Burlington House are opened to the public for the one hundred and forty-sixth exhibition of the Royal Academy, they will not be startled by any supreme triumph of art. The best that can be said for the show is that it is not less striking than that of last year. It is, perhaps, more effective. Writing a day before the voice of the critics is heard in the daily papers, I fancy attention will be chiefly directed to a picture, not by an R.A., but by an associate. Mr. Cadogan Cowper presents a striking picture of Lucretia Borgia, reigning in the Vatican, in the absence of Pope Alexander VI. The place of honour in gallery No. 11 is given to this work. Its predominant feature is a marvellous mass of scarlet colour, glowing from the figures of the cardinals grouped round the throned Lucretia. In the principal gallery on the wall, where we were accustomed to discover majesty in various attitudes during King Edward's reign in unbecoming red is an excellent portrait of King George, by Arthur Cope. It has the advantage, that, being painted for the Royal Yacht Squadron, his Majesty is dressed in quiet but picturesque naval dress. As this seemed too simple for the hanging committee, they borrowed an odd suit worn by knights of the garter, and clumsily draped it over the frame. On the left, hung high, is a portrait of the lamented George Wyndham, arrayed in the charming light blue robe of a knight of St. Patrick. Painted with such materials as were accessible after his death, the portrait is excellent.

Sargent, having sworn off portrait-painting, happily returns to old ways with a portrait of Henry James. It was painted on commission by a number of personal friends, whose subscription has been acknowledged by a signed proof engraving. It is, to adapt a familiar phrase, an almost speaking portrait. Henry James's mouth is open just as if he were going to utter one of those precisely lucid sentences in conversation that are more easily followed than some of his printed reflections. Among other portraits are several members of the Cabinet. The best is that of Lord Haldane, from the brush of Arthur Cope, who has in the present academy reached the highest mark he has yet attained. A touch of satire, doubtless quite undesigned, is given to the picture by the attitude of the Lord Chancellor, who stands, hat in hand, with apologetic air, as if he were about to repeat his explanation of how he came to alter by a word the report in "Hansard" of his speech in the House of Lords on the famous "plot." John Burns stands for his portrait, which has been painted for the National Liberal Club. Mr. John Collier has done a portrait of Lord Morley for Lincoln College, Oxford. All painters, save one, who have tried their hand upon the portraiture of Lord Morley have found a singular difficulty in the subject. Mr. Collier gives us a picture of a man who looks painfully sad and feeble. [N.B.—Mr. James's is the portrait which has been injured by a suffragist.]

A WOMAN'S LETTER.

Dress of the Day.

LONDON W., May 1.

The shops have never shown such delightful washing raiment as they are doing this season. The art of printing cotton has never been carried to such a height. The fine washing voiles are as beautifully designed and printed as if they were ninons or crepes. Indeed, one has to look closely at them as they hang to see which is which.

The frock of the moment, when we are sure of warm weather, is a printed voile in some of the little floral designs. The skirts hang easily over a slip draped or pleated with a long tunic to match and bodice en suite. The bodice is of a blouse make, made up over a ninon which has lace and bands of ribbon which show through the outer bodice; the neck has folds of Brussels net against it. The back of the neck has a fine wired lace collar. This fashion has been brought about by the way in which the hair is dressed and the hats, which are tilted upwards behind, filled in with flowers and loops of ribbon. The flat hat is very much worn, mounted over a bandeau so as to raise the hat over the hair and eyes, which makes it more becoming.

Coats and skirts obtain as much as ever. Indeed, the three-piece costume is more in evidence than anything else. And in silk or soft satin there is no other way of making them. I have been studying the Parisian way of dressing and making clothes. Over there, on all sides, the very plainest and simplest cut is the one the French women prefer for themselves. They look carefully at the modes displayed in windows, or worn by mannequins, and disdainfully toss their heads at anything outre, or out of line. "Line" still governs the Parisian judgment. Those who have been over in Paris looking for models that will be useful here declare that it is wiser to bring back the neat, well-cut fine blue serge suit that is a perfect uniform with French women than any other. We are shown little frills and flouncings, things that will not keep in condition a month, whereas the French woman is ordering her navy blue taffeta suit, with its close-fitting line, and her long plain tunic. These tunics are the right thing to have. They sometimes make the tunic of net, dyed to match the dress, on which is placed a wide border of the taffetas silk. This gives the idea of tunic without adding to one's bulk. I did see one done in grey taffetas in a window in Sloane-street yesterday. It was quite successful. Of course, there are many other types of dress which women must have, because in this country they do so much and play so many games. And, curiously enough, it is this very thing that influences English fashion so intimately. The outdoor life has become a cult, girls never seem so happy as when they are dressing for a day's golf, or changing for a tennis club, while on Sundays, if you leave town before luncheon for a favoured country place within easy train distance of London, the carriages are full of happy-faced women and men, all in country clothes, some carrying golf clubs, others just walking sticks. They look so happy, and there is such an air of good comradeship about it all. Well, looking at the women from the point of chronicler of costumes, you find they have chosen well for the purpose in hand. Their boots or shoes are thick of sole, but well made, their skirts are trim and neat; palpably tailor-made. No wonder one sees so many beautifully-cut "sports" skirts in the windows—the black and white plaid, the neat grey tweed, blue serge, though serges are not quite in the running as sports skirts. They take dust, and look their best when worn with their own coats. The idea is to wear a wrap coat of three-quarter length, made very wide in the sleeves, loose in the waist, with a broad belt from the back seams, if you do not have this style of belt wide and dropped below the waist. Fresh blouses or shirts, sometimes of white silk or tussore, are tailor-made.

Motor Hats.

I often think English women look better than French women when you see them out in the mornings. I see a great many very short tailor-made coats with small basques worn with the three-piece costume. If the toilette is of the dressy nature these little bolero coats are made with very short basques, and are cut away from the figure in front, closing with one button, the reason for this being that the backs of the skirts or the tunics are puffed upwards. I cannot say that I think it a graceful fashion, and I am sure if the long tunic catches on here as it is doing in Paris the puffed paniers will disappear. We have got away from the fashions of the 'Eighties, and it is so easy to retire on the simple silhouette of the French modiste.

You see, it is not as if many women keep a maid of their own. If they did, dress might be a little more complicated, but the charm of a frill is its freshness, the little neck things must all be dainty and uncrushed. There was a time not so very far back when our skirts had frills or kiltings inside the hems. This was a maid's chief occupation; she had to replenish them when they got tossed or torn.

Here, again, the motor habit comes in. Women move about so much and take as little as possible with them for week-ends. There is no place for a maid, and what clothes you take must be of the simplest nature.

Hats follow suit; the ugly motor bonnet has given place to the small, compact hat, which, with its scarcity of trimming, clings like a limpet to the head. I remember once, when spending a summer in France, at Dunkirk, seeing a motor drive into the yard of the Hotel de Flandres, where I lodged, and two beautiful ladies dismounting, carrying upstairs a large round hat box. They doffed their motor head-wear, and in a few minutes emerged for dejeuner in lovely large Paris hats. With their wraps removed they might have come straight off the Boulevard des Capucines. Nowadays the little motor hat, or, indeed, the close-fitting small hat, is so becoming once the veil is removed that you require nothing better.

There is an effort being made to bring in more trimming on the hats. The plate-like shapes call for flowers and knots of ribbons, and they take some putting on. Milliners say that flowers will be overdone, and that all sorts of feathers will be better worn. We shall see. Certainly I never saw flowers more beautifully made than now, and the tiny posies of small flowers, snippets of lilacs, of forget-me-nots, of primulas, and bunches of mignonette all woven into a flat, round posy are most fascinating.

The Newest Roses.

Out at Chesham last Sunday, a dream of a day, spent entirely out of doors, amidst primulas, auriculas, tulips, and forget-me-nots, the more youthful members of the party amused themselves by making up these posies of real flowers. Some of them were quite beautiful. I still have my posy of forget-me-nots, with a pink daisy in the centre, a wreath of little green leaves peeping out round the edge.

I have since I last wrote attended the spring rose show of the Horticultural Society, and there saw many of the newest roses and ramblers. It was a wonderful show for novelty and beauty. Many of the new roses are now launched, and one can buy them. The "Daily Mail" rose was blooming well. It is a wonderful shade of copper, and not a very large hybrid tea; indeed, I think the newer strains do not as yet run large. Colour, and in some instances perfume, are what is being essayed. But I saw many of my favourites now on the market, the "Sunburst" and some really wonderful red roses; I mean almost vermilion roses, the "Richmond" and the "Liberty," also some pink roses smelling as sweet as the roses of one's youth. You were asked to note the scent. Where culture seems to go ahead is in the size of the hybrid tea petals and their wonderful texture. Some of them looked as if the petals had been made out of thick kid. The blending of colours was also remarkable. Apricot to cream, pink to yellow, and blush roses turning almost to white. In the pure white, "Frau Karl Druschki" holds her own. In yellow I think "Marechal Niel," though it is not a new rose, is still unsurpassed. I remember in Australia as a child always being struck with the wonderful colour, quality, and texture of the Cloth of Gold rose. Do you grow it now? Our gardens used to be full of wonderful large pink roses with a glorious perfume. And, after all, it is perfume that is the proudest attribute of the queen of flowers.

Ramblers are making great strides. I saw a lovely full flowering white rambler with a yellow centre, called "White Tausendschon." It is of the quality and appearance of "Dorothy Perkins," only in white, with perhaps many more petals to a bloom. "Hiawathas" and "Minehahas" and yellow "Dorothy Perkins," as well as pink ones, were in bloom; but there were far more than I have room to mention. It was a lovely sight taking it altogether. People are so eager and gardening is such a cult that I was not surprised at the crowded state of the hall. I ought to say that I saw a purple rose exhibited, the "Mawley," quite a rich, well-coloured bloom. I suppose this will be marketable in a couple of years. That and the new reds were the features of the show.

PARIS SKETCHES.

(BY "PETER BLOUNT.")

SOME ART, AND SOME MUSIC.

LONDON, May 1.

The lesser Salon—that of the Beaux Arts—provides for Parisian art-lovers not only the interest that is in itself, but the interest-in-advance also of the greater salon which succeeds it a few weeks later. In the greater salon, just now opening, 5000 works are on exhibit. The Salon des Beaux Arts would not total half that number. An occasion, nevertheless, and one that drew a distinguished company to the "Vernissage"—which is the private view day of a Parisian picture-show; and it secured thereafter to the Champs Elysees and its Grand Palais—what a surrounding for an art exhibition—a steady stream of patronage. Nothing of freakishness in this most recent of Paris salons, nothing more definitely futurist, at any rate, than an occasional riotous intermingling of garish colour for the sake of some or other theory. For the most part, indeed, a quietly decorous expression of art outlook. There is not space for detail, and in any event most of the names of the Parisian contributors to the salon would be unfamiliar. It is enough to say that the impression one had from the exhibits as a whole was one of grace and lightness and airiness. The sunshine of France does get into their pictures, and so does the intuitive French feeling for line and form. Even in the largest canvases the effect was apparent of a quite un-British clearness of atmosphere, as of light unashamed, as well as a certain finish of design that seemed never to be in doubt, whatever the imaginative reach of the picture. A great deal, too, of dainty painting, figure subjects by far the more numerous, and the nude once more, as always, a dominating influence. A feature of the painting exhibit was the room devoted to works by the recently deceased La Touche, a man held in high honour, and well enough discovered as deserving it by these many canvases of beauty and artistic accomplishment. In the sculpture section, the absence of Rodin's work made, necessarily, a difference. But even though it was deprived for once of that master-hand, the Beaux Arts sculpture was certain of distinction. In that regard France is still eminent and still highly accomplished, and from the colossal bronzes down to the tiny statuettes that seemed to have been carved in a single graceful sweep the salon sculpture was a delight.

There are other aspects of art to be caught flying, and at high levels, during even a few days in Paris. At the Opera were "Faust" and "Parsifal," and at the Opera Comique "Tosca," "Carmen," and "Madame Butterfly." At both theatres opera is sung all the year round on alternate nights and frequent matinees. Both, of course, are State theatres, and every year's balance-sheet—at the Opera, if not at the Opera Comique—shows a deficit. But they remain, with the Comedie Francaise, and the Odeon Theatre, a monumental State enterprise in art, and their distinction of performance, and their fame, are the State's reward. I preferred to hear the typical French operas, sung, too, in the places where they were first launched upon the musical world. "Faust" was beautifully done, alike as to production, singing, and orchestral accompaniment, and, by way of divertissement, an elaborate ballet carried the evening well beyond midnight. "Carmen" was first produced at the Opera Comique, and failed. But it has succeeded well enough since then, and I was fortunate in hearing it done with all the peculiar distinction that still belongs to that great art theatre. They retain, there, the spoken dialogue between the numbers, and, often as I had heard the opera, I had never heard that. But there are other things to be heard in few places outside the Opera Comique, and one of them is such an ensemble of fine artists. Another of them is a youthful Carmen such as the Mlle. Davelli whom I heard there—a young and slender and graceful Carmen—think of it! and an artist whose beautiful contralto filled the theatre without hint of effort, and who, in the whole of her four acts of singing, did not exploit her chest tones beyond two notes in any scale. Beautiful singing—but the singing of the Opera Comique is all like that. No one seems to be trying to make an effect, and the effect is electrical. It is a fine accomplishment, this easy effortless polished singing of the French.

St. Sulpice is not the most accessible of Paris churches, but it is worth its journey from the centre of things. Especially is it worth its journey on an Easter Sunday morning, when High Mass is certain to be elaborately musical, and M. Widor is certain to be in his place at one of the finest organs in the world. To hear M. Widor, rather than to hear High Mass, I went to St. Sulpice. I am glad I did so. For I had there, from that master hand, some of the finest organ-playing I have ever had. Widor, is, of course, a famous man, and perhaps the greatest of living organists. In Sydney, for more than one reason, we are inclined to think of organ music in respect of the Town Hall, and of the organ as a concert instrument. We lose a good deal if by that fact we discount the church use of the organ. All over Europe, at any rate, it is the church use of their magnificent organs which establishes these instruments in the hearts of the people, and their concert use and their concert esteem are small things by comparison. Nor is that to be wondered at with the churches, such noble structures as they are, and the organs so consistently great instruments. Sometimes, too, there is a great player of the organ in these churches. In the case, at any rate, of M. Widor there is a very great player, and it was not surprising to hear him make of the organ of St. Sulpice, and his accompaniment of High Mass, a thing of moving splendour. For myself, at all events, who have heard much organ music, and am not easily to be deceived by bogus organ "effects," I stood thrilled under it. Especially at the end, when Widor gathered up the forces of the great instrument and sent his music and himself soaring in a long improvisation, with the organ built up climax by climax, to a masterful elaboration of many themes—especially then, with the vast interior of St. Sulpice a resounding thunder of ordered sound—I, and the crowds who stood with me there surely no less than I, heard the organ and organ-playing at its noblest.

I had hoped, by reason of a difference in the hour of service, to hear High Mass also at the Madeleine on Easter Monday. But when I reached it I found the great portico and the whole breadth of the approach to it thronged by crowds unable to gain admittance. The Madeleine is an immense church, but it was filled to overflowing. I reached the doors in time to hear the end of the mass, to discover the soloists of opera quality, and the boys badly trained, and to hear also, another organ improvisation, not quite of the quality of Widor's, but fine enough, and of sufficient grandeur again to establish the splendid function of the organ as accessory to the services of the church. Incidentally, also, one effect of listening to these French organists, with their brilliancy, and their sparkle, and the free play of their enthusiasm, is to reveal the British organist as, by comparison, a somewhat dull exponent of his art. Perhaps, though, like most things British as compared with most things French, he is, for a Briton, more comfortable to live with.

Though you may go to High Mass as often as you please in Paris on a Sunday morning, you are not likely to go to church any more on that day. It is not done. On Sunday afternoon Paris is en fete. It is the great matinee day at the theatres. And Sunday night in Paris continues the story of Paris's Sunday afternoon, with the added embellishment of the lights and the crowds on the boulevards. Personally, I went to hear "La Mascotte" on Sunday night. I had heard of it as to be found in Montmartre, at the Theatre Apollo. Not often is "La Mascotte" to be heard anywhere nowadays, and I was a little doubtful of it as promised in an out-of-the-way place like the Apollo. But I need not have been. It was done delightfully. Its music was as gaily sparkling as ever, and Bettina, the rough-and-ready one, and Fiametta, and the rest, took the stage, and sang the airs, and executed innumerable dances, with little less of polish, and little less of elegance, and little less of charm up there in Montmartre than would have been vouchsafed "La Mascotte" in a theatre of the Boulevards. But Montmartre has its own pride to consider, and its own varied reputation to maintain. It does not let Paris down.

THE GREAT RIVERS.

SOUTH AUSTRALIA'S INQUIRY.

VI.

THE WONDER WORKERS.

(FROM OUR SPECIAL COMMISSIONER LATELY WITH THE SOUTH AUSTRALIAN COMMITTEE.)

TAILEM BEND, May 29.

The engine-driver did not know what we were waiting for. Neither did the guard. The line ran out of sight in front, and out of sight behind; that is, it rose and dipped over the long, low billows of land till it heaved over a billow bigger than the rest and disappeared on the other side of it. The "station" was a platform three yards by six, sustaining two bags of chaff. So we got out upon the station, and sat upon the chaffbags, and asked the stationmaster about the delay.

He did not know either. It was impossible for him to tell. The other train was somewhere on the road in front, and we could not move out until it came in. Perhaps it had run off the line, and its staff was out there somewhere in the mallee trying to jack it on again. Or, perhaps, it had merely come to a hill too steep for it, and had tried it once or twice, and then decided to go on with half the train and come back later for the other half. Or it might be just leaving the terminus at Tailem Bend, or, perhaps, going back there. It might be doing any one of these things—a mile or 10 miles or 30 miles away. The stationmaster could not tell. He could not see the train on account of the mallee; and the authorities had not given him any other way of finding out where it was—a telephone line, for instance, or a telegraph. So he could only sit and guess. He knew it was somewhere in the mallee, and would come in some time, unless it had gone back or been crumpled up, in which case another train would, I suppose, some day come in instead of it.

WE NEVER FOUND OUT.

We never found out in the end. After about an hour and a half we saw an angry smoke hurrying over the mallee. The other train came in with 26 trucks, and our engine-driver did not leave us time to inquire. He was late for his connection at Tailem Bend, and as he could not wire ahead to say so, the only way was to hurry on and take the message himself.

But probably those 26 trucks were the explanation. The South Australian Government in the last two years has been rushing on new railways at a tremendous rate to open up what South Australians consider the promising wheat lands in the mallee country between the Murray and the Victorian border and the sea. The railways were only proposed in October, 1912, and two of them are finished and two are in hand. There were 3,113,000 acres to be opened up, and South Australia was determined to open it with railways. So long as it got railways there it did not much care what sort of railways. Being a comparatively poor State, it fixed a limit of £3000 per mile, and said to the Works Department: "Build us the best sort of railway you can at that price. If you cannot take it out of the permanent way you must take it out of the earth works." So the Works Department took it out in the cuttings and embankments and telephones, and cleared a way through the mallee ridges and laid the lines over the top of them like a sort of switchback, with a grade of one in 45. And that is probably why the train with 26 trucks was late. They have a rule, limiting these trains to 20 miles an hour, but it scarcely seems necessary—over most of the way the trains limit themselves. They are expensive to run, these rough and ready lines, and a doubtful saving. But they were built in a time of tight money, when but for the £3000 limit, they would not have been built at all. And the main thing is they have done their work.

AN ASTONISHING WORK.

One can only say that this work is simply astonishing to a New South Welshman. The whole of this 3,000,000 acres of wheat country is land which we, in New South Wales, if the South Australian lesson were not slowly sinking into our heads, would consider wholly useless. Here they are rushing it. The Paringa line has not been opened for a year, and yet thousands of acres are being cleared along it. You can see from the train the first wheat crop springing amongst the mallee roots from country some of which looks like a poor half-desert of red or even white sand.

What struck me more than anything on the trip with the South Australian committee, which has been investigating the production and trade of the three big rivers, was the way in which our ideas of rainfall differed. When we were crossing the plain about Narrandera, with its 17-inch rainfall, what struck me was the enormous recent progress of wheat growing through the edge of this comparatively dry country. What astonished them was that the country had been so little used. "Soil like that with a rainfall of 16 or 17 inches," they would say. "—no wonder some of our South Australian farmers rushed it when they came across and saw it!" Farther west, out by Bairnsdale and Euston, where the western scrub grows on the red sandhills and the inhabitants look grim, when they speak about the rainfall. I more than once heard a member of the committee say: "Oh, you won't find mulga here—you only get that with a poor rainfall, and these trees here mean a good rainfall, 11 or 12 inches. I should say." Speaking of wheatgrowing, another of them said to a Sydney witness: "We have found in South Australia that it is dangerous to put settlers on less than nine inches of rainfall."

None of the country which they are now opening up in this corner of the State appears to have a rainfall of over 14 or 15 inches, and the records at the different centres in it average 10 inches, 10.83 inches, 8.90 inches, 10.20, 10.10, 10.25, 11.27, 8.87, 9.24, 9.15, and 10.78 inches. At Pinnaroo and Lameroo, where wheat farming in the mallee has been extraordinarily successful, the average was higher—17 inches and 16.3 respectively. South Australians do not expect so much of the new areas with their average of 10 or 11 inches. Until the last two years, when the rainfall heavily declined, the run of seasons had been excellent, and the country is only now beginning to feel the test of really dry years. They are taking it up all the same. There is a great deal of this country along the rivers. The Western Land Board of New South Wales is wondering whether large areas where wheat was previously unthought of cannot be opened near the rivers in New South Wales also.

VERY DIFFERENT.

If so, New South Wales will have to use methods which are scarcely even heard of in a good part of our farming districts. South Australian farming is something very different from the traditional methods of New South Wales. In mallee country they roll down the mallee, burn it after the summer, and then sow amongst the stumps. For the first three years or so, whilst the mallee roots are still thick in the ground, they have to put in a crop every year. But by that time the stump-jump machinery will have dragged most of the roots out of the ground, and from then onwards, once there is no fear of the mallee growing again, they never sow more than a third of their land with wheat in any one year. What was wheat last year is left under stubble and grass, or sometimes sown with oats. The remaining third, last year's grass and stubble, is fallowed. Every rain that falls on the fallow is hurriedly imprisoned in the soil by breaking up the surface and preventing the formation of the tiny channels and capillaries through which the rainfall otherwise evaporates. They do this whenever rain falls right up to when the wheat is drilled in, together with superphosphate. Generally a little under a hundredweight of manure goes to the acre. With those methods they have obtained, on occasions, 22 bushels to the acre with a 12-inch rainfall.

TO ONE MAN.

The consequence is that much of this mallee land, still overrun with wild dogs and scarcely possible for sheep, has sprung suddenly to a value of £3 per acre. There are cases of selectors who a few years ago were struggling to keep their necks above water with 10,000-acre holdings taken up at 2/6 an acre, and who are now capitalists worth £30,000. Working farmers in different parts of South Australia, many hard-working Germans, have bought themselves motor cars, and even retired to the towns. There are farmers in Yorke's Peninsula who now own two or three motor cars each. And yet not a tenth of the wheat in South Australia is or has been grown on a rainfall of 20 inches.

The farmer in South Australia attributes this almost entirely to one man. I have heard him spoken of in South Australia almost as the British navy used to speak of Sir Arthur Wilson. That man is Professor Lowrie. What Professor Lowrie himself attributes it to I learned from himself yesterday. But that deserves another article.

THE SEA TRAGEDY.

References in all the Church journals are made to the loss of the Empress of Ireland. The London "War Cry" of May 2, anticipating the International Salvation Army Congress, thus refers to the Canadian contingent:—"The Canadian party will consist of 400 persons, including Commissioner and Mrs. Rees. In addition to representatives of all departments of work, there will be a party of Newfoundlanders, representing the sealers, codfishers, and miners of Britain's oldest colony; a group of those picturesque sons of the forest, Red Indians; and a party of cowboys from the 'wild and woolly' west, 20 all told. There will be the Territorial Staff Band from headquarters, and the Peterborough Corps Band. They are due to arrive on June 5 and 9."

When the news of the disaster reached Australia, Colonel Palstra cabled from Melbourne the deepest and tenderest sympathy of the Australian Salvation Army, and Colonel Rees cabled from Toronto:—"Canadian officers greatly appreciate your message of sympathy. Deeply touched. One hundred and thirty officers and soldiers have been lost—Commissioner and Mrs. Rees, Colonel and Mrs. Maidment, Brigadier Scott-Potter, Brigadier H. W. Walker, Major and Mrs. Creighton, Major and Mrs. Findlay, Mrs. Major Simcoe, also 30 other officers, with Brigadier Hunter (from India). Ask Australia to cry to God for comfort and counsel on behalf of bereaved and Canadian field."

General Bramwell Booth, on hearing of the tragedy, said:—"It is with deep regret we announce the heavy loss of Canadian officers, bandsmen, and soldiers in the terrible disaster of the Empress of Ireland. The contingent numbered 130 officers, including Commissioner and Mrs. Rees, Colonel and Mrs. Maidment, Brigadiers Scott-Potter and Walker, Major and Mrs. Findlay, Major and Mrs. Creighton, Major Mrs. Simcoe, and many other officers, and the Canadian Staff Band, also Brigadier and Mrs. Hunter, on furlough from India. Advices report only 21 saved; all officers named drowned. Major Frank Morris swam with Commissioner Rees on his back till exhausted. The General mourns the loss of Commissioner Rees, one of his most devoted leaders, and the body of men and women who worthily upheld the high traditions of the Army. The whole Army must pray for the bereaved and for our work in Canada, and that our loss may minister to the glory of God and the advancement of the great work to which the lives of our comrades were dedicated."

Subsequently the General said:—"My heart is stricken with grief in the great loss and sorrow which has fallen upon the Army in this appalling disaster. Our comrades were so true, so brave, so devoted, that their places will be so difficult to fill. I have sent Commissioner M'Kie to stand by our Canadian forces, and I call for the prayers of the whole Army world for all the bereaved. Living or dying, we must go forward."

ST. PATRICK'S COLLEGE.

Elaborate preparations are being made for the celebration of the silver jubilee of St. Patrick's College, Manly, which was blessed and opened with much ceremony by the late Cardinal on January 23, 1889. Architecturally, St. Patrick's is probably the finest college in Australasia, its magnificent surroundings and elevated position making it a well-known land mark. To Cardinal Moran is due the credit of establishing the college, a work which entailed an outlay of £70,000. The grounds on which the college stands were granted by the Crown in 1859 as a site for the episcopal residence for the Catholic Archbishop of Sydney, but curiously enough the 30 acres of land were not claimed till 1884, on the suggestion of Mr. W. B. Dalley to Cardinal Moran, who decided to build the college. The corner stone was laid on November 19, 1885, and opened four years later. The first rector was Monsignor Verdon—now Bishop of Dunedin. The present rector is the Very Rev. Dr. M'Dermott. The celebrations will open to-morrow with solemn High Mass at St. Mary's Cathedral, and Archbishop Kelly will preside, the celebrant being the Right. Rev. Monsignor Brodie, V.G., of Auckland, and the preacher, the Rt. Rev. Monsignor M'Guire, V.G., of Lismore, both being ex-students of St. Patrick's. The festivities will be continued during the week, concluding with the Grand Corpus Christi procession at the college on Sunday next.

The hours I spent with thee, dear heart,
Can never be forgot;
But still you thought it best to part,
Although I thought 'twas not.
And though I suffered horribly,
No lover could be truer;
Take back my heart, I've cured my cold,
With Woods' Great Peppermint Cure.—Advt.

After all, he argued with himself, in six months very much might happen. Naiada possessed a butterfly nature, and sorrow with her must be but little enduring. A girl who has flirted with half a dozen men is not likely—in spite of protests uttered under stress of emotion—to remain constant for long. Soon, oh, certainly very soon, she would find consolation in a new love, and of her own accord she would be anxious to set him free.

Besides, it was not likely that she would stay on for long at the "Pike House." She usually came in the absence of Mr. Lindley, and he did not propose to stay away many days. It would be a case of out of sight out of mind—and even if it were not so, it would be easier, far easier, to write to Naiada when the necessity arose—if it should arise—than to hurt her now.

Like an unskilled surgeon, he spared the deep use of the knife, little reckoning that thus he failed to touch the heart of the disease, and only left wounds which would heal ill if they healed at all.

She had drawn the ring over the joint of her finger—it reminded him of the day when, in London, she had done the same thing.

"Will you take it back?" she faltered.

"Keep it, Undine," he said, making use, half unconsciously, of her pet name. "At any rate, keep it till we see how things work out. I promise you, I give you my word, that for the next six months I shall speak not a syllable of love to Eva or to anyone. That is a bargain between us."

She slipped the ring back. "Very well," she agreed, but her tone was sad, and for a moment it shot into Clive's brain that he was not acting well either for her sake or his own.

However, he had chosen his course, and could not go back upon it now.

"You see, Naiada," he explained—blundering further into the dangerous quicksands of equivocation, "I have no reason whatever for believing that Eva cares for me—I've admitted my own love, but that doesn't say that it's returned, does it? Eva may be awfully angry when she finds out that I'm not her cousin Arthur after all—that I've been tricking her all this time. She may refuse to have any more to do with me."

So he spoke—but in his heart he knew that Eva cared. And, Naiada, fixing her dark eyes upon his—those eyes of hers that had in them the mystery of deep silent pools—read the truth, and knew that there was no hope for her in the six months' reprieve.

But of this she gave no sign. She adopted a lighter tone, and she allowed Clive to conduct her a portion of the way home. They kissed at parting—but Naiada's lips were cold.

Meanwhile Herbert Goddard had reached the river on his way home. And here, on the bank, he threw himself down, out of breath, for having begun to run when he was in the wood, he had continued to do so, without knowing why, although he was already far away from any possibility of pursuit.

"She loves him—she loves him!" he muttered, fiercely seizing a tall nettle that was growing close by, and tearing it to shreds, oblivious that it was a nettle, and that it blistered his hand.

"I heard it from her own lips," he continued, "and what was it she said besides? 'As long as you live—as long as the same earth holds us both'—it was then that the infernal twig cracked and betrayed me—so I heard no more. But that's enough—enough. As long as he lives!"

Goddard uttered a hard laugh. "And his life is threatened, is it?—though he doesn't think there's anything in it! But, supposing—supposing there should be!"

A clump of bushes hard by, upon which his eyes were unconsciously fixed, seemed to take on the appearance of an ugly human face with curling horns, a goat's beard and cruel projecting teeth, and the face was grinning at him, grinning with silent mirth.

"As long as he lives—," repeated Goddard. He could almost hear laughter in response.

CHAPTER XXVI.

Clive occupied himself that afternoon, after having partaken of a late lunch for which he had but little appetite, by walking over to the post-office at Deepmere Village, to see if there were any letters for him.

There was a telegram, and he opened it with a certain feeling of anxiety, and anxiety which was fully justified when he found it to be from Murray Brooke.

The detective had been taken ill, and could not come to Deepmere. If the matter were urgent, as Clive's original letter had implied, Brooke suggested that he should send a substitute, a capable man, and one upon whom Clive might rely. The substitute could easily leave London upon the following morning.

But this suggestion did not appeal to Clive at all. It was the companionship of his old friend that he desired more than anything else, and the prospect of having to entertain a stranger instead was by no means pleasant.

Besides, it was several days now since the attack had been made upon him in the train, and the natural alarm caused by the event was wearing off a little. Then, too, a suggestion which Naiada had casually made that morning had impressed him more than he cared to admit at the time. Seriously regarded, his position at Deepmere was, to say the least of it, equivocal, and his explanation of it, if he were called upon to explain, might not readily be received. Indeed, when he came to think it over, he was not at all sure that he would not, himself, receive such an explanation with derision if it was offered him by somebody else. He had trusted Mr. Lindley blindly—he did not in the least distrust him now—but other people might not have the same confidence. They might very well, between them, be playing a deep game to deprive Arthur Darrell of his inheritance.

Anyhow, it would not be very agreeable to admit so invidious a position to a detective, and really he was not altogether sorry now that Murray Brooke had failed him, for the latter would certainly have regarded the position with suspicious eyes.

So Clive wired back his regret that his friend should be ill, and explained that there was no necessity for a substitute to be sent. After which he returned to the Castle slowly, and tried to occupy himself for the rest of the afternoon with the plans for the new garden that was being laid out between the Castle and the river.

That night, and the whole of the next day, which happened to be Sunday, passed without any incident whatever as far as he was concerned. He had some thoughts of paying a visit to the Pike House, but gave up the idea, as, in spite of the supposed relationship, he did not care to force his company unduly. Besides, truth to tell, he was a little afraid of meeting Eva just yet under the watchful eyes of Naiada. Poor little Undine had been hurt enough already.

He wondered a little that Goddard did not stroll over to see him. He had not the remotest idea that the latter was in any way suspicious of him. He was sorry for the young zoologist, and secretly hoped that Naiada would be kind to him. What a solution that would be to the situation!

He wondered if they were, by any chance, meeting that day. It was more than likely. Should he question Goddard on the subject when they met, or would it be wiser to refrain? Perhaps he would give the information of his own accord.

Early in the afternoon of the following day Goddard appeared. He was the bearer of a message from Mr. Richard Hartridge, who expressed a wish to see Mr. Darrell at tea that afternoon if he cared to walk or drive over to Swaneham Court. Clive accepted readily.

After the two young men had been talking a little while, Clive could not help thinking that there was a certain change, subtle and difficult to analyse, in Goddard's manner. He was as friendly and exuberant as ever—he laughed even more easily and at more trifling things—but now and again, Clive would get the impression that he was holding something back, that he was not being perfectly frank, and that the frequent laughter was occasionally strained.

But this, Clive imagined, was doubtless a mere delusion, for Naiada would certainly not have said a word to implicate him, and what other possible reason could there be for a change of attitude?

"It's my own guilty conscience, I expect," Clive concluded.

"I think the idea of a walk is quite a good one," he remarked after a while. "Let's go to Swaneham on foot. I can assure you I'm beginning to feel that I badly want exercise. The friend whom I was expecting hasn't come, you know, so I'm thrown back upon my own resources. I daresay it will be a bit better when I have quite settled down, but for the moment I don't mind confessing that I find things dull."

Goddard smiled—certainly a genuine smile. "I've stood it for a long time," he observed, "stood my own society, I mean; for, as you know, not a soul ever comes near Swaneham Court. But one gets accustomed to it. There's some good rough shooting—heaps of rabbits—and, I happen to be fond of fishing. By the way——" he regarded Clive with a curious expression upon his face—"have you tried the Mere yet? I think I told you there are some good trout to be found there."

Clive replied that he had not done any fishing yet, but was quite ready to begin.

"I was by the Mere yesterday—trespassing on your property, Darrell," Goddard resumed. He spoke with a rather curious intonation, rather as if he were forcing himself to a confidence.

"Yes?" Clive pricked up his ears.

"I met Miss Gale—Naiada. It was by arrangement," Goddard paused.

"Yes?" prompted Clive again.

"She was very sweet to me. Something has occurred—but she is not exactly engaged to anyone else. She has asked me to wait six months."

Clive bit his lip, to prevent a smile. So Naiada was playing, and perhaps wisely, the game that he himself had taught her—the game of procrastination.

"If she doesn't marry me, I don't think she'll marry anyone else," said Goddard. There was a significance in his tone which, however, escaped his hearer.

It was with mixed feelings that Clive approached the great solidly-built Georgian house that would in all probability be his one day.

He was curious to see the inside of it, to judge for himself the state of disrepair into which, he understood, it had been allowed to lapse; he was curious, too, to see that strange old man, his uncle Richard, of whose eccentricities he had heard so much, but whose melancholy story had always rather touched him and made him feel that Richard Hartridge had been badly dealt with by destiny and the world.

At the same time it was not particularly pleasant to be paying his first visit upon his uncle in the guise of somebody else—deceiving him, in fact. His newly-awakened scruples over the part which he was playing were troubling him a little. Mr. Richard Hartridge had never shown himself well disposed towards his nephew, and what would his feelings be when he learnt, as in all probability he must learn, that Clive had been masquerading at Deepmere Castle as Arthur Darrell?

However, there was nothing to be done—it was too late to think of going back now. As Arthur Darrell he must make his first appearance at Swaneham Court.

He had enjoyed the walk from Deepmere. It had taken him and his companion for some little distance along the side of the swift and narrow river which divided the two estates, until, close to the confines of them both, the footbridge was reached, after which the road lay up a steep and hilly lane, with tall hedges on either side, just bursting into bud, and here and there high grassy banks, from which gnarled trunks of trees protruded, taking on quaint shapes like writhing serpents. Peeping out among these were early wild flowers in profusion, great golden masses of the Lesser Celandine, the lighter yellow of the primrose, and the delicate white of the wood anemone.

From the lane they diverged into a narrow path that led through the wood almost to the door of Swaneham Court.

Herbert Goddard chatted freely as they walked—nor was there any apparent strain about his conversation. It would not do to let Clive suspect that he had found out things—what he had to do must be accomplished stealthily and by craft—so that Naiada above all, should never guess. It was a new role, and difficult to maintain, for there was little guile in him by nature—it was not his instinct to hurt anyone, and he would have much sooner had his quarrel out in a straightforward way—but this was impossible if he wanted to win Naiada. Men of this type may be the most dangerous of all when some strong passion impels them.

He had a lot to say about his puff-adders. They had arrived from South Africa. He had been to Sandmere station to fetch them that morning. They had borne the journey well, and appeared to be in most excellent condition. So he had not a word for the beauties of the wayside, but discussed puff-adders, with particular reference to their intensely poisonous qualities, the best part of the way from Deepmere to Swaneham.

TREES AND TREE-LOVERS.

This week there have been held in Sydney two meetings, so different in their spirit that their juxtaposition is actually comical. On Monday night, at the Royal Society's rooms, there was held the inaugural meeting of the New South Wales branch of the Australian Forest League, a society which has been formed for the purpose of protecting and preserving Australian trees and timber. On the following night, at the meeting of the City Council, our aldermen decided upon the wholesale massacre of a group of noble Australian trees. The second meeting might almost have been purposely held as a glaring example of the need of the first. It is only fair to those aldermen who opposed the decision, to say that the destruction of the Macquarie-street figtrees was determined by a small majority of three; but the fact remains that 12 men, who have been elected by their fellow-citizens to represent them in the government of the city, have shown their utter ignorance of one of the first essentials of city beautification, not to mention the utter disregard of the expressed wishes of hundreds of citizens. It is no wonder that expressions of disgust are heard on every side. And it is only by remembering, in contradistinction the formation of the Forest League, that one keeps ones hope of Australians ever rising to an understanding and appreciation of the beauties of their native land.

For the Forest League is composed of a number of men and women who, looking ahead, realise that the time has come for some urgent and active steps to be taken to preserve our forest trees. They know that by the reckless destruction of the bush, the land is suffering in innumerable ways. They know that the water supply suffers as the trees diminish; that the health of the community is affected by their absence; they are awake to the economical value of the timber, as well as to the beauty of the trees, whether as solitary specimens or in landscape; and, because they realise that in our ignorance we are throwing away a precious heritage, they are banded together to save the forests, while there is yet time, and before Australia becomes a laughing-stock for its neglect of the very trees which are valued highly in other parts of the world. In America, in Africa, and in Europe, along the shores of the Mediterranean, Australian trees are grown and prized; only in their own land are they despised and destroyed.

The members of the Forest League have been accused of sentimentality. But that is the accusation always levelled against those who have imagination to look farther ahead than their fellows. Ten years ago, when bird-lovers began to make their plea for the preservation of our birds, and wrote of their beauty, their song, and their utility, they were called sentimentalists, if not amiable lunatics. But to-day the hard-headed business man, the farmer, and the grazier are seriously discussing the value of the birds, and measures for their protection have passed from mere suggestion into the realm of practical politics. In a few years, no doubt, those who are seeking to preserve the native trees will reap their reward, for the spirit of understanding is awakening, and new converts are found as knowledge spreads.

Perhaps the best answer to the charge of sentimentality, is to be found in the membership of the council of the newly-formed Forest League. There we have not only the Professor of Botany at the Sydney University, and the chief teacher of natural history in the State, but, also, the Professor of Agriculture. From which we may gather that the man on the land need not fear the new movement. In addition to geologists, who know how the earth's surface is affected by the uprooting of the forests, we have medical men who realise how the health of the community depends on the preservation of trees in our midst. Then, too—and this is perhaps the strongest argument of all against the charge of "sentimentality"—we have leading timber merchants and business men, who can regard the movement from the commercial standpoint. And last, but not least, we have as president of the council the Chief Justice, who as an enthusiastic lover of trees has had much practical experience of their utility both in town and country, and from whom we can naturally expect a wise and sane judgment. With such a membership it would be impertinent as well as ignorant to accuse the Forest League of sentimentality, or of considering one phase of life to the detriment of another. And with such a body of men and women banded together to preserve our trees, we may take heart, and even dare our aldermen to do their worst. For every tree they may cut down a hundred shall be planted.

ITCHING, BURNING RASH ON ARMS.

"Bayview," Ribbes-street, Rockdale, N.S.W.—"My arms were covered with an itching, burning rash, which kept me awake at night (being always worse at night). I went to a chemist, and he told me it was dry eczema. He gave me ointments which I used for six weeks without any good result. Just as I was getting disheartened I saw advertised the Cuticura Ointment, so I sent for some, and I am pleased to say a little of it cured me, and I have never had the slightest return of the eczema. I would advise anyone suffering from any form of skin disease to give Cuticura Ointment a trial. I am bathing my baby with Cuticura Soap, and am pleased to say she has a lovely skin." (Signed), Mrs. A. Whitford, Nov., 1912.

Although Cuticura Soap and Ointment are sold throughout the world, a sample of each, with 32-page Skin Book, will be mailed free on application to R. Towns and Co., Dept. T., Sydney, N.S.W.—Advt.

CURRENT LITERATURE.

THE LAUREATE OF THE INSECTS.

Although M. Henri Fabre is an old man, it is but recently that he has been discovered by the world at large. Even in France his work was appreciated only by a few. In England, though Darwin and Huxley recognised his genius, the ordinary person had never heard of him. And yet in the course of less than a decade Fabre has become an international celebrity. His books on natural history are now in every scientist's library, and are, moreover, read and enjoyed by thousands for whom science as such has no attractions. As each translation appears it widens the circle of admirers, and "The Life of the Fly," the latest, promises a twofold interest, both in its nominal subject matter and in the personal reminiscences in which the author indulges. Also it contains his profession of scientific faith. He deplores the divorce between the laboratory and life. Science should not be an affair of dry bones, nor should its results be clothed in a dreary and austere guise, which repels all but the savants. "If I write for men of learning, for philosophers," he declares, "who, one day will try to some extent to unravel the tough problem of instinct, I write also, I write above all things for the young. I want to make them love the natural history which you make them hate; and that is why, while keeping strictly to the domain of truth, I avoid your scientific prose, which too often, alas, seems borrowed from some Iroquois idiom." And that M. Fabre loses nothing by this method, either in scientific accuracy or scientific weight, is proved by Darwin's tribute to him, which calls him "the incomparable observer."

The first chapters of the book deal with the metamorphoses of various flies, and the author shows us how wonderfully Nature equips even the least of her children against the various vicissitudes of its career. Take, for instance, the life-story of the anthrax fly. Its mother lays the egg near the nest of the Mason bee. The egg hatches into a slender worm, which, with infinite patience and experiment, manages at last to get into the nest through some almost imperceptible crack. Here it attaches itself to the larva of the bee, its wet nurse, and sucks it dry. The latter withers away into an empty husk, while the anthrax grub absorbs its juices, and becomes large and vigorous. However, it has still to break its way out of the hard cell, a seemingly impossible task for a little oily sausage with means neither of locomotion nor of cutting through the surrounding wall of cement. Here, again, Nature comes to the rescue, and, after a period of torpor, the anthrax becomes "a perforating machine, a living tool from which our own industry might take a hint if it required new drills for boring rock." Nature provides for every contingency. The metamorphosis includes the growth of a most elaborate set of weapons. "In front, on the forehead, a diadem of spikes, the ramming and digging tool; behind, a many-bladed ploughshare, which fits into a socket in readiness for an attack on the barrier which has to be demolished; on the back, four climbing belts of grapplers, which keep the animal in position, by biting on the walls of the tunnel with their hundreds of teeth; and all over the body long, stiff bristles pointing backwards to prevent falls and recoils." This strange creature, an animated tool rather than anything else, sets to work excavating. A passage is pierced through the hard cement. "This tool splits like a pod bursting in the sun, and there escapes a dainty fly, a velvety flake, a soft fluff that astounds us by its contrast with the roughness of the depths whence it ascends."

There are some most fascinating chapters dealing with various flesh flies, and their usefulness in the scheme of things. M. Fabre admits that the subject may not be esthetically pleasant, but to the scientist even maggots, "the squalid sextons" of the earth, have their invaluable lesson to teach. They are the knackers and scavengers whose important, if disagreeable, task is to consume the dead and purify the face of the world. In this they have a busy little ally in the shape of the ant, but, with the ant alone, who can each time only carry off a mere atom, the sanitary operation would take too long. Vulture-like, the fly descends on the corpse, devours it, and reduces it almost to nothing.

Flies work vicariously. They eat nothing themselves, but colonise the corpse with swarms of worms, either alive or in a litter of eggs, who perform the grisly rites of dissolution. M. Fabre describes a number of experiments by which he at length determined their exact procedure. The ordinary flesh worm does not eat, it drinks; it emits a very strong reagent, or sort of pepsin, which liquefies the flesh, until in the end the whole is dissolved. The fly displays tremendous patience and ingenuity in depositing her young in suitable places; but, even so, conditions are necessary for their development. Any impervious covering, even a few inches of earth, will prevent their lodgment, and the author explodes a revolting superstition. "Pulpit orators," he says, "sometimes make an unfair use of the grave and its worms. Let us put no faith in their doleful rhetoric. The chemistry of man's final dissolution is eloquent enough of our own emptiness; there is no need to add imaginary horrors. The worm of the sepulchre is an invention of cantankerous minds, incapable of seeing things as they are. Covered by but a few inches of earth, the dead can sleep their quiet sleep; no fly will ever come to take advantage of them." Coming to a more mundane theme, he tells us that the surest way to protect meat against the invasion of flies is simply to wrap it in paper. The ordinary wire-gauze cover, so popular with housewives, is a snare and a delusion, for the sagacious fly deposits her eggs on it, and they either fall through the meshes there and then, or else wriggle through when matured.

Scattered through these pages are reminiscences of M. Fabre's past. His parents were cafe proprietors in a small way, and an unsuccessful way at that. They were worthy and affectionate people, but could not understand little Henri's craze for filling his pockets with stones, creeping things, useless plants, poisonous fungus, and all that sort of rubbish. However, the passion for science was too deep-seated in his heart ever to die out. It endured through his school days, though there was no one to lend him a helping hand. It endured when he was an undermaster at a school in Vaucluse, where "while a dictation lesson was being corrected around me with generous assistance from the dictionary, I would examine in the recesses of my desk the oleander's fruit, the snapdragon's seed-case, the wasp's sting, and the beetle's wing-case." It endured right through the ill-paid drudgery of his youth and early middle age. There were red-letter days in his career, as when he first saw a laboratory, or when a travelling inspector appreciated his work. But M. Fabre, the self-taught savant, always preferred the fields to the laboratory, and the freedom to follow his hobby to more material benefits. And now in his little garden at Serignan, full of years and honour, he receives the worship of thousands, who come to see "the Master," and wonders what all the fuss is about. (Hodder and Stoughton; Angus and Robertson.)

NORMAN ANGELL AGAIN.

In "The Foundations of International Policy," Mr. Norman Angell continues to develop the doctrine made familiar to us by "The Great Illusion." The book consists of a number of addresses delivered by him on various occasions, along with an introductory chapter in which he summarises the whole of his argument. The ground covered by these is not essentially different from that of the earlier work, but they attempt to answer certain criticisms directed against it, and further emphasise certain aspects of his theory, on which "The Great Illusion" touched but lightly. Thus, while the latter dealt mainly with concrete cases, such as the Anglo-German conflict, the present volume is concerned rather with the general law which underlies modern international relations, how and why it must operate, and its results.

Mr. Angell's doctrine is, briefly, that civilisation has made war between civilised nations out of date. War is futile; even a successful war involves a loss greater than any corresponding benefit. The nation that embarks upon a war to secure some commercial or territorial advantage resembles the litigant who brings an action to recover something, and spends far more in doing so than the intrinsic value of the thing at stake. He may have gratified his vanity and indulged his spleen, but as a result of the whole transaction he is out of pocket. Why should this be so? Simply because of the interdependance of trade. The ramifications of modern commerce are so complicated and so world-wide that if a power disturb the delicate equilibrium in one part of the earth it will sooner or later react with disastrous results to herself. Mr. Angell illustrates this with a characteristically vivid illustration. "International trade," he observes, "is not exchanged between corporations known as 'England,' 'Germany,' etc., but is a process of complex operations divided infinitely between individuals. A Birmingham ironmaster sells his engines to a Brazilian coffee planter, who is able to buy them because he sells his coffee to a merchant in Havre, who sells it to a Westphalian town manufacturing rails for Siberia, which buy them because peasants are growing wheat as the result of the demand in Lancashire, which is manufacturing cotton for Indian coolies growing tea for sheep farmers in Australia, who are able to buy it because they sell wool to a Bradford merchant, who manufactures it because he is able to sell cloth to a petroleum refiner in Baku, who is able to buy good clothing because he is selling petrol to the users of automobiles in Paris." It is rather like "The house that Jack built," and any interference with any one operation must inevitably affect the commercial prosperity not only of the belligerents, but of the whole world.

Mr. Angell is sometimes accused of being an unpractical theorist, who bids us at once beat our swords into ploughshares. As a matter of fact, he does nothing of the kind. He is quite alive to the importance of the police work of an army, and on that very score he advises the retention of the British troops in India. Moreover, even if he had the power, he would not disband our forces, since they are needed for defence until the "illusion" of the necessity or the profit of war is dispelled. His aim is to explode this superstition, and he thinks that once the world can be brought to realise that even a victorious campaign is commercially a losing proposition, the rest will follow as a matter of course. We wonder whether it will? There are few who dispute the truth of Mr. Angell's principles, but there are many who feel that his application of them fails to take human nature into account. Men, and still less nations, do not always act by the light of pure reason. To revert to our old illustration, many men know that a certain lawsuit, even if successful, will not pay, but from motives of pride or irritation they engage in it nevertheless. Will not this always be the case, even where merely material issues are at stake? And when points of "national honour" are concerned will not the impulse to appeal to force, at whatever cost, be still stronger? (Heinemann and Co.)

SAPPHO.

Most of us know vaguely that Sappho stands for the quintessential spirit of Greek poetry, but there our knowledge ends. However, it is a disability which we share with the erudite. As Professor Tucker points out in his excellent monograph, extraordinarily little is known of this lady who sang her immortal lyrics more than two thousand five hundred years ago. Lesbos was the isle of Greece "where burning Sappho lived and sung." Lesbos the home of early poetry and music, and the seat of that vivid and intense civilisation which belonged peculiarly to Ancient Greece. "There was no doubt plenty of envy, hatred, and malice," writes the author, "and no little that was coarse and gross. Nevertheless the love of art and beauty, and the spontaneous appreciation of them, penetrated far deeper into a Greek people than they do with us. It was not an artificial outgrowth, a dainty effervescence of leisure and luxury. It was no private possession of the virtuoso or sequestered playground of the amateur. Even now the popular songs of the village Greeks are in literary grace and thought of a higher quality than many songs familiar to our drawing-rooms. Life without song and dance upon the sward was unimaginable in old Hellas."

Sappho (or Psappha, as she seems to have called herself) was the fine flower of this civilisation. Attractive legends have grown up concerning her unrequited love for a young ferryman, and her despairing suicide. It is more probable that she married a wealthy islander, and had at least one daughter, Kleis, to whom she was devoted. She is known to have gathered about her "what may be variously called a coterie, academy, conservatorium, or club" of young women, not only from Lesbos itself, but from other islands, and even from Asia Minor. She taught them music and the art of poetry, and also "whatever charms and graces of bearing and behaviour were most desired by women, whether in their social life or in their frequent appearances in religious or secular processions and ceremonies." There exists a short fragment in which she derides the rusticity of the woman who has no idea how to hold up her train about her ankles.

Very little of her work remains. The unco' guid in the early Byzantine days destroyed her poems because many of them invoked the Queen of Love. The few fragments we possess owe their survival because they happen to be quoted here and there by ancient critics and grammarians to illustrate some esthetic doctrine, the use of some word, or even some peculiarity of grammar. However, few though they be, we find in them "sheer poetry, sound and true, free from dross in either form or thought." Sappho's appeal has generally been misrepresented. She is not, as Swinburne calls her, "Love's priestess, mad with pain and joy of song." Her verse is "full indeed of warmth and colour, full of poignant feeling, but never riotous, always sane, always controlled by the truest sense of art." It provides a complete refutation to those who hold that there is no need to learn the classics, for translations can give all that matters of their literature. Professor Tucker points out that Sappho's peculiar charm cannot be reproduced in English, and proves this by quoting from alleged "translations." The fine simplicity is lost, and also the perfect balance between thought and expression. Professor Tucker's own efforts are quite the most successful, and the whole monograph is a scholarly and admirable piece of work.

In "Platform Monologues," Professor Tucker has collected a number of addresses delivered on various occasions, and in the majority of cases already published in some form or another. Their common object, says the author, has been to plead the cause of literary study at a time when that study is being depreciated and discouraged. The book includes Professor Tucker's suggestive essays on "The Supreme Literary Gift," "The Making of a Shakespeare," and "Literature and Life," which are already well known. A wider public will now make the acquaintance of the discussions on "Hebraism and Hellenism," "The Principles of Criticism," and "The Future of Poetry," and everyone will welcome their appearance in a permanent shape.—(Thomas Lothian and Co.).

FOOD.

In one of his books R. L. Stevenson declared that the happiest hours of his life were spent in consuming Mulligatawny soup during a winter cruise in a yacht off the West Hebrides. R.L.S. had the courage to admit what many of us hypocritically deny, namely, that food has been responsible for many pleasures in the past, and will be responsible for many hoped-for pleasures in the future. We affect a disdain for eating as such. But our studious scrutiny of the menu gives the lie to our protestations. Everyone in his heart of hearts will confess that he is interested in food, and for this reason we expect that "Cakes and Ale," by Mr. Edward Spencer, will be popular.

Some time ago Mr. Spencer published this book under the pseudonym of "Nathaniel Gubbins." Since then his gastronomical experience has increased, and the second edition is to the first as the sun is to the moon. Mr. Spencer is the gourmet in excelsis. He regards food much as an art critic might regard pictures. He knows that there is a perfection in simplicity as well as in elaboration. Consequently, potatoes properly boiled or rice properly seethed arouse as much enthusiasm in him as does the most complicated creation of a transpontine cordon bleu. Indeed, the author is an apostle of plain cookery. He has eaten in the palaces of rajahs and of Indian pro-consuls; in the haunts of American millionaires, and in the restaurants on the Continent, where the chef describes his kitchen as a studio. But he has never derived such satisfaction in these quarters as when he ate Irish stew at X's or a grilled steak at Y's, or a piece of the undercut chez Z, in the City of London. French cookery is his bete noire, although he is willing to admit that in some things the French have defeated us, upon the table-cloth if not on the tented field. Salads, for instance. But Mr. Spencer reconciles us to our crude methods of making salad by a grisly story. In a certain club the salads were famous for an intangible but delectable flavour. The chef in an expansive moment told the author that the secret of their success was that after chewing garlic he breathed over each salad before it was served.

If we begin to quote Mr. Spencer's stories we shall never be able to stop. He is a gastronomologue who has levied his toll upon the whole of history and literature. He examines the bill of fare of Roman emperors, Saxon kings, Hindu peasants, Norman knights, Scottish crofters, English labourers, and many others besides. He is quite as happy when he sits down to a well-cooked mess of pottage as when he is served with the choicest examples of Delmonico's or Ciro's or the Ritz's skill. Mr. Spencer is not a gourmand, but a gourmet. His first question when he eats anything, whether it be a plate of porridge, or the latest achievement of a cordon bleu, is: "Is this really nice?" His second question is, "Could this be made nicer?" If he thinks that it can, he appends his recipes, many of which are the result of researches into the cookery of other lands and other ages. When the head of the house has read the book with a watering palate, he will hand it over to his wife with the injunction to pay particular attention to these recipes.—(Stanly Paul and Co.)

SOME NEW NOVELS.

"Splendrum," by Lindsay Bashford, is another of those semi-industrial semi-sociological novels which are becoming so common. Old Richard Splendrum has built up this business of universal providers until it has reached a scale unparalleled in modern commerce. Its author has devoted the whole of his life and energy to its development. It absorbs him at the expense of all other interests; he has no time to spare on his motherless boy, and thinks that when he has provided him with nurses and tutors his duty is at an end. Consequently when Basil gets into trouble at school, and is expelled, the father has no one but himself to blame, but he does not look at it in this light. The breach between them widens. Basil, though quite a good fellow at heart, sows his wild oats until a love affair pulls him up. The lady is an ardent social reformer, and under her guidance Basil becomes a convert to extreme radicalism. The position provides food for gossip in London. While Sir Richard is fulminating against trades-unionism in the House, his son "Socialist-Splendrum," as the papers call him, hurries off to help the strikers with a thousand sovereigns in his car. However, accidentally, Basil learns that his father has a weakness which is steadily sapping his powers. The supremacy of Splendrum, Limited, is threatened. Basil, in a secret apprenticeship, prepares himself for the role of a captain of industry, and when Sir Richard breaks down he takes command. The story is quite a good one, and the author propounds rather an interesting theory about the political future. He satirises both Liberals and Conservatives, and evidently feels that both the old parties have outlived their usefulness. The promise of the future lies in some new party, which, while maintaining the best traditions of the old ones, has a more practical grasp of latter-day conditions and problems. The leaders of this party will be found not among the hereditary governing classes or the academic enthusiasts, still less in the ranks of labour, but among the self-made men who have climbed to eminence in commerce and industry, and who not only know things at first-hand, but have done things as well. (Bell and Sons; Dymock's).

In "The Heart of Monica," Miss Rosina Philippi adopts the device of telling the story by means of letters. These are written by Monica to a man friend, and we learn that she is the wife of a hopeless dipsomaniac. Her love for him has turned to pity, with alternations of disgust, and all her affection now centres on her two children. At first the letters are cheerful enough, but gradually they take a more despondent note as the tragic denouement comes nearer. Poverty, despair, and fear of the future all blacken her life, and when Elsie, the apple of her eye, is killed, and her husband dies, she is in the very depths. However, little by little she recovers from the blow, and finally agrees to marry her correspondent. She will make him a good wife, she says, but she frankly declares that she can never never love him as she loved her dead husband, for she is a woman who loves once and for all. Miss Philippi, however, knows human nature too well to leave matters at that; the last letter of all is written after the birth of a son, and is a poem of love and of gratitude for all that her second marriage has given to her. Monica is a very real person, with her loyalty and courage, which may bend but never break; with her inconsistency, jealousy, and exaggeration. The author is to be congratulated in that, although she has employed a difficult medium, she holds our attention throughout. (Cassell and Co.).

In "The Fruits of To-morrow" Miss Agnes Jacomb enlarges upon the age-old theme that, if the parents break the social code, their children, as much as they themselves, must suffer. Nina Braisher leaves her husband for Geoffrey Harden, and, though eventually divorce enables them to regularise their relationship, their eldest son, Kit, is illegitimate. They begin to reap what they have sown, when Geoffrey Harden unexpectedly inherits a title which will in time descend not to Kit, but to his younger brother, born in lawful wedlock. Nina has to pay for the indulgence of her passion in her children's contempt, and the situation is complicated by the fact that Kit has fallen in love with her first husband's daughter by a second marriage. Out of these unpromising materials Miss Jacomb contrives to solve a happy ending, which may gratify some readers, but really shirks the issue. The characters are all well drawn, and there is a lack of sensationalism in the story which is unusual and acceptable in books of this kind. (Methuen and Co.; G. Robertson.)

In "The House of Thane," by Miss Elizabeth Dejeans, we meet some interesting American types. First and foremost there is John Thane, the self-made capitalist, all of whose ambitions are centred upon the foundation of a family. Though he does not realise it, and would refuse to admit it, his marriage with the beautiful and fashion-loving Berenice, was really an investment. When this like his other investments goes wrong and he is left bankrupt, both in world's goods and in his hopes of domestic happiness, he denounces his wife in most scathing terms, and goes off to make a new fortune and a new future in which she is to have no share. For her part, Berenice welcomes the release from one who can no longer support her in the luxury she requires, and she has, moreover a stronger motive for giving him his conge. The story works out rather dramatically. Thane learns the lessons of love and unselfishness from a little waif he has befriended, and, though we leave him a broken man, it is hinted that he may afterwards reach the goal of his desires. MUSIC AND DRAMA.

At the Memorial Theatre, Stratford-on-Avon, the Shakespeare Festival included on April 28 "The Two Angry Women of Abington," being "The Pleasant Historie of The sd. Women, and the Humorous Mirthe of Dick Coomes and Nicholas Proverbes, Two Servingmen." The piece was by Henry Porter, a contemporary of Shakespeare, and was extremely farcical and somewhat crude, more especially in a deliberate burlesque upon the Balcony Scene in "Romeo and Juliet," which had been published two years earlier. After careful expurgation, the comedy caused a deal of laughter, with Miss Rose Edouin (sister of the late Willie Edouin) as the more important of the two wives. This actress (Mrs. G. B. W. Lewis), after passing more than 30 years of her long life in Melbourne as a teacher of acting and elocution, seems now to have settled in England, and last year appeared as the Nurse in Tree's London production of "Romeo and Juliet." Another literary revival has been that of Ibsen's drama, "Ghosts," produced at the Court Theatre, London, on behalf of the New Constitutional Society of Women's Suffrage, and pronounced "one of the most disturbing and powerful of works in the modern dramatic repertory." Yet a third experiment was in rehearsal on May 1, consisting of a poetic blank-verse tragedy, with a strong dramatic plot, entitled "Rebellion." This is by John Drinkwater, manager of the Birmingham Repertory Theatre, and was originally issued as "A Soul's Rebellion."

Our London correspondent writes under date April 27:—"A week or two hence Mr. Arnold R. Mote leaves for Sydney, with a view to settle there professionally, after more than nine years' absence. Mr. Mote, who will be well remembered as an organist, resumed the study of that instrument on this side under Sir Frederick Bridge, organist of Westminster Abbey. For some years past he has occupied the post of organist and master of the choristers of Sherborne Abbey, Dorset, where, also, he is one of the music masters at the famous King's School, Sherborne. Incidentally, Mr. Mote has given some 80 organ recitals at Sherborne, besides playing at Battersea Town Hall, the Royal Albert Hall, and other places. Moreover, during his stay in England, he has taken the degree of Mus. Bac., both at Oxford and at Durham, while quite recently he made a flying entry for the F.R.C.O. diploma, and had the satisfaction of being one of the few successful candidates at that very searching test of academic organ ability. Mr. Mote has also published compositions for organ, and in all respects, as will be seen, he will return a thoroughly trained musician."

A young violinist of quite remarkable talent passed away at Wentworth Falls on May 30 in the youthful person of Brian Roussel Perkins, who studied in his boyhood under Rivers Allpress, and played with the Royal Philharmonic Society of Sydney for two years under Signor Hazon's baton. During his student career here he won the gold medal at the Sydney College, and the gold medal offered at the Royal Agricultural Society's exposition; and in 1904 his father (Dr. Perkins, of Macquarie-street) accordingly sent him to Europe for further education. The young violinist was for 18 months under Dr. Hollander at the Stern 'ches Conservatorium, Berlin, and, besides winning favourable reviews for public appearances, was admitted as a player with the Kaiser's Orchestra. Then he spent 18 months in Paris under Tenhave, another great teacher, and after remaining nearly as long under Henri Marteau in Geneva he was accepted as a pupil for finishing touches by Ysaye, a classic virtuoso, who takes only students who are already artists of talent. Young Perkins's enthusiasm for indoor study, coupled with the rigors of the winter, unfortunately brought on chest trouble, and he returned home the shadow of his former self. At his father's house at Wentworth Falls, however, he made an astonishing recovery, and was apparently at his full strength and weight (13st) when he suddenly burst a blood vessel during an afternoon of violent exertion, and rapidly passed away. The deepest sympathy has been expressed for Dr. Perkins and his family under these sad circumstances, for their gifted son was fulfilling the highest hopes of his friends at the time of his lamented decease.

Maud Allan, the renowned dancer, who is appearing in Melbourne next Saturday, is a great friend of the Indian poet and mystic, Rabindranath Tagore, who recently won the Nobel prize for literature. Miss Allan first met him in London, and was present at some impressive religious ceremony at which the great man officiated. The dancer has been studying Tagore's poems, "Gitanjali" and "The Crescent Moon," and is composing the music for a series of new dances founded upon these compositions. Miss Allan, by the way, is also acquainted with another of the Tagores, Abanindranath—an extraordinary artist, who has painted a series of weird Hindu pictures, illustrating the poems of Omar Khayyam.

Miss Eva Mylott, after her successful concert with Miss Marie Narelle in New York, left for California in April, and will be kept busy in the west until her return to New York early in July. The Australian contralto writes that on the night of her concert with Miss Narelle she was entertained at a supper party by the Hon. W. D. Reid, Premier of Newfoundland, who invited her to give five concerts in that Dominion during August, offering free transportation by boat any train for her party. Accordingly, Miss Mylott will spend the summer there, and will travel right across the island, a distance of 547 miles. In October she will give another concert in New York. The contralto is considering the question of a return visit to Australia next year, and in the meantime sends news of Miss Nora Long, who used to appear with the Royal Sydney Philharmonic Society, but has been singing in opera in England for the past three years as Miss d'Argel. This soprano, now in New York, has accepted a 20 weeks' engagement as prima donna in "Fra Diavolo" and other light operatic works, and a place has also been found in the company for Miss Hilda Aiken, of this city.

At the Austral Quartette Society's concert on Tuesday next Brahms' "Quartette for Piano and Strings in A" will be performed, concerning which the leader, Mr. Cyril Monk, explains that it is probably new to Sydney, and is one of three composed by Brahms for the same instruments, of which Hans Von Bulow remarked, "Each is more beautiful than the other." There is also to be an original "Fantasia-Sonata for 'Cello and Piano," by Rex de Cairos Rego, of this city, which is in one movement marked by thematic material of interest, and well written for both instruments; whilst the string quartette of the evening will be Dvorak's fascinating "The American," the last movement of which furnishes a classic example of the rhythm popularly known as "rag-time." Mr. Monk, by the way, has just resigned the honorary leadership of the Amateur Orchestral Society, after devoting his time to it for two seasons, as pressure of work prevents his attendance at so many rehearsals.

"Mr. Wu," the powerful drama dealing with affairs in British China, will open the tour of a new company to be introduced by Louis Meyer and Beaumont Smith at the Adelphi Theatre in July. Mr. William F. Grant and Miss May Congdon will be the leading people of the combination, and are now on their way here by the Orama. Both these artists have visited Australia before. In his younger days Mr. Grant played cleverly the part of the Laird at Her Majesty's here with Edith Crane and Tyrone Power as Trilby and Svengali (1901). He has appeared with success as "Mr. Wu" in England. Miss Congdon made her Australian debut as leading lady in the long run of "The Fatal Wedding" at the Criterion in 1906, under the Meynell-Gunn direction. Miss Congdon, who was originally educated as a singer at the Brussels Conservatorium of Music, stayed here for more than a year, and is an actress of Shakespearian and other varied experience. Mr. Cyril Mackay is to have a strong part in "Mr. Wu" as the Englishman, Basil Gregory.

THE CHURCHES.

HUMAN NATURE.

The Bishop of Bathurst, preaching to crowded congregations at Cobar on Sunday last, referred to certain evidence given on the Interstate Commission lately, and remarked that one witness was reported to have said that "human nature was ugliest at its best." He (the Bishop) ventured to challenge that idea. To his mind, human nature was one of the most beautiful creations of the all-wise God. He would ask: Was the act of Captain Oates, in marching out into the jaws of death to allow his companions a chance of reviving, an ugly thing? Or was it an ugly phase of human nature when Scott and his party preferred to die nobly a natural death instead of ending their misery by suicide? Once more, was the act of a mother bending over her infant's cot night after night to sooth and calm her little one, and sacrificing her own comfort and rest, an ugly thing?

In his monthly letter Archbishop Wright touches on the Churches' relation to the Australian defence scheme. He says:—"We shall soon have, as a Church, to consider how best we can support the military chaplains in their most important work. The Church has a great duty and a wide opportunity in connection with the military training scheme. The Defence Department of the Commonwealth invited me to be the Chaplain-General for the Church of England in the Commonwealth. The work has great attraction for me from my old associations, but I felt that the Bishop of Perth had done so much for the development of the functions of military chaplains through so many years that he ought to occupy the post. I therefore nominated him, and he has been appointed. Similarly, as senior chaplain for our division, I nominated the Dean of Sydney. Reports come to me of the admirable manner in which the chaplains have endeavoured to use the occasion."

At the last meeting of the standing committee of the Anglican Synod a resolution of sympathy was passed to Mr. W. Crane in his illness; and on his death, amongst the many tokens of respect at the funeral was a wreath from the Archbishop, Dean Cathedral Chapter. At St. Stephen's, Newtown, as a graceful act of sympathy with Mr. E. C. Crane, of the Diocesan Registry, the Rev. E. N. Wilton and the Cathedral choir attended the service.

At a meeting of the St. Hilda's Church building committee, Katoomba, on Tuesday, the tender of Messrs. Musgrave and Whettam, for building a new church was accepted. It is expected that the building will soon be commenced.

The total income of the Australian Board of Missions for the year was £13,000, a record.

The Festival of St. Barnabas will be celebrated on Thursday next. This day is specially set apart in the Church of England for intercession for the mission work in Melanesia.

The Rev. T. K. Pitt, M.A., vicar of Hay, has been appointed Canon Residentiary of St. Paul's Pro-cathedral, Hay, in the diocese of Riverina.

The Rev. Cecil King, for the last six months acting-superintendent of the Yarrabah Mission, left the mission on June 3 for New Guinea. He will return to Canada in a few weeks.

The Rev. Berkeley A. Rowell, of Melbourne, has been appointed curate of St. Andrew's, Summer Hill.

Another Australian Bishop is to be consecrated at St. Andrew's Cathedral. Dean Stephen, Bishop-elect of Tasmania, will be consecrated on St. Matthew's Day, September 21.

The Bishop of North Queensland is expected to reach Sydney from London on July 9, and the Bishop of New Guinea hopes to be back from the old country on July 16.

Rev. Fortescue L. Ash, formerly of Strathfield, arrived recently in Sydney from England, and is expected to take up work in Queensland.

A service of intercession and thanksgiving on the arrival of the new Bishop of Kalgoorlie was held at St. George's Cathedral, Perth, on May 14. On Ascension Day the Right Rev. C. H. Golding Bird was enthroned at Kalgoorlie by the Bishop of Perth.

Great interest has been aroused by Dr. Hedlam's Moorehouse lectures on "Miracles" in St. Paul's Cathedral, Melbourne.

At St. David's Church, Albury, on Wednesday last, Rev. Alex. Fleming, late of the Clarence River, was inducted in the presence of a large congregation. The Rev. J. S. Rapkins, of Junee, presided, and addresses were delivered by the Revs. J. N. M'Gee and A. Torrens. At a subsequent welcome, addresses were given by Canon Bevan, Rev. C. T. Lusby (Methodist), Rev. Ivan Stebbins (Congregationalist), Ensign Scherfield (Salvation Army), Rev. D. Morris, and Mr. J. H. Balfour.

Archbishop Kelly has a busy week ahead of him in connection with the functions incidental to celebrating the silver jubilee of St. Patrick's College. He will also preside at Pontifical High Mass at St. Vincent's College, in celebration of the golden jubilee of Mother Mary Francis M'Guigan, on June 8; and on June 11 will preside at High Mass in St. Mary's Cathedral as a beginning of the Forty Hours Adoration. On the same afternoon he will attend St. Vincent's Hospital, when the Mother-General of the Sisters of Charity will be honoured.

A monster meeting was held in St. Patrick's Cathedral, Melbourne, on Sunday evening, in connection with the movement to establish a Catholic college at the Melbourne University. A fund was opened, and £37,000 subscribed.

The St. Mary's Society of Bellringers on Wednesday night rang a grand sires triple in honour of the King's Birthday. There were 2520 changes.

The Presbyterian Foreign Missions secretary (Rev. J. T. Lawton) left on Friday last for three weeks in the Hunter Presbytery.

A movement is on foot to erect a memorial at St. Andrew's College, as a tribute to the late Professor Clouston.

The founder of the Central Methodist Mission, Rev. W. G. Taylor, is starting out on a spiritual crusade in the northern districts. He will begin at Grafton and Lismore, and will then visit the Kempsey and Manning circuits.

The Rev. W. C. Poole of San Francisco, who has been delivering acceptable addresses at various churches in the metropolis and Newcastle, leaves to-day for America.

The anniversary services of the Walker-street, North Sydney, Methodist Sunday School were held last Sunday, in the Central Hall, and were largely attended. The Rev. J. H. Lewin preached in the morning, and the Rev. Fred. Colwell (president of the Conference) conducted the afternoon and evening services. The Rev. V. A. Little, M.A. (chaplain of H.M.A.S. Sydney), gave the address in the afternoon, the scholars of the North Sydney Congregational Sunday School being present. On Monday evening the annual meeting and musical festival was held. The chair was occupied by the superintendent (Mr. J. K. Small), and musical items (under the conductorship of Mr. J. M. Lane) were rendered by the school, assisted by the choir. Presentations of teachers' bibles were made by the chairman to Miss Elma Lane, and Mr. Alan Devitt, both of whom have passed through the school from the infants' class to the rank of teacher.

Sir John D. M'Clure, L.L.D., headmaster of Mill Hill School, recently referred to the new Congregational Hymnal. He said that for six years a representative committee had been hard at work on the hymn-book, exercising the greatest care in selection. For all practical purposes there was little else to be done but to see the book through the press. Sir W. Ryland Adkins, who presided, said that Congregationalism in its origin was intensely concerned with the rights and duties and spiritual privileges of the individual. English Congregationalists were now learning the value of social combination. Gradually they were being led on the line of those far-off dreams of a reunited Christendom, and "in the fulness of time a federation of all the Christian Churches."

The Rev. Professor W. F. Adeney, M.A., D.D., the well-known British Congregationalist, is at present in Melbourne. He will visit Sydney in the course of a few weeks.

The Rev. A. Collins, of Maitland, has accepted the call to minister to the East Hills portion of the Bankstown Congregational parish. The Rev. George Dunkley will continue as senior pastor.

Since its establishment in 1804, the British and Foreign Bible Society has distributed 244,444,000 copies of the scriptures all over the world.

Gordon Sprigg, F.R.G.S., who was in charge of the organising department of the Chapman-Alexander campaign during their recent Australasian tour, has been appointed permanent organising secretary to the mission party, and will leave Australia for London next month, in order to assist with the British campaign. Mr. Sprigg was formerly general secretary of the Y.M.C.A. in Melbourne, and is well known in military circles as the originator of the Field Service Department in relation to military training camps throughout the Commonwealth, having been awarded the South African war decoration for this branch of military service.

THE MAY REVIEWS.

POLITICAL PERSONALITIES.

In "Personalities of the Session," an interesting article in the May number of the "Fortnightly Review," we get a close view of the British Prime Minister and of Sir Edward Carson, Mr. Winston Churchill, and others who have figured prominently in the Home Rule fight. The writer, who is well known in this magazine as "Auditor Tantum," has no hesitation in declaring Mr. Asquith to be the greatest figure in the House of Commons at the present time. He has handled the Irish question with extraordinary patience and address, and has never allowed himself to be bustled by his opponents. His assumption of the portfolio of Minister for War, following on Colonel Seely's resignation, was a masterly coup, and from that moment the army crisis was over. Instead of the Government continuing to totter, it was once more firm on its base. On the other hand, the leader of the Opposition, Mr. Bonar Law, has been "out of the picture," and, next to Mr. Asquith, Sir Edward Carson has been the most commanding personality in the House, with Mr. Churchill and Mr. Lloyd George close up. Here is a picture of Mr. Churchill: "He is possessed of many of the attributes of Publius Clodius and Mirabeau—their immense ability, the Claudian insolence of manner, recklessness of speech, and colossal swagger. Courage, eloquence, unbounded self-confidence, limitless ambition, but not an ounce of scruple." Colonel Seely, we are told, made his exit with considerable dignity. Others mentioned are Mr. Harcourt, Sir Edward Grey, Mr. Austen Chamberlain, Sir Mark Sykes, and Mr. Arthur Ponsonby.

RUSSIA AND SWEDEN.

Few men have a better grasp of foreign affairs than Dr. E. J. Dillon. Writing in the "Contemporary Review" on Sweden and the militarist competition, he tells us that the entire theory of Russia's secret machinations to seize a port in Norway and hinterland in Sweden is laughed at in St. Petersburg and Moscow as one of the most extravagant figments of the political brain known to modern history. Dr. Dillon has been probing the whole subject in Norway and Sweden, in Russia and Germany, and his conclusion is that the date of the Russian invasion, for which preparations are now being organised in Scandinavia, cannot well be set down for any time earlier than St. Tibb's Eve. He is particularly severe on Sir Sven Hedin, the noted explorer and writer, who has published a "Warning" that Russia is making ready for an onslaught on the northern kingdoms. There would be no such onslaught without reckoning with the other Powers of Europe. The only result of the Swedish defence agitation has been to create the feeling in St. Petersburg that Sven Hedin and his friends are bent on seizing the opportunity which a Russo-German conflict may offer to champion the Finns and help them to throw off the Russian yoke. As to the ideal of a union of Sweden, Norway, and Denmark under the aegis of the German Empire, this consummation must remain outside the region of probability unless an entente is first struck up between Britain and Germany; and that is not yet.

THE BALKAN SITUATION.

Writing on the new situation in the Balkans, in the "Fortnightly," Mr. H. Charles Woods says that the war between the former Allies has only resulted in the partial reestablishment of Ottoman prestige in Europe, and, as no satisfactory settlement of many of the most important questions has been arrived at, the real source of danger will continue to be the ever-increasing rivalry between Austria-Hungary and Russia. Of all the problems in the Near East, he says, the most important is the Aegean Islands question, in its larger sense, for the Aegean Sea and its islands make up what is called a strategical triangle, from which the control of the Eastern Mediterranean can be practically secured. In the immediate future, as in the past, the Near East will still be Europe's greatest danger zone.

POLITICS AND RELIGION IN ITALY.

In the later years of the last century a great movement for culture, democratic revival and organisation, was promoted by many young people in Italy, and their leader was Romolo Murri. Writing in the "Contemporary" on "The political aspect of the religious problem in Italy," the leader of that movement (who preferred excommunication to acknowledging the principle that full obedience is due to the Pope in every matter, whether political or social) states that in all these years anti-clericalism in Italy has not succeeded in realising that its mission is to struggle for religious liberty against the misuse of the Roman Catholic conscience by the hierarchy for purposes of ecclesiastical domination. The conflict will not cease, and there will be no peace, until the Church renounces her position of privilege and her claim to absolute independence of the State—the desire for which drives her in the direction of becoming a political party—and accepts as a sphere for her development and propaganda the principle of liberty.

JAPAN AND AMERICA.

Immigration of Japanese labour into the United States is now restrained only by diplomatic agreement between the two Governments. It is a question, remarks Mr. James Davenport Whibley in the "Fortnightly," which the United States Government is acting frankly and honestly with the Japanese nation. The American people have freely expressed their desire for Japanese exclusion, and to attempt by diplomatic subterfuge to postpone the inevitable is, in his view, neither wise nor fair. California, indeed, feels so strongly on the question that the Legislature of that State is proceeding to nullify the peaceful proposals of Washington by passing laws which the Japanese people hold to be a violation of privileges now guaranteed by treaty. As the people of Western Canada share quite as emphatically in this objection to Asiatics, the matter is one of vital interest to Britain, particularly as Hindus are also included among those who are not wanted. The reactionary effect of it all, says Mr. Whibley, will work no good to the English-speaking peoples, for the chance of expanding their influence in the Far East will decline in proportion to the degree to which Japan is forced to intensify her cultivation of Far Eastern territory.

OXYGEN AND CANCER.

The cancer problem remains unsolved. The search for cause and cure still goes on. In an exhaustive article in the "Nineteenth Century," Mr. Lionel Cresswell propounds the theory that cancer is caused by the want of a good supply of oxygen to the tissues. He has come to this conclusion after a systematic study of the whole question as a private student of biological, bio-chemical, and vital phenomena. He thinks that not only can oxygen be arraigned as accessory before and after the fact, but that a strong indictment can be framed against it as the principal malefactor or stimulus in the causation of cancer. Perchance, he says, this may prove to be the key wherewith to unlock the door of mystery. Whilst he is careful to state that he trespasses on no medical ground, and offers no cure, Mr. Cresswell's article, with the reasons he gives for his conclusions, will be read with interest by the medical faculty and all who are interested in the great problem under discussion.

THE NEW JOURNALISM.

Under the title of "Old Lamps for New," Mr. William Maxwell, in the "Nineteenth Century," discusses recent changes in journalism. Though we may have to wait a long time before the prophecy of Mr. Donald, editor of the "Daily Chronicle," is fulfilled—the time when "people may become too lazy to read, and news will be laid on to the house or office, just as gas and water are now"—recent years have seen many great changes in the field of journalism in England. These changes have to do not only with the literary and news side, but also with the commercial side. The publicity agent has multiplied, and the advertising agent has multiplied. The old London newspapers went to press at 3 o'clock in the morning, and made no serious effort to compete with the provincial newspapers. You can now breakfast in the north of Scotland, and have for company a London halfpenny newspaper of the same morning. The halfpenny paper goes to press at midnight; it is printed in Manchester as well as London, and it is despatched by special trains and motor vehicles. "We may yet see the newspaper that costs not even a halfpenny, but is the free gift of the great advertisers through a trust. This is one vision of the commercial journalist. And there are other dreamers who look to the coming of a newspaper which shall know neither party nor advertiser—a newspaper without a cause or a principle." Referring to articles on foreign questions, Mr. Maxwell says that even the "Times" and "Daily Telegraph" have fallen off in this respect, and the serious student must now look to the great newspapers of Paris and Berlin. France and Germany give more attention to these matters, and have a literature, as well as a journalism, of foreign affairs to which Great Britain cannot pretend.

MORNING IN CENTENNIAL PARK.

(BY H. M. SOMER.)

The thousand tinted shadows which skim and vanish to skim again on the slopes and trees and lakes and sedges in Centennial Park have their most exquisite moods between peep of dawn and sun-up, and again between final sunset and the close of our short twilight.

If you believe you need the morning air more than the divine snugginess of a bed, the horrors of early rising may be softened to mere impressions by the contemplation of the delightful shades. Also, if one is sufficiently exhilarated to walk round the grand drive and over the low hills on the outskirts that measurement which the tailor is apt to call in low hurried tones to his clerk may be effectively reduced. One may even say casually, in the club at lunch, "Charming morning in the park," inviting the pessimistic member to growl, "How d'ye know?" so that one may crush him with a nonchalant, "Did four miles this morning out there under the hour," and then order beefsteak and kidney pie with the utmost temerity.

Late spring is the best time in the park. Since Mr. Dawes came he has laid out some glorious flower beds. It is a big place, in which the eye calls for great splashes of vivid colours, and the vista is at this period most delightfully filled. We amateurs gaze lovingly, yet more longingly, at the bold effects in annuals so planted that they blend like blazing carpets. Perhaps we are a little jealous, certainly we are altogether without hope, that we can ever produce the scenic weaving of brilliant hues set in the emerald of the central plot in the great park.

Of course, I know how it is done, because, like the juggler on the stage, the gardener at the plant-house has told me that the way he does it is the way it is done. The privileged amateur who goes to the plant-house, which is mostly an enclosure, gazes covetously at the many rows of sturdy seedlings, and wonders why the spindly weaklings he sets out from his seed-boxes to not get that stocky habit. Then he is told that the seedlings are planted out in rows in the special beds, and when they have become vigorous and eager with the joy and ambition of youth they are transplanted to the big beds on the flat.

So you see I know exactly how the magic works—but I have not yet succeeded in doing the trick in that finished manner which draws the applause of the ever-moving audience on the walks and driveways of the park.

When the dawn comes on a clear morning the park is still enveloped in a sombre covering of green. Then the trees are lightly tipped with grey and silver, and anon with lighter shades of gold. In the hollows are purples toning off to deep and then lighter greens on the rising ground. The lakes, dull grey in the dawn, are suddenly all shimmering, while spangles of gold and silver dance on the reed beds, and play pierrot games among the water lilies. Not till the great disc has risen and is resting on the horizon do the thousand greens begin to blur at the edges and resolve themselves into just a few well-defined and covering large spaces.

By this the walk is somewhat advanced, and it is time to think of the real practical object in being out at that time in the morning, which is probably a rebellious liver that must be reduced to subjection by exercise.

Centennial Park has its social side at the earliest hour. The visitors, some of whom may be termed guests in the lodging-house sense of the term, are not numerous. Just to keep my being from becoming so enthralled with the beauties of Nature as to cause me to sit revelling in her delights, and thus forget to walk, I find it good to take out a couple of dogs. The dogs usually serve to introduce the few ladies and gentlemen whose nocturnal wanderings end most nights on seats or under trees in the free-to-all accommodation area. I am advised by one of the guests to get a stone, and on innocently asking why learn that "it's no good tryin' to drown a mongrel unless you tie a stone to 'is neck to keep 'im down."

"Gone seven yet, old son?" he called, as I approached him.

"Why, it's not even six," I returned.

"I did get up early, didn't I?" he exclaimed, widening a short smile into an affable grin. "Wot sorter dorg d'ye call that?"

"Skye terrier," said I.

"Aint he a long bloke, an' what a coat 'ees got. Ever think 'er making a door mat outer 'im, eh? No offence meant, governor. Aint got the price of a pint on yer?"

"Sorry, but I left my money in my other pocket."

"There-y-are. That's the worst ov 'havin more than one suit ov clothes. No chanst er me ever comin to that. S—long."

The occasional lady is very particular about her matutinal appearance. One rises early to avoid an unpleasant scene with the park ranger, and steers a dignified, if somewhat unsteady, course for the water tap. She salutes the benevolent figure of Gladstone with a playfully blown kiss. Then she produces what was once a handkerchief; she tap runs, and the nymph of the morning bathes more in the sunlight than in the stream. Removing a straw hat which has seen better days and nights, she does her coiffure.

Last spring the lakes in the park were very full, and there were early prospects of a good duck-breeding season. The mother ducks got busy, and in November there were several clutches on the water.

My Airedale Bosun had never seen or heard of young ducks till he scouted one of the lakes in the morning. The mother ducks had selected this lake for a duckling nursery because there were large clumps of reeds in which the tender offspring could be hidden at the first note of danger. Bosun, excited by the squeaking of the little ones, plunged into the water. Led by the old bird, the clutch quickly disappeared in the reeds. Bosun was too old a hunter to be fooled by such a simple device. He knew where the game was hidden, and he swam straight for the retreat. But as he neared the first cover there was Mother Duck helpless and fluttering on the water before him.

Half a dozen strokes, and he would hold a glorious mouthful of feather and live bird. Mother Duck fluttered and flapped a little ahead of the dog. She was nearly done. Bosun put in the crawl stroke, and stretched his fat back till the skin cracked, but still Mother Duck fluttered ahead. When they were 20 yards out in the clear water, and the crawl stroke had died down to a weak jerk, the mother rose swiftly on the wing, and, uttering a derisive quack, flew to the other side of the water.

A very tired dog staggered to my feet and looked very much as though he were suggesting that it was time to go home.

After this incident had been repeated twice, the Airedale decided that it was more becoming the importance of a sporting dog to hunt the black swan, so he swam out to the old pair in the lake on the left of the centre drive. Captain Swan lowered his head and swooped his neck gracefully. Bosun tried to bark, but he was too busy swimming at the time. Evidently he did not like the look of the captain, for he turned for the shore. At that moment Captain Swan drove his big beak into the back of the dog's head. Then Bosun evidently decided that aquatic sports were quite beneath the notice of a grown-up dog.

The summer advanced, and no useful rain fell in Sydney until March. Day by day the lakes dried. The waters receded from the edges, leaving ugly sludgy beds of mud exposed. The grass withered, and only the flower beds which were watered maintained some of their early glory.

All through the glorious rose garden was a charm of the morning, and I could not fail to walk among its scented magnificence. But the spring colours faded from the landscape, the hot earth blazed back to a hotter sun, and only the trees relieved the cruelly used stretches of the great expanse.

The day may come when such god-like gifts to us as Centennial Park will be governed by civilised authority. Then we shall have the lovely lakes kept full by artificial means, there will be irrigation for the fainting grasses, gushing water for the shrubs and flowers. Electric light will show us sylvan wonders at night. Rogues and vagabonds will seek the cover of darkness elsewhere, and the nightly desecration of a glorious heritage, maybe, will cease.

THE CIRCUS COMES TO TOWN

(BY S.H.H.)

It could scarcely be considered a happy chance that brought one to the railway station this morning, for it was to say farewells that might be long ones, and to speed on his journey one whose face was set to far-off shores; but it was at least an alleviation of the mauvais quart d'heure before the arrival of the train to find that the circus trucks were being unloaded, and to watch the young tusker subduing his will and his vast bulk to his master's uses.

At the moment of our joining the little cluster of bystanders he was taking his ease for a moment till the engine had shunted fresh trucks on to the siding. He sauntered about, surveying the circle of children, keenly noting with eyes absurdly out of proportion, not very much larger, indeed, than those of a Newfoundland dog, to see who had peanuts to produce, passing his trunk along just like a collection plate in church, and not troubling to convey it to his mouth till he had half-a-dozen nuts to throw into that queer vast cavity, with an underlip sucked in like that of a toothless old man. Then, after this pause for light refreshments, at a quiet word he turned again to his work. First, the whole truck had to be backed further into the siding, and without any other directions he used his shoulder to push, curled his trunk round a spoke and pulled, and in a minute all was ready for the men to lay down planks in the truck for the dray wheels to run on; then he marched on to the truck from the levelled up space. Setting his great five-toed plantigrade feet fairly into the middle of each sloping plank, and having been harnessed with stout chains to the lorry, laden with circus apparatus, he turned, stepped off the truck, and moved far enough for the front wheels to turn and rest on the planks that sloped upwards to the truck's edge. Then, with a strain first of the shoulders, and, quite perceptibly later, of the hindquarters, his eyelids squeezed tight together till they seemed almost to disappear, he brought the immense load steadily off the truck on to the firm earth. As he approached the last landed dray, he stretched out his trunk to measure the amount of space available for the next, and then stood swaying back and forth as old village women do when they sit down to enjoy a rest and a cup of tea. Just so, too, have I seen an old musician on one of the Sydney wharfs swing himself backwards and forwards while waiting for the crowd till it was time to strike up his vigorous "'Twas in '55 on a wintry night," or some other bold sea song. There must be something very soothing to nerve and muscle in this rhythmic balancing; a suggestion that may be of value in rest cures and physical culture.

And now his trunk is raised again, and he feels along his chain to see if, perhaps, he has fallen into so deep a reverie and dream of his old jungle as to have missed the mahout's word of command; but, no: the chain is still fast, and he resumes his gentle swaying till it is time to go round to the back of the lorry and push it into the space he has already measured. This, again, he does with no more direction than is contained in a short word that sounds like "Help!" The lorry in its place, back goes the elephant to the railway; but the level from which he was pushing the trucks is at least four feet below their flooring; the front one being now empty, instead of going round to the higher level, as before, he climbs on to it with the agility of a slim athlete. One foot is raised and placed on the edge, then the other fore-foot; one after another the hind legs follow, and the enormous beast is on the truck and ready to set to work on the big red boxes on wheels which are all that remains of the circus equipment to be removed.

Silent and still, those great boxes have been standing. One alone vibrates ceaselessly. It is covered by a tarpaulin, which has become loose and lets a little daylight in. At first sight, and unless one could see the words painted on the sides of the boxes, one might think they were dull and unromantic furniture cases; but that sinister vibration tells its own story. All the rest are so immobile that it is almost a shock to read the words, "Monkey House," "Lyoxes and Pumas," "Lion Cubs," "Bears," "Tigers." Even the performing lions must be asleep. But the performing lioness? She it is whose restless pacing to and fro shakes her cage continually. What memories, what pictures, do these names on the dens evoke! The monkey house!—and a valley opens out across vast blue spaces to where Adam's Peak may just be seen on a clear day. In the midst of the valley rises the Bible Rock. Huge forest tress, close to the line, shut out the view every now and then, and on a bare limb what is it one just sees for a moment in passing? A rounded head, a straight back, and a long, still straighter tail hanging from the branch. One makes a hasty sketch. Can it be that one has really had a glimpse of a monkey gloriously free in its own native, wild wood? The lion cubs! And I am transported to the Zoo in Cairo, watching the happy gambols of the six young cubs, romping and rolling over each other in their rushes after the football which makes such a perfect plaything. Of those six cubs, two are now full-grown lions in the Sydney Zoo; and it is pleasant to think of the wide free home that is being prepared for them in Athol Gardens, so different from the narrow confines of their present abodes or still more, alas! of the cages in which these cubs are confined.

Outside one of the lorries stand a pair of gnus; large and luminous are their eyes, far more so than those of our friend the elephant, patriarchal are their long black beards. Does our crisp mountain air take their thoughts back to their snowy Thibetan valleys? Did they ever roam near the grim monastery cells, where the walled-up solitaries die, their skeleton hands stretched out through the narrow aperture for the meagre food laid once a day on the shelf? One shudders at the thought: these strong halters which bind the gnus are freedom in comparison. Down the street trot groups of horses and of pretty ponies; tiny creatures, some of them, that one could almost lift in one's arms; strong white horses, splendidly groomed, and covered with becoming pale green rugs; no drudges they, to pull and haul at dens and lorries; their work is to carry dainty fairy-like ladies and handsome riders dressed in blue satin. How sensitive are their small, elegantly-pointed ears! Yet the huge ragged leather flaps, dusty and weather-beaten, of our faithful elephant drudges, are as quick to hear the least word of command. They have no need of bit and bridle; with the eye and the voice can they be guided as well as the best of the trick ponies.

And now all is done, and again the corrugated trunk is stretched out; this time it is with a shrewd eye to the main chance: a good-sized bundle of straw is snatched from a bale on one of the lorries and disappears like magic. Our friend is quite ready next moment for the bag of biscuits which he sees emerging from the grocer's shop at the corner, in the hands of an admirer, who was up at 7.30 to see the circus train unloaded. She is full of enthusiasm. "What I love," says she, "is the charming incongruity of it all: to see all these creatures, in this quiet inland place, with its apple-orchards and red-ploughed uplands, its sheep folds and pasture lands; doesn't one 'hear the East a' calling'? Doesn't one long to go with Kipling's soldier to Mandalay and see 'elephints a-pilin' teak, in the sludgy, squidgy creek'? Well, this gives me a tiny taste of it, at all events."

"Ethel, give the elephant some more biscuits."

"I can't, Mother; he's eaten the whole shilling's worth, and the bag, too."

"Well, then, that will have to do. I spent 2s 4d on him before breakfast, and I can't afford any more." For, indeed, there is no time for more, for the marching order is given, and away goes the elephant, his little tusk peeping from his lip with a quaint suggestion of Bobby's first tooth, a suggestion carried out by his plump, rounded back and limbs, so like those of a nice, fat baby. Indeed, he is but a child, only 15, they say, while the patriarch of the herd is well over a hundred; and without apparent effort he hauls the whole long train of cages away to the circus-ground; while ponies in sulkies prance and start in terror, and even stolid cab horses look askance at the strange monster bearing down on them; while the lioness lifts her voice in a muffled roar, intensifying every moment, horribly like the suppressed yet menacing sound of a native drum beaten in some dim forest, to summons dusky tribes to who knows what magic rites and dreadful feasting?

Coming home when the circus is over, we meet the dear elephant trudging all alone to fetch another load; the polar bears have posed elegantly, the brown bear has done his comic turn; the sheep have balanced; and the little white pig has squealed "mam—ma, mam—ma." All are comfortably disposed in their dens, and the fat little lion-cubs sleep cuddled against their dog foster-mother. They have earned their rest, no doubt; but there is still an hour of two's work for the elephants. Dear, faithful creatures. What a splendid example they are to our boys and girls, our scouts, and our cadets, of strength, combined with gentleness; intelligence, not too proud to learn obedience; patience, not disdainful of toil—and, oh! how thoroughly their naughty mate must have enjoyed his liberty-day at Molong.

A DREAM CITY.

WHAT SYDNEY MIGHT BE.

(BY J.V.M.)

Sydney was endowed by nature with one of the most beautiful sites in the world. A glorious expanse of water, shut in on all sidesc by an amphitheatre of hills—here was material, indeed, for the making of a city such as the Old World had never dreamed of. Unfortunately our early town planners were not men of experience; our surveyors left things a great deal to individual selection. As years went on and public buildings came to be erected civic pride also grew, and men began to bewail the want of foresight of the early city fathers. I have before me articles written in 1860-1862, in which the writers deplore the lack of system shown in the early planning of the city; the failure to grasp the full opportunities of our site, the mean and narrow streets and our stifled areas. But now the man of 1862 himself stands pilloried in the dock for judgment. And what is our verdict? We can find it in our hearts to forgive the hardy pioneer laying the foundations of an Empire almost isolated, threatened often with famine, surrounded by difficulties. But what excuse has the man of 1862 for not putting his hand to the plough? It was not too late then to have laid the foundation-stones of a city beautiful. The city was still small, the price of land was low. The man of 1862 stands condemned in our eyes—a critic who had the knowledge but not the courage to correct the mistakes of his predecessor. We now sit in judgment, and our judgment is deservedly severe; but ere very long we, in our turn, shall find ourselves arraigned before the tribunal of history. Now is the time to prepare our defence—now is the time to make sure of the acclamation of posterity.

Therefore, let us seek to uncover our buried buildings, and give them the setting and the approaches they deserve. And when we have occasion to erect new buildings let us try to secure for them surroundings most befitting their beauty and dignity. It is high time that the powers that be began to direct their attention to the attainment of these objects. Just at present they seem to be indifferent to the side of town-planning. The one spot in Sydney that lent itself most readily to artistic treatment without burdens and costly interferences with private rights was Queen's-square. However, seemingly without thought or plan, the Government erected the Registrar-General's Department—a beautiful building taken by itself, but one that will be very hard, both from its style of architecture and its position, to incorporate into an harmonious, artistic treatment of Queen's-square. It should have been built with a circular frontage, ready to link up on one side with the new law courts that are to be erected in place of the Mint, and with its front entrance closing the perspective from College-street. The semi-circle would be broken by Macquarie-street, would then continue on, and be carried over King-street by an arch, as in the Karlsplatz at Munich, the Government buildings at Whitehall, in London, and the Piazza del Signori, at Venice, and would end about where the present law courts now stand. In the centre of the square an imposing monument or fountain might be placed, closing the perspective from Macquarie-street and Hyde Park.

Another buried building that can only be inspected piecemeal from a distance of about 60ft is the Art Gallery, and this, although the Government had the whole Domain from which to choose a site. Surely another situation might have been found for this fine building. It should not have been difficult to place it where it could be seen from the harbour, and it might well have been placed at the end of a drive instead of alongside one. There is more pleasure in approaching the portals of a building, to see it first from afar, to watch its beauty and its dignity increase as one draws nearer, and to enter it with a feeling of attainment, than to be brought along to the side entrance, then suddenly deflected to the front entrance, and to enter the building without even knowing what it looks like from outside.

Unfortunately we are still erecting our public buildings with the same indifference to effective placing and artistic treatment. Every building that is erected nowadays in accordance with the hide-bound conventions of our early planners is another opportunity lost and another difficulty cast in the path of future town planners. We see at this very moment the offices of the Department of Public Instruction being erected on an island in what is already one of the most congested sites of the city—crowding the Lands office on one side, a wool store on the other, a terrace on the third, and so closed in by narrow, dirty streets that it will be only visible in its entirety from an aeroplane. If the Government is going to persist in building on sites like this, by all means let us have temporary structures of galvanised iron like the building in Phillip-street, and leave to future and more enlightened statesmen the opportunity of choosing suitable locations for our public buildings. For once built, it will then be too late to give them proper surroundings and approaches without wholesale resumptions at prohibitive cost.

The Quay—Sydney's front door—lends itself most readily to effective treatment at a comparatively small cost. There has been very little building on the Quay front these last forty years, and the expense of resuming the whole front would be small in comparison to what it will be when the property owners there realise the full value of their sites. The whole front is eminently suited for the erection of Government offices, hotels, theatres, shops, and, if we might venture to let our hopes soar so high, open-air cafes. We can take our plan from the Thames Embankment, the waterfronts at Ostend, Geneva, and a host of other Continental towns. Several plans have already been submitted to the City Council, which, like the man of 1862, is quite ready to bewail the mistakes of earlier days, but has not the courage itself to embark on this grand undertaking, though it has always shown itself possessed of a certain perverse energy whenever it found its path crossed by our Moreton Bay fig trees.

Another street about which there was much discussion some years ago is William-street. This street, for all its present tawdryness, has all the potentialities of the Champs Elysees. Mistake me not, gentle reader, neither you nor your children will live to see a second Champs Elysees in our city, but future generations will hear your their meed of praise for rendering possible what they will enjoy. It is the ideal street, undulating at its beginning, and then rising steadily, until it reaches its crowning height, just at the end of the street, leaving the summit clear for the erection of some noble building or monument to close the perspective. If the street is widened a place will be required for the post-office and the savings bank, and the Commonwealth would be quite justified in erecting an imposing building on the crest of the hill. Spaces might be found in the widening for a double row of trees, the architecture might be controlled and systematised, and William-street would soon take pride of place among our finest streets.

Another idea that we might very profitably borrow from the Continent, is the street arcade. These arcades are met with all over the Continent, but more especially in the warmer countries. They provide a cool shaded walk during the heat of the day, and correspond in their uses to our verandahs, but, needless to say, they add a much better appearance to the street. Every traveller will recall the street arcades in the Rue de Rivoli and the Rue Castiglione in Paris, the miles of these arcades in Bologna, on slender palm-like pillars, in Florence, Berne, Naples, Madrid, and Genoa, not to mention almost the sole English example, the famous "Rows" in Chester. A novel method of street widening by making use of these arcades has been suggested by Inigo Triggs. "It is worth considering," he says in his book on town-planning, "whether the street arcade might not be more adopted than it is in the planning of streets and towns of the future, especially where the land is increasing enormously in value. If for example, in the case of widening a street, . . . instead of purchasing land at great expense on both sides of the road it might sometime be possible to confine the purchase to one side, and then only to the ground-floor premises, supporting the floors above, by constructing an arcade, thus adding to the width of the roadway by the width of a footpath; the saving in expense would be enormous, and in the event of buildings being reconstructed at a later date they could then be compulsorily set back." The suggestion seems to be a very practical one, and might be well worth the consideration of the City Council.

THE GREAT STRENGTH-MAKER

Let SCOTT'S bring health and strength to your children—make them well and keep them well during the danger periods of their lives.

You cannot help but realize that even children who are naturally strong need every care and attention if they are to overcome the blood, bone, nerve and chest weaknesses which threaten the life of almost every child. But, what about the child who is not quite so robust, or who has been weakened by previous illness, by overgrowth, teething troubles or other trials of childhood days? What about the growing boys and girls who have to bear the double burden of growing and learning?

Are they strong enough to resist coughs, colds, bronchitis and chest troubles? Will they be able to resist infection or fight against fevers, infectious diseases and blood weakness?

Statistics prove that many are not; and that these ailments take a heavy toll from parents who have overlooked the obvious danger.

Avoid the risk. Give your children—from the youngest to the eldest—a course of SCOTT'S Emulsion now. It will make them healthier, stronger and better in every way. It will protect them from serious illness at the same time that it lays the foundation of vigorous health and a sound constitution.

If you decide to give yourself the pleasure of watching your child grow strong on SCOTT'S—decide also to accept none but genuine to whichever part of the world you may go—there you will see the SCOTT fishman, the trade mark which serves to distinguish genuine SCOTT'S from all imitations. It is important to remember that, if the package you buy does not bear this trade mark it is not genuine SCOTT'S Emulsion.

North, South, East, West,

SOCIAL.

All contributions and accounts of weddings or other social entertainments intended for the "Social" Column in Saturday's issue should reach this office not later than Friday morning, and be fully endorsed.

During the week some large social gatherings, both public and private, have been held, and some three weddings have added to the rush of the season. Everywhere the dressing has been sombre and rich, as the cold weather has quite set in, though everybody is glad of the beautifully sunny days which we have had. The statement which was made public this week that our State is passing through a period of unexampled prosperity is one that, judging by appearances only, is easily credible, for the number of handsome furs worn seems to be on the increase every day. Not only are stoles, necklets, and muffs seen everywhere, but really magnificent fur coats are displayed. Many of these costly garments were admired at Admiralty House garden party. Furs are most expensive, and their price—even now, when fur sales are on—seems to be going up. For a quite moderate "set," consisting of a necklet and muff, a hundred guineas is not too much to ask. Even imitation furs are dear. Yet, without furs something appears to be lacking this winter to the prettiest frocks, while a good set will add importance to a plainly-cut coat and skirt.

In connection with the arrangements for the juvenile fancy dress ball next Friday, for which invitations have been sent out by Lady Edeline Strickland, the number of grown-up guests is strictly limited. The children are asked without their mothers or any other relations or guardians.

"Polo week," commencing the first week in July, promises to be very gay. The town and country matrons will give their annual ball on Tuesday, July 7, at the Salon de Luxe. The Civil Ambulance Charity Ball will be held on the 9th, and there are rumours of a polo club ball as well as of private dances.

Mrs. MacCabe, of Derraghampton, Darling Point, gave an afternoon party on Tuesday. A musical programme was contributed; the rooms were decorated with yellow and white flowers. Among the guests were:—Lady Barton, Lady Innes, Mrs. Gordon Wesche, Mrs. G. Fairfax, Mrs. Hemsley, Mrs. Fred Osborne, Mrs. Irving Keys, Mrs. Jenkins and Miss Judith Jenkins, Mrs. and Miss Dibbs, Mrs. and Miss Massie, Mr. Deloitte, Mrs. C. D'Ebro, Miss Busby. The Misses MacCabe assisted their mother in entertaining.

Mr. Chas. D'Ebro, a leading architect in Melbourne, and Mrs. D'Ebro, are paying a visit here at present. Other visitors from that city are Mr. and Mrs. J. Ledingham.

On Friday evening, May 29, Dr. and Mrs. W. R. Olver entertained a number of their friends at a dance in the Town Hall, Chatswood, in honour of their youngest daughter, Marjorie. The hall was decorated in Japanese style. The hostess wore a handsome gown of soft pink satin, shot with silver and cerise, tunic of black silk shadow lace, the bodice being formed of handsome trimming and pink tulle, with touches of pale blue. She wore diamond ornaments, and carried a posy of pink roses. Miss Marjorie Olver wore a frock of soft white satin, silver tulle tunic, and bodice edged with lace, encrusted with tiny silver sequins, and trails of lillies of the valley. She carried a posy of white hyacinths and lillies of the valley. Miss Oliver, pale pink satin tunic, and bodice of handsome Duchesse lace, pale mauve sash. She carried a posey of violets. Miss Dorothy Oliver, apricot satin, tunic and bodice of ivory silk lace, with belt and touches of pale blue. Amongst the guests were Mr. and Mrs. A. E. Hough, Mr. and Mrs. W. Gilder, Dr. and Mrs. Glennie Holmes, Mr. and Mrs. W. Ford, Dr. and Mrs. G. Greenwell, Captain and Mrs. C. Bennett, Dr. and Mrs. P. Cole, Mrs. Sam Nettleton, Dr. and Mrs. Connor, Mr. and Mrs. Maitland, Mr. and Mrs. Mackellar, Mr. and Mrs. Jones, Mrs. Tyson, Mr. and Mrs. M. Everett, Mr. and Mrs. Fraser, Mrs. Broadbent, Mr. and Mrs. Clarence Moss, the Misses Brooke, Campbell (Sutton Forest), Mathews, Maclean, Gilder, Connor, Nettleton, Bull, Greenwell (2), Broadbent, Kennie, Adams, Roberts, Gunning, Spanswick, Wright-Jackson, Bastian, Irving, Brockway, the Messrs. Gilder, Dr. Howard Greenwell Forbes, Bull (4), Watkins, Nettleton, Dowling, Dr. Lyell, Kingsmill, Upward, Smithers, Braddon, Springthorp, Selkirk, Gunning, Stanton Cook, Molesworth, Marsh, Roberts, Arnold.

Mr. and Mrs. George Bennett are leaving for England on June 8. Mrs. Bennett, a recent bride, is the daughter of Mr. and Mrs. J. D. Fisher, of Darling Point. Mr. Bennett is a son of the late Mr. Frank Bennett and of Mrs. Ashleigh, of Fernleigh, Rose Bay.

Leura residents are contemplating a fete, to be held next October, in aid of the Leura Institute. For this, Mr. Andreas has generously promised the use of his garden, which will then be in all its spring beauty.

A meeting of ladies met Miss Fourdrinier on Thursday at the residence of Dr. Clubbe, president of the honorary staff of the Royal Alexandra Hospital for Children, to make arrangements for assisting at the forthcoming dolls' carnival. It was decided that the stall should be under the direction of the wives and daughters of the honorary staff, and "flowers, plants, shrubs, seeds, floral dolls, and floral novelties" were chosen. The flower stall will be in the shape of a beautifully fashioned huge basket, with a large handle—a most novel and original idea. Mrs. Clubbe was chosen as president; Mesdames R. B. Wade and W. F. Litchfield as vice-presidents; Mesdames E. H. Rutledge and F. S. W. Ziolkowski as hon. secretaries; Mesdames E. Sydney Littlejohn and F. C. Rogers as treasurers; and Mesdames M. J. Plomley, d'Ombrain, P. L. Hinsley, A. W. Campbell, and Misses Bullock as committee. The army and navy stall will be a distinctive feature of the carnival. The committee are:—President, Lady Patey; vice-presidents, dress treasurer, Mrs. Crump-Johnson. The dress will be most distinctive—Navy, white naval dress, sailor collar, and head-dress of a silk Union Jack; Army, cream dress, three-cornered black velvet hat, with cockade and ribbone favours of red, white, and blue.

Mrs. Hastings, wife of General Hastings, of Bermuda and Miss Hastings are on a visit here.

AUSTRALIAN PAINTER.

EXHIBITION BY MR. PENLEIGH BOYD.

The work of Mr. Penleigh Boyd, a young Australian artist, who has recently returned to Australia, after a prolonged visit to England and the Continent, should prove of distinct interest. An exhibition of Mr. Boyd's paintings, both in watercolour and oil, will be opened at the Royal Art Society's rooms on Tuesday next, remaining open to the public until June 20. Mr. Penleigh Boyd, who was educated in Melbourne, attended the National School, there, under Mr. Bernard Hall, for some time previous to his departure for England. "I have not found," he declares, "any place where painting is taught on more thoroughly sound lines than in Australia, though I must say I think an exclusively Australian training tends to infuse a certain coldness into one's work. In fact, that was why I went away. I have been away for about two years, chiefly in Paris. After leaving Paris, my wife and I went south to Rome, Naples, and Venice."

Perhaps the chief characteristic of Mr. Boyd's work is his handling of atmospheres. This is particularly noticeable in a painting made at Mt. York, in the Blue Mountains, in which the rich glow of the sun-warmed rocks and the remote and quivering plains are seen through a "most pellucid air" that allows one to feel, without being able to estimate, distances. Similarity in his numerous Reisebilder from abroad, he is equally successful in suggesting the keen air, toned by a bright sun, of Paris, the warm, dry, dusty atmosphere of the Midi, and, though perhaps to a lesser degree, the genial sunshine ("morning water-gold," as Browning termed it) of Florence, seen from Fiesole, or the strange quality of air and light that commingles above the canals of Venice. For colour, also, Mr. Boyd has the requisite feeling, displayed with subtle charm in, for example, a delightful composition representing a green-clad point in Sydney Harbour, relieved delicately by the outlines of red roofs, and with one great white cloud looming beyond and above the shoulder of the hill.

Colour-sense, composition, and imagination are all evident, to a more or less extent, in this interesting collection. The gardens of the Luxembourg, Chartres Cathedral, St. Mark's, and many other places, have contributed their quota, and a painting of sunset at sea, with its darkening, troubled waters, and ominously lighted sky, is not the least fascinating or successful.

THE CHILDREN'S HOSPITAL.

EMILY C. BAXTER COT.

At a meeting of the Argyle School Old Girls' Union, held in the Fullerton Memorial School Hall last Saturday, to discuss the best means of completing the fund for the "Emily C. Baxter" Cot, the treasurer (Mr. W. Starkey) reported that the complete proceeds from the bazaar amounted to £230, a record sum for one afternoon and evening. The fund stood at £873 14s 6d, leaving a balance of £126 5s 6d to be procured to complete the amount of £1000 necessary to endow a cot in the Royal Alexandra Hospital for Children in perpetuity. Miss Kippax, an ex-Argyle pupil, handed in £12 5s, the result of a drawing-room sale held at the residence of Mrs. Neave, Burwood. This, in addition to a small sale in the room, left £106 7s 9d to be obtained.

The secretary (Miss May Milsop) announced that she had received an offer from an ex-pupil to give £100 to the fund if the balance could be made up in the room, but the donor did not wish her name to be given. This offer was accepted, and in a few moments the cot fund was completed.

NORFOLK ISLAND.

CONTROL BY COMMONWEALTH.

Norfolk Island will formally come under the control of the Commonwealth on July 1. The Minister for External Affairs (Mr. Glynn) stated the other day that the Imperial Order of Council for vesting the island in the Commonwealth, in accordance with the Act, was made on March 13, and arrangements had accordingly been fixed to bring it into force by proclamation at the beginning of next month.

At present the Governor of New South Wales is in charge of the administration of affairs. The chief ordinances dealing with the matter are, first, the one of June, 1856, separating the administration from Van Dieman's Land the second, of October 8, 1900, placing it under the control of the Governor of New South Wales, until other arrangements were made by the Commonwealth; and the final one.

The revenue of the island is made up of an annual grant from New South Wales of £800, a revenue of about £460 from Customs, and £274 from interest on public stock. This fund was created in 1869, and was vested in Earl Belmore and two trustees, and with accumulation it now amounts to £5200. There is a great disparity between the exports and imports. In 1912 the former were valued at £1513, and the imports at £9371.

In introducing the Acceptance Bill into the Commonwealth Parliament Mr. Glynn stated that he intended to interfere as little as posible with the people, except in the way of improving their conditions. There is scope forg reater shipping facilities, harbour improvemnt, and devlopment of external trade.

35 YEARS EMPLOYED BY THE AUSTRALIAN GASLIGHT CO. AS LAMPLIGHTER, ENMORE.

MR. JOHN UNDERWOOD SAYS CLEMENTS TONIC

gave him back health and strength after he had been told to make his will. He was plainly told in the hospital there was no hope, and that life had done with him.

THIS REMARKABLE RECOVERY TO HEALTH.

Mr. John Underwood, for 35 years lamp-lighter in the employ of the Australian Gaslight Company, writes this letter from his home, 35 Juliet-street, Marrickville. His present health is the wonder of those who knew him three years ago, as he was so ill from general debility, that he was given up by his friends and relatives, and sent into Prince Alfred Hospital. Whilst there, he states he was told to make his will as he was incurable. Later on he was sent to Camden Convalescent Home, but returned to Sydney still ill.

By an accident he took Clements Tonic, and he continued to do so, getting better and brighter with increased appetite and vigor, until after three months he was able to go about his work again and still does so. He is at present in really good health, after being ill for nearly three years. Here is his letter:—

CLEMENTS TONIC, LTD.,

"About two and a half years ago I was ill from general debility. I was told a country change would do me good.

"I went to Inverell but returned no better and consulted a specialist, who said I was practically done for. Afterwards I was sent into Prince Alfred Hospital, and was there seven weeks; then I was three months at Camden Convalescent Home. I was classed as consumptive, but there was a variance of opinion.

"After I left Camden I took many patent medicines uselessly, but by accident I took Clements Tonic. The effect was remarkable, for my appetite got better, I slept well, and for three weeks improved daily. After taking it for three months I went to work again and now feel really well.

"I recommend this medicine to all my friends and hundreds of persons in Enmore know this letter is true. I hope you will publish and use same for the good your medicine may do others.

"I am, Sirs,

"(Signed) JOHN UNDERWOOD."

The fact that this medicine is used so largely over the Commonwealth is proof of its great health-value. Its effect upon poor digestion, weak nerves, weakened constitutions, inactive liver, or brain-exhaustion is most remarkable. All Chemists and Stores sell it in the Commonwealth. Its use means health.

Valaze Powder and Novena Poudre

Mme. Rubinstein is the first complexion specialist to differentiate between the dry, moist, oily, shiny and normal skin, when advising the use of powder. To dust a "fatty" powder over a greasy skin would be adding fuel to the fire, while putting an absorbent powder on a dry skin would not only make it difficult to adhere, but it would aggravate the dryness. Mme Rubinstein, therefore, recognising the importance of these distinctions, supplies Novena Poudre, a "fatty" powder for dry or normal skin, and Valaze Complexion Powder for greasy, overmoist or shiny skins; each in three tints, 2/-, 3/- and 5/- a box; postage, 3d.

Novena Cerate

is an emollient skin cleanser without the aid of soap and water. When the skin is delicate or sensitive, it should be cleansed with Novena Cerate. It is rubbed well into the skin, allowed to remain on for a few minutes, and then wiped off with a soft towel. The result is a delightful skin bath, and the skin will be much more refreshed than if washed with soap and water. Price, 2/- and 3/6; postage, 4d.

Valaze Skin Tonic

tones and braces the skin, prevents wrinkles, and in every way makes for healthfulness. It is antiseptic, cleansing and soothing, a tonic in the truest sense of the word, and the skin responds to its action with astonishing rapidity. Price, 3/6 a bottle; postage, 6d.

Valaze Blackhead and Open Pore Cure

easily and quickly banishes every trace of this disfigurement. It closes enlarged pores, cures a greasy, coarse, overmoist, and shiny skin, and assists in preserving the health of the complexion. By its use the skin is perfectly cleansed, effectually braced and stimulated to healthy action. Price, 2/10 posted. No. "2," for more obstinate cases, 5/3 posted.

Valaze Liquidine

overcomes many undesirable conditions, amongst which are undue redness of the nose and face, greasiness, oiliness and shine, by acting directly on the pores, freeing them from over-abundant secretions, thus eliminating the possibility of blackheads, acne and pimples. Price, 5/- and 8/6; postage, 6d.

Valaze Snow Lotion

is a superb Viennese Liquid Powder. It cools, refreshes, whitens and preserves the skin, and imparts to it that soft, dull ivory finish that is so much sought after. It may be obtained in three shades, and it requires only a very little to impart to the face an exquisite softness of colour, pink, cream or white. Price, 3/6 a bottle; postage, 6d.

Valaze Lip Lustre

not only protects the delicate outer membrane of the lips from cracks, chaps and sores, but it is also the best remedy for these afflictions. To lips that are dull or blanched, Valaze Lip Lustre will restore the full and rich colour, which neither biting nor wetting can displace. Price, 2/-; Speciale, 3/-.

Novena Hair Destroyer

instantly removes the hairs without the slightest detriment to the skin. It is safe and pleasant to use, and leaves a delightfully cool sensation which is so different to the usual effect of other depilatories. Price, 5/6; postage, 6d.

will be found of great benefit when used in conjunction with Novena Hair Destroyer. It should be applied after the Hair Destroyer has been removed, as it soothes, softens, whitens and preserves the skin. It is also delightful for evening use for the neck, shoulders and arms. It imparts a beautiful whiteness which remains on for hours, and which cannot be displaced by heat, perspiration or moistness. Price, 2/- and 3/6; postage, 4d.

These hints are for home treatment, while at the Valaze Massage Institute a method of facial massage is carried on, which will work wonders, and what is more, the good effects are lasting. By this treatment you can become rid of wrinkles, lines, crowsfeet, weariness, and the skin becomes revitalised, strengthened, purified and beautified. All obstacles to complexion beauty are removed. Mme. Rubinstein's book, "Beauty in the Making," will be sent to any address on receipt of 3d. for postage. Valaze's preparations obtainable all Chemists, or Helena Rubinstein Prop. Ltd., Dept. AUDITOR.

GEO. CHRISTIE, Esq., F.I.A.V., Public Accountant, Mutual Life-building, 14 Martin-place, Sydney.

OBJECTS OF THE COMPANY.

1. To carry on the business of Brick, Tile, and Pipe making at Five Dock.
2. For that purpose to acquire from the Promoters by purchase 18½ acres of land situated at Five Dock, together with a strip of land adjoining as more particularly described in the contracts referred to herein.
3. To subdivide and sell part of the said lands.
4. And generally as provided in the Memorandum of Association of the Company.

LOCALITY OF WORKS.

The 18½ acres have a frontage of 493 feet to Parramatta-road, adjoining St. Luke's Park, known as Oakland Park Estate; and the acquisition of the strip of land will give 800 feet frontage to Walker-street, Five Dock.

It is proposed to retain 10 acres, which will suffice for 50 years working, and sell in subdivision allotments the remaining 8 acres on road frontages.

The site is only seven miles distant from the City, and the direct access by the Parramatta-road offers great facilities for the erection of Plant and the subsequent disposal of the Company's manufactures. The neighbourhood of Five Dock is rapidly developing, and it is anticipated that the whole output of bricks will be placed within the immediately surrounding District.

CLAY AND SHALE DEPOSITS.

On the land is a rich clay and shale deposit to a great depth as described in the accompanying Report of Mr. Edgar T. Mills, late Manager of the Clyde Brick Company, Limited.

The fact that the deposit is solely of clay and shale will save what is in most sites a very expensive outlay in stripping.

CAPITAL OUTLAY.

This valuable property has been acquired from the Promoters for £8000, who are accepting payment on the following terms:—

£1925 in £1 fully paid-up Shares in the Company.
£6075 in Cash.

SUBDIVISION SALE OF LAND.

The eight acres proposed to be sold is most adaptable to subdivision. Two road frontages will be available, the Parramatta-road frontage will have the value of shop sites, and those of the road at the rear of Villa and Cottage residence sites. The sale of this eight acres by subdivision should realise £5000; the value of the remaining works site of some 10 to 12 acres will thus be acquired practically for £3000.

ESTIMATED PROFITS.

The manufacturing profit has been estimated by Mr. Edgar T. Mills (see copy of his report herewith) at £9000 per annum on an outlay of £12,000 for Kilns, Buildings, Working plant, etc. Making liberal deductions for contingencies and provision for depreciation and Management expenses, there should be a yearly balance of £6000 net profit to pay large and regular dividends. And in addition to the profits of manufacture there would be the land-sale profits and annual interest and rents accruing from the sales of land.

APPLICATIONS FOR SHARES.

Applications for Shares should be made on the accompanying form and addressed to the Provisional Directors, c.o. J. F. L. Otton, Esq., Secretary pro tem., Ocean House, Moore-street, Sydney. Messrs. N. W. Montagu and J. F. L. Otton, as Trustees, hold application moneys for 1150 Shares received prior to the issue of this Prospectus. A Meeting will be called of those subscribers, and it is expected that those applications will be confirmed.

GENERAL.

The Registration, flotation, and preliminary expenses are to be borne by the Company.

The Provisional Directors may proceed to Allotment on Applications made under this Prospectus when in their opinion a sufficient Subscription has been received.

The only Agreements affecting the Company are as follows:—

1. Contract dated 9th December, 1913, and made between Thomas Henley, S. Davis, and P. J. Cashman of the one part, and Edward Darnley and Daniel Hurt of the other part.
2. Agreement dated the 12th day of January, 1914, and made between Edward Darnley and Daniel Hurt of the one part, and Neville Wharncliffe Montagu as Trustee for the said Company of the other part.
3. An Agreement dated 14th April, 1914, and made between Edward Darnley and Daniel Hurt of the one part, and Neville W. Montagu, as Trustee for the said Company, of the other part.

Copies of these Agreements can be inspected at the Office of Neville W. Montagu, Esq., Solicitor, The Banking House, 228 Pitt-street, Sydney.

COPY OF THE REPORT OF MR. EDGAR T. MILLS, Late Manager of the Clyde Brick Company, Limited.

I beg to tender my report on the clay and shale deposit situated at Parramatta-road, Five Dock, which site I have visited on several occasions for the purpose of examination, and have pleasure in informing you that your proposition for a brick works at this particular site is excellent.

The deposit is composed of the richest quality clay and shale for the manufacture of face and common bricks, also pipes and tiles. The site is in the heart of a rising district, and the facilities for transporting both bricks and fuel is ideal, inasmuch as the property has access to the main thoroughfare, and is on the road level.

Of the eighteen and a half acres contained in the area of the proposed site 10 acres can be worked for upwards of 50 years, while the remaining eight and a half acres, being well situated, will sell easily and profitably, returning a good portion of the outlay. The fact that the deposit is solely made up of clay and shale will dispense with the necessity of stripping, an operation both expensive and inconvenient, and yet so common in other yards.

A trial hole sunk into the deposit to a depth of 30 or 40 feet discloses an uninterrupted face of exceptionally fine quality material, and from calculations made I am assured that the face extends to a depth of 60 or 70 feet.

The plant herein detailed is capable of making and burning 225,000 bricks per week, allowing for one machine to stand by in case of emergency. The Patent Kiln will burn about 145,000 bricks per week, and the three Downdraught Kilns will average about 70,000.

Although the brick trade is temporarily depressed, the yards in the vicinity of the proposed works are experiencing considerable difficulty in coping with the demands for bricks; in fact, notice must be given to the contractors five or six weeks in advance, in order to secure bricks when required.

No trouble will be experienced in disposing of the Company's bricks for forty-five shillings at the kiln, and the face bricks at sixty-seven shillings. Considering that the district is yet young in its development, and the demand is great, the whole output should be placed within the district. Common bricks can be made at from twenty-five to thirty shillings per thousand, the estimated net revenue being from fifteen shillings to one pound per thousand. Not until the plant has been running for some considerable time will the cost of maintenance materially affect the price of bricks per thousand. These figures are estimated on the basis of the new award, which provides for an increase in the wages of practically every department. The profit per day for a full week's work should amount to £172 10s, or for the year approximately £9000, after the works are in proper going order. I have estimated the prices of the working plant as under:—

3 Machines—3 30ft Grinding Pans, Shafting, and Pulleys complete, 1 Friction Gear	2750 0 0
Engine and Boiler	2500 0 0
1 18 Chamber Patent Kiln (1 stack 150ft)	3200 0 0
	£12,000 0 0

I am, yours faithfully,
EDGAR T. MILLS.

J. F. L. OTTON, Esq., Sydney, Secretary Five Dock Brick and Tile Coy., Ltd., c.o. E. G. DARNLEY, Ocean House, Moore-street, city.

Dear Sir,—

I beg to hand you the following report on Land tested by me, on your instructions, for its suitability for Brick Works.

The land in question is situated in the Parish o Drummoyne, County of Cumberland, and is known as Murphy's Paddock. Its area is about 20 acres, and it is bounded on the South by the Parramatta-road, on the North by Hen and Chickens Bay, on the West by a Park, and on the East by a lane and Mr. Rickard's property.

I carefully examined the whole of the surface for any indications of change or dislocation, but found none, and am satisfied that the entire block is of the same formation. Having come to that conclusion, I next selected a suitable spot to thoroughly test the nature of the strata under the surface. With this object in view, a shaft has been sunk, under my supervision, to a depth of thirty feet. This I consider sufficient, under the circumstances, to prove the similarity of the shale to that worked in the neighbouring brickyards at Croydon.

After passing through a very little poor soil, the first four and a half feet of sinking passed through a whitish clay, mixed with a light-coloured argillaceous shale. This material is suitable for the manufacture of other products of the Potter's art besides bricks; for instance, sanitary ware. (SAMPLE NO. 1.)

This was followed by six feet of the white shale by itself, also an excellent substance for making the commoner kinds of delf. Like the overlying stratum, good bricks can also be made from this shale. (SAMPLE NO. 2.)

From a depth of eleven feet to a depth of eighteen feet the shaft passed through seven feet of a harder and much more ferruginous shale, which will make a valuable adjunct in the manufacture of bricks. (SAMPLE NO. 3.)

At the depth of eighteen feet this seam of shale, impregnated with oxides of iron, gives place to a solid body of greyish black argillaceous shale, which continues without further change to the bottom of the shaft, where it shows no signs of breaking off. (SAMPLE NO. 4.)

At this point I deemed it advisable to suspend sinking operations for the present, as, from my knowledge of similar deposits in the immediate neighbourhood, now being worked, and utilised for the manufacture of bricks, I considered I had sufficient data upon which I could form an opinion and give a reliable report. The overburden overlying the clay I have not mentioned, as it is very slight, varying from a few inches to about two feet.

Attached to this report is a sketch of the shaft, showing the relative strata referred to.

The next question I have to deal with is the composition of the different strata, and for this purpose I have made analyses of representative samples, which I give below:—

NO. 1.—MIXED CLAY AND SHALE. (SAMPLE DRIED AT 100 DEGREES C.).

Silica	50.31
Alumina	36.53
Lime	.65
Magnesia	1.40
Iron Oxides	7.87
Alkalies, etc.	3.24
	100.00

NO. 2.—WHITE OR GREY SHALE. (SAMPLE DRIED AT 100 DEGREES C.).

Alumina	38.53
Lime	.22
Magnesia	1.31
	100.00

NO. 3.—FERRUGINOUS SHALE. (SAMPLE DRIED AT 100 DEGREES C.).

Silica	46.31
Alumina	33.44
Lime	.13
Magnesia	1.10
Iron Oxides	16.43
	100.00

NO. 4.—GREYISH BLACK SHALE. (SAMPLE DRIED AT 100 DEGREES C.).

Lime
Magnesia	.87
	100.00

From the foregoing analyses it will be seen that the whole of the material is high-grade clay and shale, eminently suitable for the purposes of making bricks and sanitary ware.

The physical condition, which has also to be considered, I find answers the tests I have applied to it satisfactorily.

If worked with water, when ground, its plasticity is good; under fire it yields a hard, durable brick, which will stand the attacks of weather, and has a moisture resistant surface. The shrinkage on drying is slight, and the colour of the burnt clay is good, and can be varied according to the mode of burning adopted.

I have inspected the formations being now worked by adjoining brick Companies, and have no hesitation in saying that I consider your property equal to any of them, and shall not be surprised if it turns out much superior.

Estimating a weekly output of 200,000 bricks, I do not think I am over-valuing the property when I put it a life of fifty years. In fact, I am probably considerably under-valuing it.

TO SUM UP:—The proposition is a good one. There is nothing at present before the public which offers such a good permanent investment for their capital, with such immediate prospects of a highly remunerative return.

Bricks are scarce, brickmakers have difficulty in filling their orders, and GOOD BRICK-MAKING GROUND WITH A GOOD SUPPLY OF GOOD MATERIAL is even scarcer.

Yours faithfully,
F. H. MOLESWORTH, F.C.S., F.G.S., Etc.

TARIFF INQUIRY.

DUTIES ON PAPER.

The whole of yesterday was again occupied by the Interstate Commission in taking evidence relative to the duties on paper, etc., more especially in regard to cardboard, strawboard, etc., used in the manufacture of boxes.

Robert G. Nall, managing director of Fuerth and Nall, Ltd., manufacturing stationers and cardboard box manufacturers, said he was named by the Master Printers' Association to give evidence re strawboards, millboards, Manila boards, etc., cardboard boxes and cartons, and paper used for making cardboard. With regard to any boards not made in Australia, he asked for the duty to be removed, so that they might come in free. He was not opposed to any reasonable duty being levied on cardboards manufactured in Australia. He sent his waste away at one time to Melbourne, but on account of freight the Melbourne people declined to take it. His waste now, amounting to 4 or 5 tons a week, went to the Cumberland mills. He gave the waste away for nothing, and was glad to get rid of it. He considered 25 per cent. a fair duty on strawboard. Pasteboard was not made in Australia, but he understood that the Commonwealth Mills were about to manufacture it. If they did, then he would ask for a duty of 20 per cent.; if not, he would ask for pasteboard to be admitted free. Only the Commonwealth Mills could touch the manufacture of pasteboard. He supported the increase of duty on tags. At the present time the duty on brown paper was £5 a ton; he considered this too high for a brown paper worth £7 5s f.o.b. A good craft paper was worth £14 a ton f.o.b. The Sydney paper-mills ought to be able to put out 60 tons a week, and as they were asking for an increase in the duty to £10 a ton, it meant they were making for £600 duty a week. He would be agreeable to the total removal of duties on boxes, provided the raw material were allowed in free. He started his business under freetrade, and found no difficulty in going ahead then. He was trying to open up a business in the indoor games by manufacturing the boards, but the duty on the raw material was 42 per cent., whereas the completed article could be imported under a duty of 25 per cent. Even though the duty were doubled, he did not think it would keep out the jewellery and chemist boxes. He did not think that one of these boxes was being manufactured in Sydney to-day. For ten years his firm manufactured £200 worth of mantle boxes a month for one firm; now they did not do anything in the line, because that firm found they could import just as cheaply as he could manufacture and sell them. He asked for a duty of 50 per cent. on cartons or collapsible boxes. Sulphite papers were not made in Australia, and he asked that they be admitted free. He asked that the duty on glue be made 20 per cent., instead of 2d and 1½d per lb. First-class glue should be made in Australia, for they had all the materials here for its manufacture.

H. B. Silberberg, importer of scientific apparatus, asked for the removal of the duty on filter paper cut in circles.

Frederick William Thorton, secretary of the Australian Bookbinders and Paper-rulers' Association, said that on an average eight bookbinders a week had been out of work this year. There were 280 members in the association; this included papers-rulers. No paper-rulers were out of work. He believed the introduction of the loose leaf instead of the bound ledger had been the means of keeping the paper-rulers at work. He was of the opinion there were paper-rulers and bookbinders here to do the work of account books if the manufacture of this work went on. They were having new arrivals here every month. He knew of the arrival of two bookbinders from oversea in the last two weeks. Had the Government Printer not absorbed 40 of the bookbinders in the last four years, they would have had a large number of men out of employment. On account of the unemployment, he asked for an increased duty on account books and copying letter books.

Thomas H. Stephen, manager of the Colonial Paper Company, said he was opposing the application for an increase of duty on carpet felt paper.

Robert H. York, secretary of the N.S.W. Typographical Association, said there were over 2000 members in the State. He was asking for an increase in the present duty on printed matter. The object was to keep the work in the State. Apart from Wise's Directory, he knew of no work that was printed outside Australia for an Australian firm.

Joseph Meek, managing director of Lever Bros. (Australia), Ltd., asked for the free entry of all raw material concerned in the manufacture of soap. He wished for the removal of the duty on greyboards, wood pulp board, strawboards, and sulphite paper. Australia could make as good greyboard as any in the world. He had tested the board manufactured by Mr. Sands, and found it equal to the board they were importing from the United Kingdom. If they put a duty on greyboard of £4 a ton, they must increase the duty on cartons; and if they increased the duty on strawboard they must increase the duty on cardboard boxes. Sulphite and tissue papers were not made in Australia. He did not think there should be an increase of duty on coloured posters. Even though the duty were 100 per cent., he did not think the printers would print them, because of the limited demand. He only referred to the big posters.

The commission then adjourned till Tuesday, when the evidence on the duties on paper generally, and catalogues will be continued.

THE FIG TREES.

TO THE EDITOR OF THE HERALD.

Sir,—In your issue of this morning, I notice a letter by Mr. W. Scott-Griffiths, commenting on the apparent inaction of the Town Planning Association in the above question. As a matter of fact the council of the association has given it most careful consideration, first at a monthly council meeting and then at a special meeting called on the spot, when, by a majority, it was thought advisable the trees should be removed. Mr. J. D. Fitzgerald thereupon gave notice to rescind the motion, which was discussed at the next council meeting, and the matter deferred to enable him to obtain a requisition signed by 20 members (according to the rules), requesting the calling of a special general meeting of all members of the association. This requisition came to hand yesterday, I at once took the matter in hand, and am now arranging for place and hour of meeting so that a seven days' notice thereof (in accordance with the rules) may be sent out to-day if possible to all members. May I correct Mr. Griffiths' statement that I promised at the town planners' luncheon to call a meeting. What I did say was that Mr. Fitzgerald was getting up a requisition to call a general meeting, and on receipt thereof, I would do so. I have no power to call one, except by a resolution of the council, or by requisition from 20 members. It is to be hoped that every member of the association, whether for or against the proposal, will attend, so that the definite decision Mr. Scott-Griffiths desires may be arrived at as speedily as possible.

I am, etc.,
JOHN SULMAN,
President of the Town Planning Association of New South Wales.
June 5.

TO THE EDITOR OF THE HERALD.

Sir,—Having read carefully the whole of the published details in regard to these trees, I greatly regret that so strong a case for their defence should have, so far, proved futile. I would suggest that our Lord Mayor should take the council to the hideous Dawes Point reserve. Here, amidst the dilapidated tree-guards, old pieces of broken fencing and the colossal rubbish heaps on its foreshores, which make it an eyesore to all persons with any taste at all, they could view the eastern side of the Quay. They will then see that one more monstrous sky-line will be added to Sydney's already numerous possessions in this direction, when the splendid background these trees form has been obliterated. That side of the Quay will then remind one of the alterations effected in an individual's face when some teeth are knocked out. By the way, why does not Mr. Richards ask his council to cut down the figtrees in the Macquarie-street Reserve? If this were done the dejected looking cannas, which evidently constitute the civic idea of adornment, would stand forth in all their glory. It is, indeed regrettable that our council is controlled by a majority of aldermen with inartistic minds. The remedy rests with the ratepayers. Let us hope they are not similarly afflicted.

REAL ESTATE.

NOTES OF THE WEEK.

Notwithstanding that we have entered upon the winter months, when real estate business is generally dull, and when Saturday subdivision sales are practically at an end, no one can complain of want of activity in the market. This week the indoor sales were again well attended, and a fair amount of business resulted. Private sales were also effected, and the total for the week was satisfactory to both buyers and sellers.

Messrs. Raine and Horne had a full saleroom on Thursday, when a fairly attractive catalogue was presented. Fifteen separate properties came under the hammer, and seven of these found new owners. A terrace of eight houses in Wells-street, Redfern, was sold for £2100. Araluen, a modern home on Redmyre-road, Strathfield, was sold for £1000. A corner block in the garden suburb of Haberfield, which Mr. Raine said was a credit to Mr. Stanton, the founder and promoter of town-planning in and around Sydney, was sold for £3 7s 6d per foot. Two cottages at Mosman were disposed of, one at £775 and the other at £650. To clear up No. 1 subdivision of the Greenhills Estate, at Narrabeen, the unsold lots were submitted. There were about 20 lots altogether. Eight blocks were sold at from 20s to 22s 6d per foot, while certain interests in 20,000 shares of David Jones, Limited, realised £1000.

The weekly sale of Messrs. Richardson and Wrench held yesterday was also very successful. The catalogue was not a lengthy one, but four properties changed hands. A shop in George-street West was purchased for £2650; a cottage at Marrickville, near the Enmore-road, realised £605. Allotments at Como were sold for £595; and four lots of the Hillier Estate, at Auburn, changed hands at 14s per foot. During the week this firm also sold a freehold property in Fitzroy-street, North Sydney, for £760. Four lots of the Gowrie Park Estate, at Punchbowl, were sold for £250, being at the rate of 20s per foot. Eight lots of the Highland Estate, at Bankstown, realised £356. A cottage on Hornsby-road, Flemington, was disposed of for £245. A block on the Austinlee Estate, Enfield, changed hands at £137, being at the rate of £2 15s per foot. The firm also sold three lots of the Delmar Park Estate, at Deewhy, at 22s 6d per foot, the total being £168.

Messrs. Stanton and Son this week disposed of four lots at Rosebery Model Suburb, totalling 160ft frontage, at £3 foot—£480. Also, a cottage with land in the same suburb was sold for £800. It is remarkable how this suburb is progressing. A new idea for obtaining a cottage and land at Rosebery has been inaugurated. Ten residents of Forbes have combined together to purchase a whole section in the best portion of the residential area of this model suburb. The land will run from street to street, about 1000ft frontage. The intention of this little syndicate is to build 10 houses—one for each member of the syndicate— on 100ft frontage each, and to erect the houses one at a time. The total amount invested will run between £8000 and £9000. Each member of the syndicate will invest so much per month until the whole scheme is complete. Other syndicates are being formed for the same purpose. It is a novel proposal, but as an investment the scheme is regarded as sound.

At Haberfield this week Messrs. Stanton and Son sold a double-fronted cottage, in Dalhousie-street, for £1245; a cottage and land on the Prospect Hall Estate, at Summer Hill, for £845; and a cottage at Belmore for £590. The same firm also sold 122 acres of land near Daceyville, with a frontage to the Bunnerong-road, at £90 per acre. This is evidence of the great progress this district is making. A few years ago the whole of this once sandy track was practically deserted, except for a few Chinamen's gardens and a duck farm or two; but now the whole area is fast becoming a residential suburb of extensive dimensions.

The manager of the London Bank of Australia writes to the effect that the price paid by his directors for the site at the corner of Pitt and Moore streets, inclusive of the betterment tax, works out at £1383 per foot on the Pitt-street frontage.

Messrs. Hardie and Gorman report having sold this week a terrace of three cottages at Waverley for £925, a cottage residence at Arthur-street, North Sydney, for £710; a block of land on Sydney-road, Manly, £350; three lots of Woodland's Estate, Lindfield, £410; and two lots in the Wollarabba Estate, Waitara, for £313.

The popularity of Bankstown as a residential area still manifests itself. Working men are buying home sites freely. Messrs. Arthur Rickard and Co. this week sold 20 lots in the No. 2 Extension Estate of Greenacre Park Estate, at prices from 10s to 12s 6d per foot. The land is some distance from the railway station. The same firm also sold this week quite a number of allotments in various other suburbs around Sydney. The total number of blocks sold exceeded 50. They were all disposed of on the easy payment system.

Messrs. Henry F. Halloran and Company report good inquiry for farm lands. During the week the firm sold several blocks in the Ferodale Estate in the Lower Hunter River district. The Batlow Estate also holds the confidence of the fruit growers, and areas are still changing hands at satisfactory prices.

Messrs. Hugh Duff and Co. included in their sales this week a cottage residence at Chatswood, £1025; and a block of five acres at Killara for £1175; also a cottage at Darling-street, Chatswood, for £600.

BLYTHSWOOD STATION SOLD.

Garvin and Cousens, Ltd., report having completed the sale of the well-known and highly-improved Blythswood Station, on account of Mr. E. A. Norton, in the Quirindi district, comprising 4571 acres freehold and C.P. lands, together with 4500 sheep, 200 cattle and horses, also extensive plant of machinery, the purchasers being Messrs. S. G. and P. G. Smith, of Tamworth. This makes the eighteenth property sold by this firm since January 1, making a total of well over £100,000 purchase money.

News comes from Cooma that the district sales this week include the disposal of Eucumbene Station, at Adaminaby, which was sold by Mr. E. H. Litchfield to Mr. W. Crisp, of Kaludah, Cooma. The station has three thousand acres, and stock thereon. Another property sold was Murrama Station at Umeralla, which contains about 8000 acres, with a portion stocked. This station was sold by Messrs. Garraway and Allen to Mr. J. E. Fitzgerald, of Tuggranong.

EVOLUTION OF SPRINGWOOD.

Upwards of 50 years ago convicts were making the roadway over the Mountains. It was not much more than a bush track. To-day it is the great Bathurst-road, over which motor cars travel at a high rate of speed. A man named Tom Bowling was in charge of a gang of these bond men. He managed to secure a large tract of land at Springwood, and on the roadside just in front of where the railway station is to-day he built a small wayside inn. It was but a wooden cottage, and still stands, and adjoins the public hall of the district. It is tenanted as a private residence. This cottage was among the first buildings erected in Springwood. It is now owned by Mr. W. Honeysett, a leading storekeeper in the district. Mr. Honeysett, who came to Springwood 25 years ago, tells the story of the evolution of that once fashionable and leading suburb on the Blue Mountains. "When I first took up my residence here 25 years ago," said Mr. Honeysett to the writer, "Springwood was a great place. Men like Sir Henry Parkes, Mr. Charles Moore, Sir James Martin, Dr. Norton, the late Mr. John Frazer, and others had their beautiful mountain homes and large estates within a mile or two of the Springwood station, mostly in the direction of the Hawkesbury-road. In fact, the elite of Sydney were always to be found in the district. Springwood was then regarded as the place on the mountains. Land values were almost as high for business sites then as they are to-day. But gradually those wealthy families left Springwood. All the men I named died, and their families became scattered. Springwood seemed to get a set-back. Those men were pioneers of a progressive mountain centre, and they had many followers, with a result that Springwood could not help making good progress. But, while such public-spirited men took an interest in its welfare, other parts of the mountains opened up with favour. Why, when I came to Springwood 25 years ago I was offered land where my shop now stands at £5 per foot, but the site where the big store is at Katoomba, opposite the station, I could have purchased at 10s per foot. It was a hill, and had to be quarried out, but I never looked with favour upon Katoomba in those days. No more did anyone else. We said it is better to pay £5 per foot at Springwood for a business site than go away into the bush like Katoomba and give 10s for a piece of the hill. But I see that the very site I refused at 10s 25 years ago was recently sold at £50 per foot, while the highest price for land in Springwood to-day, right alongside the station, is £10 per foot. For 15 years Springwood was very dull, but it has picked up a lot during the last year or two, and now it has a population of about 700 people. Buildings are being erected more rapidly, and on portion of the large tract of land owned by the late Mr. John Fraser extensive brick yards are in course of construction. A private company has started those works, and it is pushing ahead."

"But you must not forget," added Mr. Honeysett, "that bargains were obtainable in land buying here in the early days. The celebrated James Lawson bought land from a man named Rayment, who received a grant, and afterwards disposed of it to another man, who sold James Lawson 80 acres for £250. But any one could have got the lot from Rayment for £180. That land to-day is sold by the foot at a good figure, and on portion of it James Lawson, 22 years ago, built the Oriental Hotel, one of the best hotels in the district. I might add," said Mr. Honeysett, "that residential blocks in Springwood are worth to-day from £2 to £5 per foot. In fact," he concluded, "there is a good future for Springwood. It is an all-year-round mountain residential centre, but best in the winter, and, being handy to the city, people take advantage of its mild climate in the winter months. People who have lived here practically all their lives speak well of the climate."

SUBDIVISION WORK.

There were no subdivision sales last Saturday afternoon. The auctioneers had practically a day off. The season is fast drawing to a close. There are only two auctions listed for this afternoon. One is on the mountains. It seems out of place to hold a sale on the mountains in the winter months, but the ideas of the people in this respect are changing fast. There was a time when the mountains were deserted at this season of the year. But people are now realising that the winter months are really the best time on the mountains, especially on the lower ranges, from Springwood to Lawson. Adjoining Lawson, on the Sydney side, are Hazelbrook and Woodford, two centres beautifully sheltered from the westerly winds. In the month of June, 10 years ago, the first winter mountain sale was held at Woodford. When it was first announced, there were doubts expressed as to its being successful. It was a venture never tried before, but it proved successful beyond expectations, and now the same auctioneers, Messrs. Piercy Ethell and Co., will to-day conduct a sale at Hazelbrook. It is announced as a winter picnic sale, and judging by the applications for cheap excursion tickets, the attendance should certainly be a large one. The land is on the Bathurst-road, 300 yards from the railway station. It is known as the Oaklands Estate, so called because portion of the estate faces Oaklands-road. This estate was for many years the property of Mr. H. S. S. Bond and his brother. But they disposed of it recently, and the purchaser has subdivided the land before offering it to the public. This estate is a key to the district, and by being shut up for so many years, it largely prevented the district from spreading. In the subdivision, which Mr. Ethell will offer this afternoon, there are 60 blocks, including a number of business sites fronting the main Western-road, and villa sites, at the rear. The terms of purchase have been made very easy, and the vendors, to induce settlement, have decided that the first 10 persons who build houses on the estate this year will receive a substantial bonus. Another concession is the payment by the vendors of the stamp duty on the contracts. Under the new Act the purchaser at any sale must affix a duty stamp to the contract, of the value of 5s, and this must be affixed at the time the contract is signed. This always proves a nuisance to the buyers, who, in most cases, do not come prepared. At this sale they will be relieved of the trouble, for the vendors have undertaken to provide the stamps. Hazelbrook, which is 2210 feet above sea level, is a splendid all-the-year-round climate, and an excellent one for growing of English fruits.

Another sale to be held this afternoon will take place at the new suburb of Normanhurst, which has an elevation of 532 feet above the sea level. Messrs. Richardson and Wrench will offer the land at the instance of the Intercolonial Investment Land and Building Company, which has acquired quite a large area of the choicest land surrounding the Normanhurst Station, with the object of creating a suburb which will compare favourably with any other on the Hornsby-Strathfield line. The Normanhurst township has been subdivided into choice sites, suitable for business and residential purposes. It is situated right at the railway station. It must be said that Normanhurst is close to Hornsby, and also to Wahroonga, and should prove attractive to persons desiring a home site in a good district.

A sale is to be held next Saturday at Beecroft, when Messrs. Richardson and Wrench will offer an early selection of the Field of Mars. It is portion of the Herring Estate, well situated, and opposite the residence of the late Mr. Lesley Herring. These are really choice building sides, in a most health-giving climate.

There is to be a holiday sale at Katoomba on Monday, when Messrs. Goyder Bros. and Mr. A. Mark will offer 31 fine blocks in the Enterprise Estate. These are high, level sites, and they will be submitted on easy terms.

NO BED FOR FIFTY YEARS.

Ruben Stride, who is a familiar figure in the New Forest, has not slept in a bed for more than 50 years. He is now 70 years old. When he was about 17 he entered the Royal Navy, but after serving 18 months came to the conclusion that the strict discipline did not suit him, and that if he remained in the navy it would only mean constant trouble. He deserted (the "Daily Express" says), and for some time evaded capture, hiding here and there, until one day he was captured and taken back to be rigorously "broken in." As he absolutely refused to obey any orders, the authorities were at last thankful to get rid of him. The old man in recounting his experiences says: "I told 'em they could kill me, but I wouldn't do it." After his discharge he wandered about Berkshire and Wiltshire, working as a labourer, and for many years was employed as a carter in one situation in the New Forest. During the last 15 or 16 years he has found employment as a cattle drover. He declares that he "sleeps out" because he prefers it.

How One Family Solved Its Problem.

As Herbert Lester left his tram and turned his face toward home, his quick, nervous footstep possessed none of its old-time jauntiness and vigour. Though anxious to reach home he was not eager, that feeling of depression and foreboding of ill which accompanies the onset of a heavy cold had him in its grasp, and the world looked black, his prospects hopeless.

As he neared the little home they had so gleefully made for themselves after the honeymoon four years ago, his thought turned from business worries to nearer ones. "I hope little Bert is better this evening, what a fight that was last night when Grace and I stood over his cot and grappled with that dreadful attack of Croup. I'm afraid this Winter will be a repetition of last, just a series of dreadful struggles with the enemy who is trying to take our dear one from us; and aside from that tendency to Croup what a bonny boy he is! How unfortunate to have it happen just when my first big case is coming on—the case which will make or mar our future—for Judge Long assures me that if I win this case my prospects are very bright. With a steady income coming in, we can soon pay off what we owe on our little home and settle last year's Doctor's bill—to say nothing of this—and then for the future! But I'll never win, catching that cold last night has done it.

"My head is roaring and aching, my back and legs are nothing but pains, and I feel more fit for bed than studying law books all night. Yet, I probably won't get to bed at all—I am as anxious about little Bert as even Grace can be, and she will not sleep all night. What shall we do? As the Doctor suggests, move to a warmer clime and start life over again? Give up all I have worked for here in this windy City that I love so well? Would Grace be happy away from her friends, and would I have the heart to start afresh?"

Just here the cheery light from his own front door broke into the stream of his thoughts, and his wife's face smiled into his, with all the lines of anxiety which of late were dimming her young beauty magically spirited away. "Now hurry in" she cried, "Bertie is all right and fast asleep, as comfy as can be, and now it is your turn. Poor boy! I can see you're nearly dead with that dreadful cold and your sleepless night and you are worrying over your case to-morrow. I've a beautiful fire, a hot supper, and what's better yet, a cure for your cold."

"O, No! my dear, you are not magician enough for that, though something wonderful must have happened to create this sudden change—I left you tired, discouraged, and worn out with care and worry over Bertie—now you say Bertie is all right and I soon will be—explain yourself."

But Grace coaxed him prettily to a big arm-chair before the fire, drawing up her smaller one, and triumphantly produced a bottle and a spoon which she waved before him.

"This is the magician" she laughed "That has already made the wonderful change in Bertie, so that he is sweetly sleeping, breathing as easily as can be, and looking a different boy. Now take a spoonful first, and I'll tell you all about it."

Herbert couldn't refuse her pretty appeal, so obediently took the Medicine from the spoon she held. "Tastes good," he admitted, "I guess you didn't have to coax much to get Bertie to take that; what is it Grace?"

"I'll tell you!" she proudly cried, "it's Dr. Sheldon's New Discovery for Coughs and Colds, and they ought to add for worries and troubles, for I believe it is going to banish all ours. Aunt Grace telephoned me this morning that she was sending me a bottle, and wanted me to give it to Bertie all day, a half teaspoonful every hour. She told me how they had used it in so many different illnesses—Coughs and Colds principally, but often for more serious things like Bronchitis and Croup and in Measles, and they had never known it to fail. It came just after breakfast, and at first we had a dreadful time to get Bertie to take it after all the nasty stuff he has had, but when he once tasted it, he began to tease for more, and could hardly wait for the next dose. It worked on him like magic, and by night he seemed a perfectly well baby, so he had the last half spoonful after he was in his little cot, and went right to sleep. Now, if you will have your supper, then another dose of Dr. Sheldon's New Discovery, then you can study if you like till bed time, when you must have a double dose; and to-morrow morning you will feel fit to conquer the world."

"Well Grace, if that proves so, Dr. Sheldon's New Discovery will have conquered us, and one little family I know will sing its praises. Now let the good work go on!" and they gaily ran out to a delicious light, hot meal that put vigour into the man and made him eager to do battle with his books.

Next morning the sun shone brightly into a bedroom and lighted three happy faces so that the owners woke up and smiled at each other in gladness. Herbert Lester looked at his wife and saw her pardonably triumphant smile at the result of her treatment, for he had lost all trace of his cold, and after the night of rest felt ready to grapple with his case and win.

Little Bertie laughed a healthy child's laugh, then held out his dimpled hands, "I want my Dr. Sheldon's New Discovery," he lisped. As both parents rushed to kiss their darling, Herbert Lester said more to his wife than to the baby, "You shall have your Dr. Sheldon's New Discovery, my child, whenever you have the slightest need for it; and your father will see that you have it, and he will have it too, and we as a family will never forget how your Dr. Sheldon's New Discovery came to us when things were all going wrong, and made them right. All our friends shall hear about it, too, for it is owing to Aunt Grace's kindness that we are all feeling well and happy to-day, to her advice and our use of

PROGRESS IN AUSTRALIA.

THE DOMESTIC AGE.

This Utopian age, when every home and farm will be able to tap its electrical supply for all purposes of heat, light, and transport, was foreshadowed in the presidential address of Dr. J. P. V. Madsen before the Electrical Association of New South Wales, at the Royal Society's House, last evening.

The president referred to the development and expansion of electrical services all over Australasia, traced the new departures in State, municipal, and private enterprise, and voiced the necessity for an Australian Institute, and the great need for standardisation laboratories in the Commonwealth on similar lines to those in America and Europe.

Dealing with telegraphy and telephony, Dr. Madsen said these services in New South Wales represented a valuation of £2,000,000. There were 400 telephone echanges, with about 50,000 instruments in service, and 70,000 miles of cables. Much was expected from the installation of the automatic telephone. Automatic telegraphs also had been installed in Adelaide, and the results were highly satisfactory. In the sphere of wireless there was a chain of stations all round Australia, and the national advantages were great. He referred to the operations of the turbines, internal combustion engines, mixed vapour turbines, and reciprocating steam engines in their relation to electricity, the various transmission systems, and said the world's largest transmission line, was the 240-mile line to the city of Los Angeles, for which 6,000,000lb of cable was used from the Kern River. It was designed to transmit an ultimate output of 120,000 R.W.

Improvements in radio-telegraphy, Roentgen rays were noted, especially the possibilities before X-ray photography. A plea was made for the licensing of wiremen to protect the public from incompetent and unscrupulous wiremen, who were a menace to the industry, and to improve the status of the electrical wiremen. The Fire Underwriters' associations of the various States had also moved in this matter. The Technical College was giving careful consideration to the question of providing the necessary technical instruction to electrical tradesmen. Many disadvantages could be traced to the absence of an Electric Light and Power Act in the State, and it was highly desirable that New South Wales should follow Victoria and Queensland, similar to the English Act.

AUSTRALIA'S PROBLEMS.

"The decision of the Victorian Government to electrify the metropolitan railways," continued the president, "is a step in the right direction; one we hope to see soon followed in New South Wales. If one realises that in some of the larger American towns nearly seven times as much electrical energy is used per head as in the larger Australian cities, it will readily be seen how much room there is for further development. Rapid as has been the development in the past, we have only made a commencement to develop the enormous potentialities of this much favoured State. We can confidently look to the future showing progress out of all relations with the past. Our conditions are very similar to those in America. We are faced with high living and high labour costs, and the only solution of this difficult problem lies in cheap production of energy, its extensive utilisation, and the highest possible efficiency with our workers.

CHEAP ENERGY.

"Here we find ourselves in a rather difficult position. Developments of late have been particularly rapid, and have been accompanied by equally rapid rises in living and labour costs, whereas it has not been possible to develop the efficiency of our workers to anything like the same extent. The immediate future must see the introduction of a large number of labour-saving appliances into Australia. An almost unlimited field exists for the proper development of trade and industrial schools, and it is a matter for congratulation that the State is seriously tackling the problems in this direction. It seems to me that one of the big electrical problems in the future will be that of the bulk production and distribution of electrical power from our coal centres."

Dr. Madsen concluded by pointing out the great future before rural electrical undertakings.

CAVE ACQUITTED.

CHARGED WITH WOUNDING.

At the Central Criminal Court yesterday, before Mr. Justice Pring and a jury, Edward James Cave, 24, pleaded not guilty to a charge of having wounded his wife, Hilda May Cave, with intent to murder her, at Campsie, on March 27.

Mr. R. J. Browning prosecuted for the Crown; Mr. E. J. Spear appeared for the accused.

The Crown Prosecutor said that in 1910 the parties were married at Brisbane, where they lived till about 18 months ago, when they left there for Sydney. One child was born at Brisbane, and another in Sydney. They lived afterwards at Campsie, the accused following the occupation of a labourer in a jam factory. He got into gambling habits. In February last they agreed to separate. The wife went into service at a hospital at the Glebe, and had been working there some days when the shooting occurred. On March 27, in response to his proposals, they went out to Campsie, he having threatened that if she did not acquiesce he would make a noise. They went to the house of a Mrs. Smith, where some of their furniture was kept, and while there she was asked to go back, but refused. Cave thereupon pulled out a revolver and shot her, but she was not seriously wounded.

Hilda May Cave, after being told by his Honor that she was not bound to give evidence, said that when at Mrs. Smith's house the accused said to witness, "Say good-bye." Witness replied, "When I'm going home I'll say good-bye." This conversation took place on the verandah; then Mrs. Smith opened the door and they went inside. Accused said to Mrs. Smith, "She won't come back to me," and told witness to tell Mrs. Smith about the furniture. Accused then straightened himself, and, taking a revolver from his pocket, said, "Now for my revenge." Mrs. Smith told him he must go outside. Witness backed away, and the accused put the weapon through an opening in the door. She asked him not to fire, but he did so, the bullet striking the palm of her hand, which was raised to her forehead. Witness then got the door closed, but accused stood up on the handle, broke the fanlight, and again fired the weapon, the bullet being only a few inches away from Mrs. Smith. The accused then demanded that the door be opened, but Mrs. Smith would not do so.

Dr. Palmer said that he had the accused under observation at Darlinghurst Gaol, and he was of the opinion that there was no definite insanity. He might be mentally below the average, and was sluggish in his thoughts, and was rather excitable. He was probably not a firm, self-possessed person, but he was not insane.

Cave, in his defence, said that he and his wife had opened a little shop, and she refused to get the soft drinks. She did not get his meals regularly, and she also left him. There was no agreement to separate. Disputes had occurred about his wife going to picture shows. He had had five drinks that day. He denied having produced a revolver; his wife had grabbed him by the throat, and the revolver had been in his coat pocket. He never presented the weapon at his wife, though he could not say whether he pulled the trigger or not. Witness bought the revolver because he intended going to a station in Queensland. He denied that he had indulged in gambling.

The jury acquitted Cave of wounding with intent to murder, and, on pleading not guilty to another charge of maliciously wounding with intent to do grievous bodily harm, he was bound over to appear at such Court as the Attorney-General might determine.

A man who claimed to cure cancer has been sentenced at the Old Bailey to 15 months' hard labour for obtaining money by false pretences. It was said in defence that the Duke of Hamilton had sent the prisoner 100 guineas after his gardener was reported to be cured, and that a number of Norfolk farmers had so much faith in the "cure" that they had subscribed for the defence. Before becoming a "cancer expert" the man, it was stated, had been a private in the Army, a builder's labourer, and a county court bailiff.

LAW REPORT.

SUPREME COURT.

IN BANCO.

SHAREBROKER'S COMMISSION.

This was an action brought by the Wild Cherry Tin Mining Co., No Liability; against William Soutar, sharebroker, of Post Office-chambers, Pitt-street, Sydney, for the recovery of £625, which the company alleged was due to it through the defendant overcharging commission at the rate of 6d per share in connection with the flotation of the company.

It had been agreed that the action should be tried before a jury, and one was empanelled. After the case had proceeded some time the parties agreed to ask his Honor to discharge the jury, and to decide the issues of fact as well as law without the assistance of a panel. The jury was accordingly discharged.

Mr. Campbell, K.C., and Mr. Windeyer, instructed by Mr. S. M. Stephens, appeared for the plaintiff; and Mr. Shand, K.C., and Mr. Pickburn, instructed by Messrs. Perkins, Stevenson, and Co., appeared for the defendant.

The case, as stated by Mr. Campbell was intimately connected with the foundation of the company. The original owners of the property gave an option over it to two persons who agreed to form a company. By an agreement drawn up between the parties, the optionees agreed to acquire the option for £2500, and if, after examination, they decided to acquire the mine, they were to pay to the owners £25,000, of which the £2500 paid for the option was to form a part, and also give them 30,000 fully paid up shares in a company consisting of 150,000 shares. The defendant came into the company at this stage, and, when the prospectus was issued, his name appeared upon it along with the names of Dr. Newmarch and Messrs. R. T. Hough, S. Marks, and E. P. Johnston, as a director of the company. He was also named in the list of brokers. Apart from the 30,000 shares which were allotted to the original owners of the property, it was arranged that they should have a preferential right to acquire 25,000 out of the remaining 90,000 shares. A similar right was also given to the promoters of the new company. After the flotation a meeting of directors was held, and was attended by Dr. Newmarch and Messrs. Marks and Soutar. Hough and Johnston did not attend. Among the accounts tendered was one for £2250 rendered by the defendant for commission upon 90,000 shares at the rate of 6d per share. It was explained that the defendant was drawing the whole amount, and would make adjustments with other brokers in respect of their claims. The amount was paid. Some objection was taken by shareholders to the payment and, at a meeting held early this year, the directorate was changed, and on January 30 a demand was made upon the defendant for a refund of £531 5s being commission on 21,250 shares, which it was contended had been applied for by certain of the original owners of the property direct to the company, and, which the defendant had not been instrumental in securing. The company held that there was no agreement expressed in the contract, or in the prospectus that defendant was to get anything but 6d per share upon the applications, which came through him, and which presumably were influenced by him as a broker. The clause in the prospectus dealing with the brokerage had no reference to the shares which were taken up under rights conferred upon the original owners, and the promoters of the company, but merely applied to applications, which were invited from the public. Further, it was contended that no modification of the agreement or understanding ever took place, nor was it within the power of the persons employed in the negotiations from time to time to modify the arrangement.

The defence was a denial of liability, and that the money was paid in accordance with the terms of the agreement.

The case stands part heard.

NO. 1 JURY COURT.

(Before Mr. Justice Sly and juries.)

A JOCKEY'S CLAIM.

Cecil Shannon, a jockey, of Randwick, sued Major Claude Smith, of Molong, for the recovery of a sum of £260 alleged to be due to him in connection with certain horse and other transactions. The defendant counter claimed £169 6s 8d as one-third of the winnings of the mare Milfoil, leased by him to the plaintiff. Evidence in connection with the case was heard on Thursday.

Mr. Campbell, K.C., and Mr. Morris (instructed by Messrs. Barry and Norris) appeared for the plaintiff, and Dr. Brissenden (instructed by Messrs. Fisher and Macansh) appeared for the defendant.

The jury found a verdict for the plaintiff for the amount claimed, and on the cross action awarded the defendant £77 13s 4d.

PURCHASE OF A MOTOR LORRY.

Williams Ward sued to recover £300 from Henry Vincent Harris in connection with an agreement for the purchase of a motor lorry.

Plaintiff pleaded that by an agreement made in October, 1912, he put up £300 to be used for the purchase of a motor lorry to become the property of the defendant, and to be used by him in a carrying business in the Bega district. Plaintiff was to be repaid by weekly payments of £5, until the amount put up was wiped off. The lorry was not used in the Bega district, but in and around Duntroon. Plaintiff made several applications for payments, and in March, 1913, secured £10 on account. Later on his father received £2 from the defendant, also on his account.

The defendant denied the terms of the agreement, and alleged loss on account of plaintiff's refusal to drive for him, which he said he had agreed to do.

The jury gave a verdict for the amount claimed, less the £12 already paid.

Mr. Watt (instructed by Mr. A. J. L. Stockwell, of Wellington, by his agent Mr. S. Kearney), appeared for the plaintiff. There was no appearance on behalf of the defendant.

NO. 2 JURY COURT.

(Before Mr. Justice Ferguson and a jury of four.)

ALLEGED BREACH OF INDENTURE.

The case was continued in which Robert Brown sued Benjamin S. De Groen, principal of the firm of De Groen and Co., Ltd., claiming £1000 damages for alleged breaches of indenture provisions apprenticing him to the trade of a bamboo, rush, and pith furniture maker.

Mr. Cecil Teece, instructed by Mr. E. R. Abigail, appeared for the plaintiff; Mr. Sheriden, instructed by Messrs. John Williamson and Son, appeared for the defendant, De Groen.

The defence raised was that the plaintiff, by entering into a second agreement for 12 months, after the expiry of the indenture of apprenticeship, had waived any claim that he may have had under the articles of indenture.

The jury returned a verdict for plaintiff for £104.

(Before Mr. Justice Ferguson.)

RABBIT INSPECTOR'S APPEAL.

This matter came before his Honor by way of a special case. It was an appeal by Sydney Brackenreg, an assistant inspector under the pastures protection board at Tamworth, against the decision given by Arthur Ormonde Butler, P.M., in the case brought by him against Michael Francis M'Keon, and heard at Gunnedah.

Brackenreg laid an information against M'Keon, which set out that between December 18, 1913, and February 18, 1914, he, being the owner of certain land in the Manilla district, had failed to perform continuously the duty of from time to time suppressing and destroying by all lawful means, and at his own cost, all rabbits upon the land in question, in accordance with section 61 of the Pastures Protection Act, 1912.

The defendant pleaded not guilty to the charge, and it was dismissed on the ground that it charged him with doing something which was not an offence under the Act, and that there was no matter to support the information, and that the notice as inserted by the Tamworth Pastures Protection Board was not in accordance with section 61 of the Act, and was irregularly drafted.

The questions submitted to his Honor were: —Should the application to state and sign a case be signed by the person aggrieved? That, if signed by solicitors purporting to act for the party aggrieved, was such an application within the terms of the Act? In any such application should it state that the party aggrieved was aggrieved by the determination as being erroneous in point of law? Whether the magistrate's determination in dismissing the information was erroneous?

His Honor reserved his decision.

Mr. A. Thomson (instructed by Messrs. Creagh and Creagh) appeared for the appellant; and Mr. Pike (instructed by Messrs. Abbott and Allen) appeared for the respondent.

IN EQUITY.

(Before Mr. Justice Harvey.)

ESTATE OF M. LEVEY, DECEASED.

Hyman v Permanent Trustee Company.

This was an application by way of an originating summons, on behalf of Arthur Wellesly Hyman, for a decree upon admissions in the pleadings in terms of the prayers in the statement of claim respecting the estate of the late Montague Levey, of Wynyard-square, Sydney; the defendants being the Permanent Trustee Company of New South Wales, Ltd., sole trustee of the will of the testator, Ernest Waddell Perkins (solicitor for the estate), Charles Ernest Byrnes, Robert Le Neve Scrutton, David Benjamin, Edward Ernest Brooks, Maude Alexandria Bonaini, Lewis Davies, Cyril Anderson Cocks, and Thomas Buckland.

Mr. Knox, K.C., and Mr. Maughan, instructed by Mr. A. W. Hyman, appeared for plaintiff; and Mr. Loxton, K.C., and Mr. Clive Teece, instructed by Messrs. Norton, Smith, and Company, for all the defendants except Thomas Buckland, who was not represented.

Plaintiff prayed that, after providing for the liabilities of the estate, the assets remaining might be appropriated and apportioned among the beneficiaries respectively entitled thereto; that in the alternative, assets amounting to a one-fifth part in value of the estate might be allotted to plaintiff; that it be referred to the Master to settle a scheme for the purpose mentioned; that as far as might be necessary the estate be administered, and that the trusts of the will carried into execution by and under the direction of the Court.

The testator left surviving him his wife—Catherine Levey—and 9 children, who were named in his will, which was executed on January 20, 1882. The net value of the estate was estimated at £78,276 2s 4d.

His Honor made no order on the motion, the costs in respect of which were, he said, to be paid by defendants. Mr. Bedford, manager of the Permanent Trustee Company, was directed to sign the statement of defence, for the filing of which one week was allowed.

ESTATE OF SYDNEY BURDEKIN, DECEASED.

TRUSTEES ASK FOR CERTAIN ORDERS.

This was an originating summons issued by James Allison and Florence Hay, wife of Alexander Hay, pastoralist, of Coolangatta, trustees of the will and codicil of the late Sydney Burdekin, for certain orders, with respect to portion of the estate of the deceased; the defendants being Sydney Burdekin and Hazel Berry Hay (an infant), residing with her parents, at Coolangatta.

Plaintiffs asked (1) for an order authorising them as trustees to expend a sum not exceeding £20,000 out of the residuary estate of the testator in erecting new buildings for residential purposes, in accordance with certain plans, on portion of a block of land fronting Forbes-street, Sydney, forming part of the estate of the deceased; (2) for an order authorising plaintiffs to expend two other sums not exceeding £20,000 each in erecting upon the remaining portions of the land two new buildings for residential purposes; (3) for an order that the defendant, Sydney Burdekin, be appointed to represent for the purpose of the summons, all persons entitled to life interests in the residuary estate under the will and codicil; (4) and for an order that Hazel Berry Hay be appointed to represent all persons beneficially interested in the estate, other than those represented by Sydney Burdekin, and those who were parties to the suit.

Mr. R. H. L. Innes, instructed by Mr. W. H. Mahony, appeared for the plaintiffs; Mr. Sheppard, instructed by Mr. Mahony, for the defendant, Sydney Burdekin; and Mr Bethune, instructed by Messrs. Macnamara and Smith, for the defendant, Hazel Berry Hay.

The matter was adjourned to the 10th inst.

SOLICITORS IN LITIGATION.

Emanuel v Fraser.

The hearing was concluded of the application on behalf of Nathaniel Emanuel, attorney, solicitor, and proctor, of Tumut, and Adelong, for an injunction restraining Charles John Fraser, attorney, solicitor, and proctor, of Gundagai, from committing a breach of a certain agreement entered into between the parties on February 18, 1903, when they dissolved partnership, which had existed between them.

Mr. Langer Owen, K.C., and Mr. Maughan, instructed by Messrs. Boyce and Magney, appeared for plaintiff; and Mr. Adrian Knox, K.C., and Mr. Clive Teece, instructed by Messrs. D. M. Myers and Hill, for defendant.

Plaintiff claimed that it was a term of the dissolution agreement that defendant should not, as long as plaintiff carried on business at Tumut, practise in that district; or directly or indirectly assist any other solicitor in the district. It was alleged that defendant had practised at Tumut in breach of the agreement. The defendant denied the alleged breach.

His Honor said he would give plaintiff the benefit of an assumption that there had been a breach of the agreement, but beyond the assumption his mind was quite open on the question, there being so many authorities on both sides. He, however, thought that he should not grant an interlocutory injunction against the defendant, for the reason that such granting would indicate that the Court thought there was reason to suppose that breaches would be committed. He refused to grant an injunction, pending the hearing of the suit, and reserved the question of costs.

DIVORCE COURT.

(Before Mr. Justice Gordon.)

LEAVE TO APPEAL.

Hercules Anselm Zelamina, a hairdresser, carrying on business in Crown-street, Surry Hills, applied, in person, for leave to appeal to proceed, in forma pauperis, with his appeal against the decision of Mr. Justice Street, sitting in Divorce, on May 5, 1914, allowing applicant's wife, Annie Matilda Zelamina (formerly Nicholson), a judicial separation on the grounds of cruelty. Mr. Justice Street ordered the husband to pay the costs of the suit, and gave the custody of the three children of the marriage to the wife.

Zelamina now asked for leave to proceed with his appeal to the Full Court, in forma pauperis, on the ground that he had not sufficient money to proceed in the ordinary way. After hearing evidence of applicant's financial position, Mr. Justice Gordon made an order allowing the application, and allowing applicant to file and serve typewritten, instead of printed, copies of the notes of the evidence, within fourteen days, failing which the appeal is to be taken as abandoned.

Mr. H. E. M'Intosh appeared for the wife, and asked his Honor to make an order for the payment of some amount to maintain the children in the meantime. Zelamina said he could not undertake to pay anything, and his Honor said he could not make an order unless by consent.

DECREES ABSOLUTE.

His Honor pronounced decrees absolute in the following cases:—Lena Alice Collins versus Ernest Ivan Collins; Kathleen Stephens versus George Frederick Stephens; Jessie White versus John Joseph White, petitioner to have custody of child; Albert Ernest Humphries versus Amy Blanche Humphries (Christopher Evers co-respondent), petitioner to have custody of the children; Elsie Martha Von Keisenberg versus Albert Von Keisenberg; Caroline Emily Hampton versus Thomas Charles Hampton; Teresa Annie Mortimer versus Alfred William Mortimer; Maggie Kate Kane versus Herbert Kane; Mary Hannah Watson versus Charles Arthur Watson; Sylvester Francis Leslie versus Margaret Teresa Leslie; Charles Butler versus Alice Butler (Thomas Ensor co-respondent).

INDUSTRIAL COURT.

(Before Mr. Justice Edmunds.)

NEW BOARD ASKED FOR.

An application was made by the Hospital and Asylum Employees' Union of New South Wales for the constitution of a board under the Government employees' group. The employees sought to be covered by the board were assistants and attendants in the microbiological and other public bureaux of scientific investigation and research, nurses, attendants, and other employees in industrial homes, hospitals for the infirm, for the sick and for the insane. It was stated there were 2500 of them.

Mr. D. Guihen appeared in support of the application, and Mr. Forrest appeared on behalf of the Crown Law Department.

Mr. Guihen set out, in an affidavit, that the members of the applicant union were very dissatisfied with the existing conditions of employment. In many instances the wages were low, the hours long, and the general working conditions very unsatisfactory. The union had made a number of unsuccessful attempts to bring about an improvement in the working conditions of the employees. They asked that the application be granted to enable the employees to place their grievances before the tribunal for hearing and adjustment.

On behalf of the employees, Mr. Guihen nominated, as representatives on the board, Frederick Charles Glynn, storekeeper, Adastreet, Concord, and John Bede Cronan, attendant, of Albion-street, Harris Park. Mr. Forrest nominated, as the Government representative, William Cotter Williamson, M.D., Deputy Inspector-General of the Insane, Richmond-terrace, and deferred the second nomination.

His Honor expressed his intention of constituting the board, but deferred definite action until the nominations were complete.

INDUSTRIAL MAGISTRATE'S COURT.

(Before Mr. G. C. Addison, Chief Industrial Magistrate.)

CASES AGAINST SHOPKEEPER.

Arthur Cowley, 123 Parramatta-road, Annandale, was charged with a breach of the Shop Assistants' (Metropolitan Drapers) Board award, in failing to pay a female shop assistant, aged 21 years, the minimum weekly wage of 20s.

Inspector Durack appeared for the prosecution, and Mr. Rose for the defendant, who pleaded not guilty.

Inspector Isabella Golding stated she asked defendant what he paid the girl, and he said 17s 6d a week. Witness took a statement of the girl's hours, and they totalled 55½ a week.

Mr. Rose admitted that from October 30, 1913, to March 19, 1914, the additional half-crown a week was not paid to the employee.

In defence, the employee, Elsie Isenhood, stated she was employed by defendant at 17s 6d a week, and 2s 6d a week overtime. She was 21 in October last. She was paid the amount in full after Miss Golding called on March 19. It was a fortnight after that that defendant paid her £2 7s 6d. She did not notice that the receipt she gave was dated March 19. The money was for the balance of wages due after she turned 21.

No order was made against defendant, and £2 2s costs allowed against complainant.

For failing to keep correctly written time and pay sheets, Cowley, pleading guilty, was fined £5, with 6s costs, and for failing to exhibit a copy of the award, a penalty of 10s, with 13s 6d costs, was imposed.

DISTRICT COURT.

(Before Judge Murray.)

Clement Mason C.C. Co. v Centennial Park R.R., Ltd.

This was a case in which the Clement Mason Cinematograph Company, Ltd., of Sydney, claimed £89 17s 2d from the Centennial Park Roller Rink, Ltd., of Bondi Junction, for damages for alleged negligence with regard to the hire of a photo film.

Mr. James instructed by Messrs. Robson and Cowlishaw, appeared for the plaintiff company; and Mr. Milner Stephen, instructed by Mr. F. A. Davenport, for the defendant company.

Plaintiffs claimed that defendants hired from them the cinematograph film called "His Unknown Brother" on certain conditions, which included the terms that in the event of the film being damaged by defendants' negligence or misuse they should pay plaintiffs its full value, or the portion of it as assessed by them; and that defendants were to return the film in good order and condition. It was alleged that during the hiring or transit of the film damage had been caused to it to the extent of the amount claimed, and that defendants did not take proper care of the film, but returned it in a damaged and practically useless condition.

The defendants denied the alleged negligence, and pleaded that the film was faulty when they received it.

QUARTER SESSIONS.

(Before Judge Backhouse and juries.)

Mr. C. A. White, Crown Prosecutor.

DISHONEST EMPLOYEES.

Eric Uthred Jenkinson and Frederick Carl Asmussen, two young men, pleaded guilty to a charge of stealing from Mark Foy's, Ltd., by whom they were employed, at Sydney, on April 17, four clocks, three frying pans, a cricket scoring book, two primus stoves, 24 table forks, 17 moulds, six enamel plates, three teapots, two hammocks, six cake forks, two coils of wire, 20 pocket lamps, 13 saucepans, one salad cutter, six afternoon teaspoons, two electric lamps, two jugs, one tent, two flies, three cookers, one vase, 11 jardinieres, two kerbs, four trays, 12 dessert forks, 12 table knives, one bevel, 19 incandescent mantles, one griller, one cage, four gas shades, two sets of irons, one pair of carvers, one broom, and 13s 8d in money.

Mr. J. W. Abigail, who appeared for the prisoners, asked his Honor to deal with the men as first offenders, as it was their first lapse, and the evidence called as to character was greatly in their favour. All the goods had been recovered.

Both prisoners were sentenced to 18 months' imprisonment, but the sentence was suspended, and the men released as first offenders on entering into recognisances to be of good behaviour for 12 months. Each of the men was also ordered to make restitution to the extent of £10.

FALSE PRETENCES.

Arnold Foster Baynes, 25, pleaded guilty to a charge of obtaining the sum of £1 16s, by false pretences, at Marrickville, on April 6.

Baynes called upon the Rev. George A. Chambers and told him that he wished to cable to England for some money, and asked Mr. Chambers to let him have the cost of the cable, 36s. Mr. Chambers gave him a cheque for the amount, but Baynes sent a message which cost but 9s, and retained the change.

He also pleaded guilty to a charge of breaking and entering the dwelling-house of Louisa Slade, at Gordon, on April 28, and stealing a card case, a bottle of scent, two brooches, and a pair of spectacles.

Baynes was sentenced to two years' hard labour on each charge, the sentences to be concurrent.

GUILTY OF FIVE FORGERY CHARGES.

Francis Roy Myers, 21, pleaded guilty to five charges of forging and uttering cheques on city firms for £5, £1, £2 0s 6d, £7, and £3, respectively, and was remanded till Tuesday next to allow him to obtain evidence as to character.

CONVICTED OF FEATHER STEALING.

Andrew Thomas McIntyre, 28, pleaded not guilty to a charge of stealing 11 ostrich feathers, the property of Harry James Reid, at Sydney on May 25.

The accused conducted his own defence. McIntyre, in his defence, admitted having been in Reid's shop twice on May 25, the first time in the morning to have his overcoat mended, and the second time to get a price for the cleaning of a suit. He said that he had nothing whatever to do with stealing the feathers, and denied that he had made an admission of his guilt to the arresting constable.

The jury convicted McIntyre, and he was remanded for sentence.

ASSAULT AND ROBBERY.

Alfred Fitzgerald, John Charles Brown, and George Smith, who had been convicted on a charge of assaulting Patrick McCormick, at Sydney on May 13, and robbing him of £4 10s, a pair of socks, and a handkerchief, were called up for sentence. Fitzgerald and Brown were each ordered to be imprisoned with hard labour in Darlinghurst gaol, for three years, and Smith was sentenced to four years' penal servitude.

ACQUITTED.

Dave Milton, 23, was charged with uttering a counterfeit coin resembling a sovereign to Alfred von Dehn, at Sydney, on May 1, well knowing the same to be spurious. Mr. H. Everingham appeared for the accused, who pleaded not guilty.

The Crown alleged that Milton gave the counterfeit coin to Von Dehn, a taxi-cab driver, in payment of a fare.

Milton's defence was that he was not in the taxi-cab on the day in question, and a number of witnesses bore out his statement.

The jury acquitted him, and he was discharged.

THEFT OF LETTERS.

Wilfred Adrian John Pedler, 20, pleaded guilty to a charge of stealing two letters sent by post, the property of the Postmaster-General, at Sydney, on October 20, and also to two charges of stealing a letter on February 16 and another one on April 27. Mr. J. W. Abigail said that Pedler, while in the service of the Postmaster-General, had borne a good character up to the time of the committal of the offences, and asked his Honor to extend to him the provisions of the Crimes Act relating to first offenders.

Pedler was sentenced to 18 months' hard labour in Darlinghurst Gaol for the offence committed on October 20, but was released as a first offender on entering into recognisances to be of good behaviour for 15 months. On the other charges he was bound over in his own recognisance to appear and receive sentence when called upon.

FORGERY AND UTTERING AND STEALING.

George Harris, 20, and Harry Grice, 21, who were charged with stealing in the dwelling-house of Rene Desjardins, at Sydney, on April 5, a suitcase containing clothing and a Savings Bank pass book, the property of William Hervey Kaiser, and also with forging and uttering a notice in connection with the withdrawal of money from the Government Savings Bank of New South Wales, on May 1, to which charges Grice had pleaded guilty, and on the charge of uttering Harris had been convicted, were called up for sentence. Harris was sentenced to 18 months' imprisonment, with hard labour in Bathurst Gaol, and Grice to 12 months' hard labour in the same gaol on each of the charges, the sentences to be concurrent.

A LOAN ON FURNITURE.

Frederick Alfred Kohler, 26, who had pleaded guilty to a charge of falsely pretending to James Fleming that his household furniture was unencumbered, by which false pretence he obtained from Fleming the sum of £40, was sentenced to six months' hard labour in Darlinghurst Gaol.

BREAKING AND ENTERING.

Robert M'Laren Richmond and James Fraser, middle-aged men, who had pleaded guilty to breaking and entering the shop of James Gourlay, and stealing 15 feathers, a coat and skirt, a bodice, a pair of trousers, two hats, and two umbrellas, were each sentenced to imprisonment with hard labour in Bathurst Gaol for three years. Each prisoner was allowed leave to petition at the end of two years, but his Honor said he would not promise anything.

LITHGOW IRONWORKS.

I.W.W. OPPOSES STATE CONTROL.

At the last meeting of the Socialist I.W.W., the secretary, Mr. George Waite, was deputed to convey the following statement to the Labour Council and Labour Federation, and to the secretary of the Parliamentary Labour party and other bodies:—

"That the experience of the unionists of the unsatisfactory operations of the various State industrial undertakings warrants the most strenuous opposition to the purchase of the Lithgow ironworks, inasmuch as the extension of the principle of Government control of industries, would foster a bureaucracy and a sectional caste of workers, destructive of the class unity essentially necessary to abolish the wage system and to establish industrial co-operation on a democratic basis. Furthermore, the I.W.W. regards the advocacy of the nationalisation of industry as the quack panacea for solution of the social and labour problem.

WOMEN AND CIVIC DUTIES.

TO THE EDITOR OF THE HERALD.

Sir,—In making the statement at a meeting of the National Council of Women yesterday that women were eligible for election to the City Council I quoted correctly the qualifications of women electors contained in the sections of the Sydney Corporation Act, with which I associated the names of my husband and Mr. J. D. Fitzgerald, but I find that I was misled by a too condensed paragraph in the hand-book issued yearly by the City Council in my statement that women were eligible for election as aldermen.

The hand-book states that any citizen capable of voting for the election of an alderman, and not disqualified under the provisions of the Sydney Corporation Act, 1902, shall be eligible as an alderman. Women are not included in the Act among the persons so disqualified. I find, however, that in another part of the Act the little word "male" before "elector" still qualifies the rights of candidates for election to the City Council, as in the case of all other municipalities in the State.

I am, etc.,

KEPHALDOL

THE GREAT HARMLESS PAIN-KILLER

THOSE who suffer from the torturing pains of Rheumatism, NEURALGIA, SCIATICA, LUMBAGO, HEADACHE, INFLUENZA, or any of the hundred other painful complaints which attack mankind, will welcome the introduction of Dr. STOHR'S KEPALDOL, the great pain-killer. Unlike many other preparations, KEPHALDOL can be used with absolute safety, without the slightest fear of its affecting the heart's action or setting up drug habits. KEPHALDOL is not an experiment: it is the accepted safe, speedy, and sure remedy for any of the complaints indicated above. You have proof of this in the fact that KEPHALDOL has earned the endorsement of thousands of the cleverest doctors at home and abroad as well as that of the famous Vienna Professors of Medicine. So speedy is KEPHALDOL in action that in very many cases it produces the desired relief within a few minutes. That it can be used with safety is shown by the following report from Dr. Hans Fritsch. In reporting on a large number of cases, this specialist says:—

"We never had occasion to observe alarming symptoms in regard to heart collapse. I have, however, observed a number of cases in which Kephaldol effected an improvement of the heart generally."

That you can benefit positively by the use of KEPHALDOL is shown by the fact that it has been given in many cases to patients whose constitutions could not tolerate other remedies, in each case without ill after-effects. Remember, KEPHALDOL has not failed to alleviate pain, and in no case has it injuriously affected the patient. So if you are suffering from any of the agonising complaints mentioned, kill the pain and effect a cure with KEPHALDOL, for only in this way can you do it immediately and safely.

THOUSANDS WRITE IN THIS STRAIN.

KEPHALDOL CO., SYDNEY. BELLEVUE STREET, MILTON, QLD, March, 9th, 1914.

Dear Sirs,

I have been a great sufferer from Rheumatism during the whole of the last 20 years. In fact, it has become chronic. I have taken pills, patent medicines, and used liniments, electric battery, turkish baths, and so forth, and have been under the treatment of seven (7) different doctors, and, in fact, tried everything anyone would advise me to use. It is quite within the figure if I say that I spent more than £150 without any relief, until recently a friend advised me to use Kephaldol tablets, and I am pleased to say that after taking them for about 10 days I got relief. I continued the use of Kephaldol for 4 weeks, and I am pleased to say that I now consider myself thoroughly cured, and the Rheumatism is a thing of the past. Kephaldol was the only thing that gave me the least relief amongst the various remedies I tried over the entire 20 years. You may use this letter for the benefit of any sufferer, I am yours, very gratefully, W. BURDON.

"BANKSTOWN'S BIGGEST BARGAIN!"

Bankstown, as you doubtless know, is probably the most-discussed suburb of Sydney at the present time, owing to the decision of the Government to transfer the Eveleigh Railway Workshops there. The steady stream of interested workers who call at our offices every day is a sure indication that most of the workers are determined to OWN THEIR OWN HOME.

CONDELL PARK ESTATE, BANKSTOWN—

can be reached in thirty-five minutes from the city, while to workers in the workshops, when they are settled down at Bankstown, you can get home to even your lunch in a few minutes, instead of carting it along as you have to do now. This fine property adjoins our popular HEART OF BANKSTOWN ESTATE now completely sold out. The soil is level, rich, and excellent for gardens and vegetable growing.

LOTS 66 x 198 FT., FROM £31/7/- EACH!

Handsome allotments, you must admit, and a handsome bargain at the price asked; and a better money-maker for the investor, too, was never offered yet. Further, the railway extension to Liverpool has been surveyed to pass through the Estate. A rare chance for you—and don't delay, or you'll lose the lot. You may depend upon it, this offer will be taken up promptly by shrewd men and women.

EASY TERMS—TORRENS TITLE.

"SYLVAN SPLENDOUR OF SYLVANIA!"

There is no tittle of exaggeration in this description of the scenery and surroundings of this magnificent locality. Thousands know it's perfectly true, and the thousands who do not really ought to take a run out to this delightful spot. It is an exhilarating, refreshing, and most pleasurable trip, which you will thoroughly appreciate.

HOLT-SUTHERLAND ESTATE, SYLVANIA—

Is situate just across the George's River, from Sans Souci, and Tom Ugly's Point, and is one of the grandest residential estates to be found in the State, under an hour's run of the city, considering the high-grade quality of the position, a fact which has become impressed upon a very large number of people who are buying up lots on this estate with an enthusiasm worthy of the opportunity and the splendid value offered.

LOTS 63 x 155 FT., FROM ONLY £39/7/6

BY INVESTING IN A HOME OR HOME SITE AT ROSEBERY,
ROSEBERY,
ROSEBERY.

"The Go-ahead Model and Industrial Suburb."

The True Facts about Rosebery are these:—

1. It is modelled on the latest and most approved "Town Planning" experiences.
2. It is an "exclusive" area, which cannot possibly be adversely influenced by its surroundings.
3. The homes are most artistic in design, roomy, splendidly constructed, healthy, and cheerful.
4. A frequent and efficient Tram Service "feeds" the Estate, which is within 15 minutes run from the Central Railway Station.
5. The Sections are large, and all share alike in the freshness, and healthiness of the locality, which is constantly fanned by the sea breezes.
6. The Homes are priced to be within reach of every man in regular employment, while the terms are so easy that it becomes sheer foolishness to go on paying rent.
7. Home Sites are also obtainable on equally attractive Terms. £5 down, and the balance at £1 per month.
8. In response to the demand property has advanced in this section out of all proportion to the most optimistic estimate. From £2 10s per foot a little over a year ago, it advanced to the present level of £3, while from July 1 next £3 10s will be asked and readily obtained.

These are the true facts about ROSEBERY, and to the man who is keen and alive to his best interests, they surely are convincing. DON'T THEY AFFECT YOU THIS WAY, TOO? And aren't you going to make a determined effort to get quit now and for all time of this fearfully expensive Rent-paying? We are optimistic enough to think so.

"YOU CAN MAKE MONEY FROM THE START!"

It's what you need to keep things going nicely—"to keep the pot boiling"—while crops, fruit trees, etc., are maturing—just something that will bring you a steady income right from the start. Farmers don't go farming for the fun of the thing.

Consequently, they are just as keen on getting the biggest return from every effort or expense as every other man has a right to expect. You farmers, or you who are wisely turning your energies to Farming, therefore need the best that's going—the most productive soil, in the most accessible position, near railways, markets, and within "coo-ee" of nice, neighbourly people.

RICKARD'S HAVE WHAT YOU WANT!

You cannot find bigger opportunities—larger variety, or bigger values than we can give you, and in each instance you secure the pick of the properties in the most profitable positions.

NEVER MIND THE CASH—SEE US!

Many a good man has not the wherewithal to get the land, but RICKARD'S EASY TERMS will put you right—has placed many hundreds of now prosperous farmers in the happy position of owning their own. And you have an equal opportunity awaiting you. All you have to do is to call or write, and tell us what you want.

EASY TERMS—TORRENS TITLE ALL BLOCKS.

Only £1 down and 10/ Monthly (including interest, at 5 per cent. per annum) for every £25 purchased. Easy, isn't it? Try, and you'll be more than satisfied.

COME AND CONSULT US ANY TIME!

If you can't call, WRITE, and you'll receive the same PROMPT ATTENTION as you would by a personal visit—although the latter is the best for your own satisfaction. Open daily from 9 till 5.30, and every Monday and Friday Night till 9.

What would Sydney be without the Harbour? If THE HARBOUR beautifies the City, with its thousands of homes, how much lustre, grace, and charm must it add to the delightful Homes that have been built right on its foreshores. This train of thought has been impelled by reflecting on the many advantages, both as regards position and view, possessed by the really PERFECT HOME we are now going to tell you about. Situated on a fine eminence, standing out with dignity and pride, and dominating even its fair surroundings, is one of the most attractive villas to be found anywhere in this most desirable locality. Nothing less than the word "Glorious" aptly describes the panorama that gladdens the eye and cheers the heart, and is fully revealed from most parts of this house and grounds. It must be seen to be appreciated. No words of ours can paint for you a picture that will depict in the slightest degree the magnificence of the scenery opened up by even a casual glance through the window or off the Balcony of this altogether delightful Home. It is no hard for us to creditably describe this attractive property and so easy for you to come and see it, especially when we place one of our Motor Cars at your convenience, that it is quite a pity NOT to take advantage of the perfect weather, and our invitation, and thoroughly inspect this Villa, the equal of which is only placed within your power to purchase at very rare intervals. Built of brick on massive stone foundations, cavity walls, slate roof, tiled verandahs. It contains wide entrance hall, beautiful drawing and dining rooms, arched, extra large breakfast-room, 4 bedrooms, kitchen, laundry, bathroom, pantries, and every modern convenience. Ample sleeping-out accommodation for a large party. The rooms are all large and lofty. Most artistically finished. Furnished with the very best fittings throughout. PROSPECTUS
CORPORATION OF THE CITY OF MELBOURNE LOAN
FOR TWENTY YEARS FROM 1st JULY, 1914.

In exercise of the powers conferred upon the Council of the Corporation of the City of Melbourne by the Act 6 Victoria No. 7, the Council has resolved to contract a Loan of Three Hundred Thousand pounds (£300,000) by Debentures redeemable in Twenty years from 1st July, 1914. Such Debentures will be transferable by delivery, and will bear interest at the rate of Four Pounds Five Shillings (£4 5s) per centum per annum, payable half-yearly on the first day of January and the first day of July in each year.
The amount of the loan is borrowed under the authority of the Act 6 Victoria No. 7, an Act to incorporate the inhabitants of the Town (now City) of Melbourne, for the purpose of carrying out extensions of the Electric Supply Undertaking, City Abattoirs, City Markets, and other works which the Council is authorised to carry out.
The total loan indebtedness of the Corporation at the present time amounts to £2,605,000.
The Debentures will be issued in denominations of £1000, £500, and £100, as may be desired by tenderers, and applicants must state in their tenders the number and denomination of the Debentures they desire to receive.
The principal and interest moneys will be payable at the offices of the Bankers of the Corporation for the time being in London or Melbourne, at option of tenderers, but this option must be declared on the Tender Form. If no option be declared the Debentures will be made payable in Melbourne.
Tenders must be sent in on the form attached to Prospectus, in a sealed envelope, addressed to the Right Honorable the Lord Mayor of Melbourne, endorsed "Tender for Loan Debentures," and be deposited in the tender box at the Town Hall, Melbourne, and will be received for the whole amount of the Loan or any portion thereof until 12 O'CLOCK NOON, ON TUESDAY, THE 16th DAY OF JUNE, 1914.
No tender below par will be entertained.
Tenders must be accompanied by a deposit in cash or by bank cheque payable to the City Treasurer, amounting to TEN PER CENT. of the face value of the Debentures applied for, and if the tender be accepted in full or pro rata, the balance of the price offered must be paid on or before the 1st day of July, 1915.
Tenderers may, if they so desire, pay the whole or any part of the amount of their tenders or the whole amount payable for any number of the total Debentures allotted to them at any time before the due date of such payment.
The Council will pay interest on accepted tenderers' lodgments from date of receipt to the 30th day of June, 1914, at the rate of four and a quarter per cent. per annum, and tenderers whose tenders have been accepted must pay to the Council, in addition to the balance of the sum tendered, the amount of accrued interest on the face value of the unpaid balance of their tenders from the 1st day of July, 1914, to the date of payment of such balance.
The deposit of ten per cent., and all interest accrued thereon, will be forfeited to, and become the absolute property of, the Council in the event of any portion of the sum tendered remaining unpaid after the 1st day of July, 1915.
The Corporation Bankers (the National Bank of Australasia and the Commercial Bank of Australia) have jointly underwritten the whole amount of the Loan.
Tenderers of the highest premium will have preference, and to tenderers at the lowest price accepted Debentures will be allotted proportionately to the number applied for. Tenders at a price including a fraction of a shilling other than sixpence, will not be preferentially accepted by reason of such fraction.
Tenders will be opened at the Town Hall at the time before mentioned in the presence of tenderers or their agents.
Brokerage of one-half per cent. on the face value of the Debentures will be allowed upon accepted tenders received from members of the recognised Stock Exchanges of Australasia only.
By Section 22 of the Trusts Act, 1896 (59 Victoria, No. 1421), trustees and trustee companies, unless expressly forbidden by the instrument (if any) creating the trust or unless some particular mode of investment is thereby prescribed, are empowered to invest trust funds in Debentures of the Corporation of the City of Melbourne.
Copies of the authorising Act may be inspected, and all information in regard to the loan and repayment of existing loans may be obtained, at the Town Hall, Melbourne.
Town Hall, Melbourne, JOHN CLAYTON,
2nd June, 1914. Town Clerk.

THE GREAT GERMAN MANUFACTURER,
ED. SEILER.
(Maker to Royalty).
The Seal of Perfection has been bestowed upon the famous Seiler Piano by experts everywhere. It is without doubt the Piano of to-day. Other well-known makers have had their day, but "Seiler" is now well to the front with the greatest known masters.
If the general public of our State will judge Pianos on their skilled workmanship and tonal quality alone, "Ed. Seiler" must win.
The prices are reasonable, and terms can be arranged.

THE MULGA COUNTRY.

(BY J.D.M.)

The mulga country—the very word brings to the mind visions of wide spaces outback, of sunbrowned, wiry stockmen, stanch horses, and roving mobs of cattle. It stirs the echoes of over half a century of battle through good and bad times, against fire and flood; of famine and feast. For the story of the mulga country is the story of all Australian pioneering. It epitomises the history of the great wide west, the land that has ever called to the stronger-hearted and more adventurous souls amongst our race; where, perhaps, that most typical of Australia is to be found. Despite all the diversity of climate and condition, incidental to a land of such area, the national mind picture of Australia is one of the large open spaces in the west, where life is ampler, bolder, and far different from that of the city people. More than of mountain and valley or rich forest lands, the picture is one of endless plain and few trees, with perhaps a glimpse of a low range in the distance; the western country outback. And there is no need to be ashamed or to wish to change the typification.

In the early 'Sixties of the last century, the first intimation of the magnificent pastoral country lying between the Bulloo and Cooper's Creek in the far north-west corner of this State, and extending for many miles into Queensland in the north, and towards the west into South Australia, was conveyed to residents in this State by members of the different parties that went out in search of the lost explorers, Burke and Wills. Other parties in quest of new unoccupied land visited the country, but were not impressed with its suitability for grazing purposes, owing to the great distance from the centre of civilisation and the land being closely covered with the mulga scrub. It was not reckoned either safe or profitable for either sheep or cattle breeding, consequently they classed it as useless country best left alone, and it lay undisturbed until the great drought of '66, '67 and '68 devastated many hundreds of miles of land in the far north and west, and compelled stock-owners to seek sustenance for their starving flocks and herds. A few of them found their way out to the hitherto disrated mulga country, where they found they had inadvertently struck a "haven of bliss," where the mobs of animated walking skeletons soon recovered their vigour and fattened. Then the nutritive properties of the mulga foliage, the thick undergrowth of saline herbs, and the vines, pods, and seeds of the Sturt bean, that trailed thickly over the mulga, and when in bloom adorned the scene with lovely colours, and the atmosphere with sweet fragrance, was recognised. In addition, the mulga wild melon extended its long vines, covered thickly with large leaves, over a large area, and cattle and sheep ate the leaves greedily. A great peculiarity with the melon vine is that a sharp, hard-pointed shoot, the fruit spur, springs from the vine downwards, and penetrates the soil. The melon forms on that shoot and increases in size as it reaches maturity, when it assumes the shape of a large pie-melon, pure white, both inside and out. When ripe, or nearly so, almost a quart of cool juice, slightly acid to the taste, can be drawn from it. The place where it lies embedded in the soil is discoverable by the cracks in the surface soil. With no other implement than a stout pointed stick considerable exertion must be expended before the coveted melon is brought to the surface.

Throughout the mulga country the soil is of a firm reddish sandy loam, and not even a stone as large as a pea is found. The subsoil varies in colour, from a light brown to a dirty yellow, and is plastic, adherent, and fine-grained. The mulga attains a height of about eight feet from the stem. Close to the ground numerous branches radiate in all directions, from them many twigs spring, and the whole is densely covered with foliage. The leaves are long and narrow, with a pungent, slightly saline, taste, of which live stock are very fond. The foliage is highly nutritious, and fattens rapidly. Cattle, fattened on mulga, are able to travel long distances without impairing their condition. Bullocks that were driven to Melbourne and slaughtered contained in their paunches partly digested mulga leaves and twigs. The fat was of a rich, golden colour, and the beef, juicy and well-flavoured. The area in its natural state is better adapted for cattle than sheep, although if the country were fenced, and subdivided, sheep would do well. As it is at present a shepherd would lose them. Moreover, they would lose themselves. During the few years the writer lived there he never saw a dingo; nor even heard the howl of one. The district is abundantly watered with permanent surface springs and chains of ponds, fed by the springs. The majority of the springs are covered over by hollow clay mounds, which form a kind of crust as hard as dried cement. They are of many different shapes and heights; and at first appearance are supposed to be ant-hills. By breaking the crust near the base of the mound water, cool, pure and clear, flows out. The mounds above the springs are formed doubtless during the course of ages, by the sediment contained in the water lodging on the dry surface and hardening as the water evaporates, and constitutes an impermeable covering of what may be termed refined clay, which when pulverised, moistened, and well worked like mortar makes first-class chimneys and fireplaces; also good, hard, smooth floors for the dwellings and other buildings.

The great drawback is the total absence of timber for building purposes. Such as there is in use has been drawn from long distances. The long, straight gidgea saplings, and red gum slabs, rails and posts from the Paroo, Warrego, and Darling Rivers, respectively. The buildings are built of pise and roofed with thatch, made from a long, wiry grass that grows around the clay-pans and open springs. Considering the great fertility of the soil and abundance of water, which can be increased by developing the springs, the prospects of the region seem promising.

The first settlers out there, who have been successful were Messrs. Lamb and Sams, of Bulloo Downs and Norley; Moore, and Falkner, of the Springs; Stewart, Mulga Hills; Dowling, Milparinka; Durack and Cusack, on the Cooper, Sharpe, on the Collin Paroo and Sullivan, on the Paroo, all on cattle stations. A large area of that country is still unoccupied, and should offer a good opportunity to young men of small capital, not averse to 10, or 20 years' banishment from the comforts of civilised life, to obtain a competency sufficient to support them during their declining years. As regards the climate, it is healthy and, though at certain seasons it is decidedly warm during the day, it is always cool at night. In winter the mornings are sharp, bracing, and frosty. The writer, who lived out there for some years, never swallowed a dose of physic while there, and, though he had previously suffered from an attack of fever and ague, contracted in northern Queensland, he never had a recurrence of the complaint while in the mulga district.

The nearest centre from which supplies are obtained is Wilcannia, on the Darling. Cattle carry their beef, hides, and fat to market on their hoofs. In order to establish a large population and develop the resources of that immense sphere, railway communication between it and Wilcannia, Bourke, or Menindie, is necessary.

THE MEAT TRUST.

(BY W. ALISON.)

Mr. Harrowell is not endowed with authority sufficient to say definitely "the American companies (in Australia) are not a meat trust." No one in Australia can say positively whether they are or are not. The United States compelled the Chicago meat trust to dissolve, and the firms supposed to constitute the trust said they dissolved. Did they dissolve as far as Australia is concerned? The only precise information is in Chicago, and is unobtainable. The British Royal Commission on the "Beef Trust" reported that "the trust had not as yet obtained complete control of the British trade." No information could be obtained from any of the officers of the firms supposed to constitute the trust. The commission commented on the unsatisfactory way they gave or did not give their evidence. The officers knew practically nothing of anything in connection with the trust or the meat trade. The commissions of inquiry by the United States and Great Britain disclose the universal opinion in the existence of a trust. This collective opinion of the people of these two great countries is good proof of its existence, even if no positive evidence could be obtained. Positive proof by documentary or sworn evidence will never be obtained. Circumstantial evidence alone remains, in other words, inference, supposition, analysis.

For instance it is a curious coincidence that the American companies came to Australia at practically the same time. If only one company had come then it could be a "ring" if it acquired control enough. Two or more companies provide a pleasing fiction of competition between them. No one has asserted that they have as yet crushed out competition. The hypothesis is that they will do so. Everyone acknowledges that they have by their recent operations raised the price of cattle in Australia. But to assert that the American companies have been a "powerful factor" in raising the world's price of cattle is absurd. It might as well be claimed that they have raised the price of wool which has risen to a greater extent than the price of cattle.

As mere companies for legitimate trade no one in Australia opposes these American companies. But everyone must be against their becoming strong enough to be a trust or ring. The proposition of annually subsidised Government meat works is preservative and not destructive. It is the only alternative to destructive legislative interference; otherwise inevitable. Uneconomical propositions of such schemes as an "export duty" on all cattle exported from any one meat works, above a certain number, have been mooted. Such a proposal, if put into force, would practically wreck the industry of the American companies whose works are on a very large scale. If they are here as legitimate competitors (and annually subsidised Government meat works would ensure that they will never be anything else) then they should not be interfered with. No objection need even be made to the directors (who should be stockowners) of the Government meat works doing work for the American companies, while prices are normal. Their function would be to work on their own account when anything in the meat trade was not normal.

THE WOOL TRADE.

Most of the passed-in lots from the last auctions having been dealt with, and the quantity of local scoured skin-wools being smaller than usual, owing to the light supplies of sheep passing into consumption, stocks available for disposal by private treaty are unusually small. Fresh wools, coming forward for the next auctions are very light in volume, owing to the completion of autumn shearing, and the period for commencing to cut the new clip not yet having arrived. The wool-growing period over a large part of the State has been good, but a considerable area of Riverina and the western division has experienced dry conditions; consequently, while there will be heavy fleeces from the pastoral districts of some part of the State, the reverse will be the case in other large wool-growing areas.

When the season is good in Riverina, and conditions are normal in Victoria, Sydney draws a capital showing of sheep during the autumn and winter from the south-west. These sheep and lambs passing through the saleyards add to the stocks of skin-wools. This season, the proportion of Riverina sheep coming to Homebush has been very small, and, with moderate to light supplies from other quarters, has furnished fewer skins for fellmongery treatment than would have been the case if climatic conditions had been normal in the south-west and west. Very light supplies from Riverina are a factor in the small quantities of skin-wools at the present time, and will be the cause of steadying the volume of next season's clip. Fortunately the northern and north-western districts, as well as the central and southern districts, promise to furnish an excellent and well-grown clip, even if a proportion is weighted with yolk and burr. Queensland, too, gives excellent promise, and will make up for some of the shortages expected in the next clip through dry conditions in part of Victoria, the centre and north of South Australia, Tasmania, and Western Australia. Western Victoria and the south-east of South Australia are more favoured, and promise to cut a good and even clip. These conditions point to the probability of next season's wool production not being in excess of the clip for the season that closes at the end of the current month. There will be a material export increase this season compared to the previous year, and through the healthy state of trade, coupled with the shortage in production in other countries, notably Argentine, the clip has been more than needed, and really insufficient for the world's requirements. Having these features of probable production and a continuance of present consumption in view, there is good ground for looking to the maintenance of very firm values for some time to come, and no great easing when the 1914-15 selling season comes round in the spring.

The only time that really does play into the hands of consumers is during November and December, when supplies are rushed on to the market regardless of the bank rates or the disposition of buyers to lift the weight of wool offering at their best limits. Adelaide and Melbourne occasionally clash, and when heavy catalogues are offered simultaneously in all centres, if the supply gives any likelihood of being within the demand, a weakness is apt to be introduced, prejudical to growers' interests. If the clip is light in the southern States this season, and if growers in New South Wales have any faith in the second half of the weekly selling season, there should be a firmer position in December than was the case six months ago.

Yorkshire little dreamed when it was missing its opportunity in November and December that it would later have to stock up at pence per lb above the rulings at that time. It anticipated lower values at that time; and its latest expectation was for Continental wools to be catalogued at the last London sales. When the staple was in less request, as in some previous years, something did "turn up" Micawber-like, and enable the Bradford trade to get cheap wool. But to-day is not yesterday, and the conditions have altogether changed. Instead of the Continent sending wools to London for resale, they were strong buyers. The "Yorkshire Observer," of May 1, referring to that aspect of the position, said:—If the sales have furnished a surprise it is the strength and extent of the Continental competition. So far from sending wool over here for resale, the Continent is still an eager buyer. It has not been fully realised yet that last season and the season before the purchases of the Continent in the colonies and South America were less than usual, and that consequently the greatly increased purchases of this season have been filling up empty reservoirs—in other words, re-establishing "invisible stocks." Those who have come in contact with French buyers present at the sales have gathered the impression that trade in France is in a very healthy state, and in the case of Germany there is understood to have been a marked improvement since Easter. Merinos and fine crossbreds are the chief requirement of the Continental section, but they are taking a certain proportion of medium carding crossbreds as well. It is always a difficult mater to estimate how much America is taking, but known American buyers are operating fairly extensively.

It was with the better qualities that the demand was so strong in London, as well as at the last Brisbane and Sydney sales. Merinos and fine crossbreds are what Australian growers are mainly concerned with, and it is these wools that keep so well within the demand. In the report of the "River Plate Review," of the market at Buenos Ayres for the week ending March 30, it was said:—"Arrivals continue small, especially of wools of good quality. Many of the buyers are of opinion that the season is coming to an end, in view of the difficulty encountered in the way of fresh buying orders, and for this reason display but small interest. During the latter part of the past week the sales of wool were not easy to effect, especially if general or inferior classes were concerned, the demand being chiefly for certain types of wool specially required for the completion of buying orders. Some of the buyers continue to be interested in clear wools of good quality and in fine crossbreds, and these classes are still obtaining good values. Other wools, especially inferior, faulty, and general classes, are not in much request and fetch variable prices. Business in lambs' wool was likewise small, and the prices obtained rather irregular." At that time the exports totalled 219,899 bales, as compared with 235,325 bales for the corresponding period of the previous year.

Returning to our own local market, it shows no change; there is a strong demand for available lines at firm values, but supplies are at a low ebb. Rates current for the principal descriptions of the staple, may be given as follows:—

INTERSTATE MARKETS.

There is very little if any trade doing in Melbourne, and the next auction sales are arranged for July 5. Wool is arriving in quantity for the next series in Brisbane, commencing June 16. It is probable that some 45,000 bales will be catalogued, and that the offerings will include a good proportion of scoured. The Brisbane sales will be followed by auctions in Sydney on June 24 and 25, when about 12,000 bales will be submitted. These offerings will close the Australian public sales for the 1913-14 statistical year. The wools catalogued and sold in the principal centres compare as follows:—

SYDNEY WOOL RECEIPTS.

Autumn shearing being over, and the new clip season not yet commenced, means very light receipts of wool by rail at the present time. Queensland could contribute materially to the arrivals by boat, but the ensuing auctions in Brisbane stand in the way. There has been a slight increase during the week by rail, and a small decrease by boat, compared to the corresponding week last year. The figures for the week and season to date compare as follows:—

BRADFORD TOPS.

According to our cable of yesterday's date, the Bradford top market had little doing. On the corresponding date last year very little business was being transacted, and quotations for all qualities were unchanged. The course of prices for the principal counts since January compares with the corresponding period last season as follows:—

Messrs. Henry Dawson and Co., writing April 26, said:—"The situation in merinos at the moment is one that is causing serious concern in the fine worsted trade. The preference for fine goods is still very marked, and the quick absorption of this season's Colonial clip has been surprising. The Home trade is undoubtedly very badly placed as regards its stocks, and unfortunately there seems to be little chance of relief either in values or in any augmentation of supplies until the new clips arrivals towards the end of the year. It becomes increasingly evident that machinery cannot be kept fully supplied this year with fine wool, and one is forced to the conclusion that the machinery requirements of our industry have fully overtaken the supply of raw material."

STATE WOOL EXPORTS.

The return prepared by the Sydney Customs of the wool exported seawards from the State for the 11 months ended May 31, and compared to the corresponding period last season, is as follows:—

WOOL SHIPMENTS.

As a result of the last auctions, shipments during the past week have been on a fair scale; six vessels clearing the Sydney customs for the United Kingdom and foreign ports, with wool aggregating 14,050 bales, as compared with seven vessels during the corresponding week last year, with a total of 12,003 bales. The total shipments from Sydney for the 11 months of the current statistical year ended May 31 amounted to 838,158 bales, and to 13,502 bales from Newcastle. The vessels with quantities for the week, and total for the season to date, compared to the corresponding period last year are as follows:—

POULTRY FARMERS.

The date for the 1914 Poultry Farmers' Conference, at the Hawkesbury Agricultural College, has been fixed as Saturday, June 29, and the Railway Department will issue tickets at reduced rates, on production of a certificate to be obtained from the Department of Agriculture. Arrangements have been made for a special train to leave Sydney for Richmond at 8.45 a.m. on the day of the conference, and a special will also leave Richmond at 5 p.m., arriving at Sydney at 6.30 p.m. Applications to attend the conference are to be addressed to the Under-Secretary and Director, Department of Agriculture, Sydney, to reach him not later than June 10.

HORSE SHOW AND SALES.

TO BE HELD IN AUGUST.

Mr. H. M. Somer, secretary, advises that the horse show and sales of the Royal Agricultural Society have been fixed for August 1 to 7 next.

NEW ZEALAND PRODUCE.

AN ENCOURAGING OUTLOOK.

WELLINGTON (N.Z.), June 2.

Interesting remarks on the future of the Dominion's primary products were made by Mr. J. G. Wilson (president) at the opening of the Wellington Provincial Farmers' Union Conference. Mr. Wilson has recently accepted the position of chairman of the Board of Agriculture, constituted under an Act passed last session, and he is generally regarded as the sanest and most level-headed agriculturist in the Dominion. His idea of the industry in New Zealand is optimistic. Last year we reached within 80 of the highest tally our sheep statistics have shown. We have 12½ millions of breeding ewes (they have increased by 3 millions in 11 years). Taking the years from April 1 to March 31, of these we exported no less than 3,660,213 carcases—our highest tally. We had 24,191,810 sheep in the Dominion, an increase of nearly half a million sheep over the previous year; yet we exported during the same period more than a fourth of this number, viz., 6,376,615 carcases of mutton and lamb, which shows that, despite the fact that year by year we are exporting more carcases, we are still increasing the number of our sheep. Some authorities, he went on to say, seemed to think we had reached high-water mark in the number of sheep we are able to grow. He did not share that view. First of all there was a vast area of country in the centre of the North Island which he was sure would yet raise sheep in large numbers. When the proper system of working the poor and light pumice land was found (and it was a large area) it must increase the number. Such land could never be suitable for dairying, and must remain under sheep for all time. Then again, there was a large area of second-class country to come in, which would be devoted more or less to sheep, because of want of good access and the land not being good enough for dairying.

For these and other reasons he felt sure that we have not by any means reached the number of sheep that the Dominion will carry, and if that is correct we shall export more mutton and lamb.

EGG-LAYING COMPETITION.

PROGRESS AT GRAFTON FARM.

GRAFTON.—The 35 pens in the egg-laying competition at the Grafton Experiment Farm completed their second month yesterday. The chief results for the two months are:—Grafton Experiment Farm, 263; H. Long, 238; Harrison and Hewitt, 236; H. M. Masters, 225; H. Marr, 215; A. Hattersley, 209; W. Dockrill, 207; F. W. Kimpton, 205; others, from 185 downwards.

DEATH OF CATTLE.

TAMWORTH.—At Thursday's meeting of the Tamworth P.P. Board reference was made to the loss of stock which occurred recently on T.S. and C.R. 5682, parish Cooridoon, near Gunnedah. Out of 800 head of cattle about 120 died. The clerk at Liverpool Plains Shire Council has written to the Under-Secretary of the Department of Lands, bringing the subject under his notice. Some five years ago a still larger number was poisoned on this reserve, and at various times since small lots have been poisoned. In view of this menace to drovers and owners of travelling stock, the council was of opinion that a large portion of this reserve should be alienated. They would suggest that the department should throw open for settlement the farm on the north side of the road, reserving only sufficient for access to water. The council has also been informed that various reserves on the Namoi River were deadly to travelling stock. Inspector Brackenreg said he knew that there had been as many as 250,000 sheep on the reserve, and they had not been affected. There were no poisonous weeds on it. Mr. Phillips suggested that the cause of death may have been due to want of knowledge on the part of the men in charge. The stock inspector said it is one of the most important reserves in the district. The chairman (Mr. F. Payne) said that the Liverpool Plains Shire Council had come to the conclusion that the loss was due to poisonous weeds. The stock inspector (Mr. Dows) said there were no poisonous weeds on the place where the beasts died. There were thistles. If there were any poisonous weeds, they would affect local beasts as well as travelling ones. It was decided that the board was against the alienation of the reserve, and that it be pointed out that the directors of the board, the stock inspector, and veterinary surgeon considered that the cause of death was not poisonous weeds, but variegated thistles. It was also decided that Inspector Brackenreg should have the following warning erected at Boggabri: "Danger to travelling stock from variegated thistles. Drovers are advised to be careful in feeding hungry stock on this reserve."

ABOLITION OF P.P. BOARDS.

TAMWORTH.—Discussion took place at the meeting of the Tamworth Pastures Protection Board in regard to the Government's proposal to abolish boards. A number of reasons in favour of the retention of boards were put forward by members. It is stated that owing to the proposed franchise—one man one vote—the man having the largest interests would have the least say. Mr. Wyndham said that the board was simply the executive of stock-owners, who practically taxed themselves for their own benefit. Ratepayers found the whole of the revenue. It was very discouraging to landholders that the Government should step in and say that they should not manage their own affairs in their own interest. The chairman (Mr. F. Payne) said that P.P. boards, even with their limited powers, had justified themselves. If there had been no boards to administer the Act, rabbits would have been very much greater than at the present time. The P.P. boards had practically destroyed noxious animals of nearly every description. The Tamworth district a few years ago was swarming with noxious animals—wallabies, dingoes, etc. The Tamworth P.P. Board had certainly justified its existence. The stock inspector (Mr. Dowe) said at one time the kangaroo ate nearly all the squatters out. Mr. Phillip asked what were the Government's reasons for the abolition of the boards. The chairman said they claimed that the P.P. Act would be administered by shire councils more economically than by boards. They said that practically the same men represented the shire councils as were on the boards. This was not right, but they admitted that it was right in some instances, but not in the majority of cases. Mr. Phillip said that money was paid by stockowners really for their own protection, and he failed to see why the Government should step in at all. The chairman, Mr. Wyndham, and the secretary were appointed as a committee to place a suggestion by the directors in concrete form. Mr. Phillip said that some shire clerks had too much to do already without having to take on extra duties, in connection with boards. The chairman said there would be a big increase in the cost if the boards duties were transferred to shires. The boards had fought for years for increased powers. They could do better work if they could deal with travelling stock routes and camping reserves, etc. If they were able to spend funds in the destruction of rabbits on Crown lands great benefit would be effected. They all knew the hardships which were experienced by ratepayers, adjoining Crown lands, who were summoned for not exterminating rabbits, while adjoining Crown lands were breeding areas for the pest. Mr. W. Peek said all ratepayers he had spoken to were heartily against any interference with the P.P. Boards. The chairman asked whether it was right that a man who paid £150 should only have the same vote as the man who paid 5s. However, he would rather favour similar alteration in the franchise for the future election of directors than see the P.P. Boards abolished.

OLD VINEYARD SOLD.

SINGLETON.—The recent purchase of the Kirkton vineyard, in the Hunter Valley district, by Lindeman, Ltd., centres interest for the moment upon one of the historic spots in this State, and recalls the work of pioneer hands and the fruitful legacy which they left for later generations to profit by. Kirkton is not only the oldest vineyard in New South Wales, but the home of the parent stock from which spread vienyards of the Hunter, and from stage to stage all over the mother State. It was here that the late Mr. James Busby, in the year 1830, planted out over 350 varieties of grape vines, which he imported from France and the Rhine provinces, with the idea of testing the soil and climate of this country for their successful cultivation. And from the picked varieties, which both soil and climate abundantly developed, the whole of the vineyards in the district were planted. For over 84 years the Kirkton vineyard has survived the effects of time and change, and to-day there are still some of the original stock bearing as well as they did over three-quarters of a century ago. Curiously enough, the property remained in the possession of the one family until the present change, the effect of which will be to add another 200 acres of vines this year in adjoining land secured by Lindeman, Ltd., for the purpose. It is noteworthy that in all these years the Kirkton vineyard was never once attacked by the diseases which have ravaged and often destroyed other properties. The sandy nature of the soil in which the pioneer rooted the mother stock has always happily secured them from phylloxera. It may be mentioned that this is the fourth vineyard property acquired by Lindeman, Ltd., along the Hunter Valley within the last four years. The firm has centres on the Paterson River and along the Murray Valley round Corowa.

AGRICULTURAL SOCIETIES.

CULCAIRN.—The following officers have been elected on the Culcairn Pastoral and Agricultural Society:—President, M. W. R. Wilson; vice-presidents, Messrs. W. G. and J. H. Balfour, and L. Newton; hon. secretary, Mr. J. P. Orr; hon. treasurer, Mr. Newton. A grant of 80 acres has been given by the Government for the purpose of showground and racecourse. This will take some years to clear, as it is part of a travelling stock reserve, and the initial shows will be held on the Sports Ground. A committee of 20 have been appointed.

PRUNING DEMONSTRATION.

Arrangements have been made by the Department of Agriculture for Mr. Le Gay Brereton, orchardist at the Glen Innes Experiment Farm, to conduct a pruning demonstration at Woolomin during the afternoon of Monday, 8th instant.

SATURDAY, JUNE 6, 1914.

TO ARMS.

We congratulate both the Governor-General and the Federal Government on the announcement made by Mr. Cook in the House of Representatives yesterday. We say this not in any partisan spirit, but because we believe that in no other way than by the granting of a simultaneous dissolution of the two Chambers of the Federal Legislature could the impossible situation in which the Federal Parliament has been placed for over a year be removed. That situation can have been satisfactory to none of the parties interested in the good government of the country—to the Governor-General, in whom, as the representative of the King, the final interpretation of the Constitution of the Commonwealth rests; to the Ministry, responsible to Parliament and the country for the conduct of public business and the administration of national undertakings; to the members of Parliament chosen by the electors to legislate in their interests; to the general community anxious that the affairs of the nation should be wisely and efficiently conducted. In the last resort the people of this country have to rely upon their Parliament as a bulwark and a precious safeguard against anarchy and despotism. In every democratic community the Legislature performs this essential function, and although its fundamental purpose is often forgotten, it is desirable to recall this fact. Too often in recent months members of the Federal Parliament have ceased to realise that they were elected to legislate and not to wrangle, to make laws rather than obstruct their passage. If the Federal Parliament during the past year was to be regarded as a mirror of the nation's thoughts and desires, and mode of conduct, when one reflects on the unseemly scenes in both Chambers, the undignified personal recriminations, the futile endless obstruction, the petty squabbles and puerile disputations which have characterised the Parliament of the Commonwealth for twelve months, then, indeed, the Australian people have sunk very low indeed, and lack most of those things which make for a vigorous, dignified nationhood. It was impossible that such a condition of affairs could be allowed to continue; otherwise Parliament would become degraded, not merely in the eyes of the public at large, but also in the estimation of legislators themselves, and a by-word amongst the Legislatures of the Empire.

Such a position had, therefore, to be ended, and it could only have been ended satisfactorily in the manner provided by the Constitution Act and recommended by the Government for adoption by his Excellency the Governor-General. When Mr. Fisher, Mr. Hughes, and other leaders of the Opposition lay their hands on their hearts and protest against the prostitution of the Constitution of the Commonwealth, for the party ends of the Government, they ignore the scandalous proceedings which have occurred during the past two sessions in the Federal Parliament, and for which they themselves are very largely responsible. It was only the misconduct and subsequent suspension of a member of the Opposition, the unfortunate death of another, the chance absence from the House of a third, the petulant abstention from the Chamber of a fourth, that from time to time enabled the Government last session to proceed with its business. But when they had successfully overcome all their difficulties in the Lower House, Ministers had to encounter the insurmountable obstacles presented by a solid phalanx of members of the Opposition in the Senate. The majority in the Upper House were not content to reject or mutilate Government measures, but almost invariably they took the business out of the hands of the representatives of the Ministry; they truncated the financial proposals of the Government; and in every possible way showed how a triumphant Opposition might humiliate the Government of the day. It was not for this that senators were placed in positions of responsibility and paid a substantial salary, coupled with valuable privileges, and the one thing we believe the people will not tolerate is the introduction of the "Government stroke" into Parliament itself. No Government with a sense of responsibility, with a sincere desire to carry out its policy, approved by a majority of the electors, could take any other course than to endeavour to utilise all the resources, political and constitutional, at their command, in order to put an end to such a mockery of parliamentary government. The measure which was rejected by the Senate last week for the second time was intended from the first to be merely the means by which the provisions of the Constitution Act, dealing with deadlocks between the two Chambers, might be enforced. The issue between the two Houses is much greater than a controversy over preference to unionists in the public service. The issue between the two Houses and between the two parties was whether the government of the country was to be carried on at all, and whether Parliament was to be permitted to perform the functions for which it was created by the Commonwealth Constitution Act. In other words, the question which Mr. Cook had to submit to Sir Ronald Munro Ferguson was whether his Excellency would use the powers expressly entrusted to him by the Constitution, in order that the government of the country might be carried on with dignity and efficiency. We are convinced that the only possible solution of the difficulties with which the Federal Ministry has been confronted was by means of the simultaneous dissolution of the two Houses, for a single dissolution of the House of Representatives would have placed the Government in precisely the same position, even if it obtained a considerably increased majority in the Lower House.

However, both Houses are now to be dissolved, and it seems clear that the election will take place within a very short period, probably not later than the end of August. We concur with Mr. Cook in regarding the issues to be submitted to the electors, and the constitutional position which has necessitated the appeal to the country, as being of grave importance to the whole Commonwealth. The duty of every elector who desires to see the Liberal Government returned to power as well as to office charged with new obligations and responsibilities, and stimulated by an emphatic mandate from the country, is to do all in his or her power during the next two months to bring about that end. The necessity for enrolment is plain. The need for energetic support of candidates in many constituencies is equally certain. The six Liberal candidates for the Senate have been announced, and we have no doubt that candidates for the whole of the divisions of the House of Representatives will be chosen during the next few days. The result of the election will depend, as in 1913, on the results in this State, and a special responsibility attaches, therefore, to the electors of New South Wales in the approaching elections. We believe that the Government will be able to afford abundant evidence of their administrative capacity, their ability to present to the country a constructive programme of measures of public utility and national importance, and their determination to administer the affairs of the Commonwealth in the interests of the whole community, and not on behalf of one section or one class. With every section of the Liberal party united, with their organisation perfected, and with a vigorous campaign throughout the country, there should be no doubt as to the result of the forthcoming elections. The importance of the issues to be presented to the electors cannot, however, be exaggerated, for upon their determination depends the good government of the Commonwealth of Australia for some years to come.

A CANDID CRITIC.

"The best preservative to keep the mind in health is the faithful admonition of a friend." It is by remembering this aphorism of Bacon's that the employers and employees of Sydney will most easily be able to retain their equanimity upon hearing that the Swiss lady who has recently been engaged as a domestic servant is about to accept work as a seamstress, and intends later on to enter upon other avenues of female employment. The news that she has completed her term of domestic service will probably be received with relief by a considerable number of householders. No doubt it has been a comfort to reflect that amid a crowd of inefficient applicants one might be found thoroughly equipped and possessed of a trained intelligence. But even this vague hope has been darkened by the certainty that her services would only be a temporary blessing, and by the fear lest an inefficient mistress might afterwards be exposed in a book. Hundreds of self-conscious wives and fellow-servants will be delighted to hear that this new terror to house-keeping is about to be transferred to their husbands and brothers. We do not suppose that many of them will adopt either or both of Bacon's alternatives. "Reading good books of morality," he says, "is a little flat and dead. Observing our faults in others is sometimes improper for our case." But even the first of them would be gladly accepted in preference to the admonition of a friend who has had such unrivalled opportunities for discovering the truth as Mlle. Ruegg. Her book when it appears in a few years' time will be received with the keenest interest. But we can imagine some such conversations taking place in Sydney as are alleged to take place at Oxford after an announcement that a new instalment of the "Memoirs of Mark Pattison" has been taken away for publication from the Bodleian. Every one of the Rector's contemporaries, be his conscience never so clear, feels a tremor of alarm lest some sign of weakness has been recorded for posterity. The hints that this lady has given us of her book show that such fears will be groundless. Some persons may recognise themselves in types as Stevenson recognised himself as he listened to a first reading of the Egoist. But Mdlle. Ruegg's criticisms are both impartial and impersonal. She remarks on the lack of affection between mistresses and maids without attempting to distribute the blame for a state of things which Australians admit and deplore as sincerely as she does. It would have been easier for her to say that mistresses are to blame because they forget that their maids are fellow human beings, or that maids are to blame because they take no pains to train themselves, and care for nothing but dissipation. Fortunately she does not attempt to generalise on her insufficient data. A three weeks' experience as a maid servant with the opportunities it gives for intercourse and observation may be long enough for a trained intelligence to note contrasts and defects. It is not long enough to judge whether these defects are permanent or merely casual phenomena, or whether it is possible to attribute the blame for them to any one class.

Australians themselves are like the members of a family who fail to notice the weakness of one of their number until it is pointed out by a stranger. They have submitted to a change in the conditions of their home life without considering how to counteract it, or what effect it is likely to have on the national character. Mdlle. Ruegg notes the vanity of the lives of many of the girls and women of this city, but she does not note its cause, which is equally patent. People who have been deprived of an absorbing occupation are naturally likely to drift into an empty competition in forms of pleasure and personal adornment. In Sydney numbers of women have given up the absorbing occupation of looking after a home without adopting any of the pursuits which are now open to women, but which require education and intelligence. The aggregation of families into boarding houses and residential chambers must strike an observer as a change which has come over Sydney in recent years. The type of life it secures may be welcome to adults for a time, and is harmless to people whose characters are formed. But its effect on children and adolescents cannot but be harmful. It takes half the fun out of the life of a child to be without a house of his own, and a back yard, if not a paddock, to play in. At present children who live in the heart of London are better off than they would be in Sydney. They can run about in a square or in gardens, and romp with other children, whereas an Australian child must either go without companions or play in the streets. Half-grown boys and girls are in some ways worse off than children, because at a time when their characters are most easily affected they find their only recreation in public entertainments. They are getting the worst kind of training for the life which Mdlle. Ruegg finds in her own country, and in which she regards Australians as being noticeably deficient. The country is at the same time getting the worst type of population to carry on the torch from one generation to another. We are not quite sure whether the Mayor of Zurich meant to warn or to console his countrywoman when he told her she was going to a country without a beer garden. But we join with her heartily in her comparison of beer gardens with bars. The licensing system of this country is one of the most convincing proofs of the inability of Australians to take their pleasures rationally. In any civilised European country a man may sit in the open air and listen to music while he eats his meal and drinks coffee, light beer, or wine. In Sydney, in a semi-tropical climate, he sits indoors and washes down ill-cooked food with a black fluid called tea, or else goes into a public-house, where his presence is unwelcome unless he will consume a certain amount of alcohol. Our licensing system is copied from the system which has filled London with gin palaces, and is, therefore, established as firmly as the architecture of our public buildings. Even where it has been amended the amendments have been suited to the needs of any country but our own. Under the law at present in force a wide country district where accommodation is needed is left without a hotel, while one is left at every alternate corner in the city. If ever a Government had an opportunity to benefit the country and show its freedom from traditions, this Government has one in our licensing laws and housing conditions. But we are only following another national tendency when we call upon the Government for reform. An essential preliminary is to see that drift and acquiescence are not allowed to continue without a warning; that public opinion is informed of the growth of evils which become each year difficult to eradicate. If Mdlle. Ruegg does this service she will not be reproached for failing to diagnose causes or indicate remedies.

THE LOST LINER.

RECOVERY OF THE BODIES.

SEARCH ABANDONED.

HUNDREDS STILL ENTOMBED.

MONTREAL, June 4.

The Government steamer Lady Evelyn has abandoned the search for the bodies of those drowned owing to the sinking of the Empress of Ireland.

The captain declares that all outside the liner's hull have now been picked up. It is estimated that 800 bodies are still entombed in the hull.

The Lady Evelyn picked up on the shore 18 miles down the river the remains of a little girl believed to be the daughter of a Salvation Army officer in Toronto, named Brooks. The child is described as beautiful, with golden hair. Another girl, aged 13, a resident of the district, found the body, and enclosed it in a tiny coffin with a bunch of forget-me-nots, to which a card was attached bearing the words, "Kindly accept my kindest and sincerest sympathy. May she rest in peace. If identified, I would like to know." The card was signed, "Eileen Tuggy."

RAISING THE LINER.

The Canadian-Pacific Company has not yet arranged for an attempt to raise the liner, but experts from New York are engaged making a preliminary survey.

FUNERAL OF SAILORS.

QUEBEC, June 4.

The funeral of 12 sailors who belonged to the crew of the Empress of Ireland was held to-day. Services were conducted in the Anglican and Roman Catholic Cathedrals. The Duke of Connaught was represented, and the Lieutenant-Governor and Premier attended personally.

The Mayor and members of the City Council walked in the funeral procession. Flags were flying half-mast, and there were signs of mourning everywhere.

QUEEN ALEXANDRA'S SYMPATHY.

LONDON, June 4.

Queen Alexandra, in a letter, condoles with the Salvation Army in the loss of so many Canadians, "who intended to take part in a memorable meeting of the organisation in London."

VALUE OF WIRELESS.

MONTREAL, June 4.

Mr. Ferguson, the wireless operator on the Empress of Ireland, states that after the collision he sent out S.O.S. signals for eight minutes, and got a reply from the shore station to the effect that the Government steamers Lady Evelyn and Eureka were being despatched to render assistance.

But for the wireless calls it is likely the loss of life would have been much greater, as the two vessels greatly helped the work of rescue.

"THE GOOD IN HUMAN NATURE."

MONTREAL, June 5.

Sir Arthur Conan Doyle, in the course of an interview here yesterday, said that never did a disaster of this kind occur but that one was struck enormously by the beauty of human nature.

It was perfect blasphemy, he declared, to talk of Original Sin. In his opinion, man was full of the most wonderful unselfishness, though it was often only revealed as by a lightning flash in some terrible disaster.

Sir Arthur said he especially regretted the death of Mr. Laurence Irving, whom he described as a man of noble spirit and beautiful, idealistic turn of mind.

AMERICA CUP.

SELECTING A DEFENDER.

RESOLUTE WINS RUBBER.

NEW YORK, June 4.

The Herrishoff yacht Resolute defeated Mr. Cochran's Vanitie in the third trial of the preliminary America Cup defender selection races.

The Vanitie lost two men overboard, and her skipper abandoned the race. The men were rescued.

[The Resolute has won the rubber against the Vanitie, which defeated her in the first event by 15m 48s. In the second event, however, the Resolute won by 3½m.]

SHAMROCK IV. SHAPES WELL.

LONDON, June 5.

In a sail-stretching trial off Spithead yesterday, Sir Thomas Lipton's America Cup challenger, Shamrock IV., proved herself an excellent sailer and fast. She quite outsailed Shamrock III.

The new boat was particularly good in beating to windward and will probably show to advantage in light and moderate breezes, but not as a drifter.

JAPANESE NAVAL SCANDAL.

ALLEGED BRIBERY OF OFFICERS.

BERLIN, June 4.

Herr Liebknecht has published a series of letters from Messrs. Siemens and Schuckert, electrical engineers, to Herr Herman, manager of their Tokio branch (who was arrested on suspicion of having been concerned in cases of bribery of naval officers) the gist of which is an allegation that almost the whole of the Japanese Ministry of Marine was bribed to enable the firm to get higher prices than a rival firm from the Japanese Government.

BIG LABOUR FEDERATION.

A FURTHER STEP.

LONDON, June 4.

The joint conference, representing the Miners' Federation, the Transport Workers' Federation, and the National Union of Railwaymen, has accepted the working agreement which was recently drafted by a joint committee.

A consultative body has been formed to discuss questions of national importance affecting the bodies concerned, and to call a conference if necessary. In the event of a national conference being summoned, this meeting will finally decide upon the federation scheme.

AERIAL DISASTER.

TWO MORE LIVES LOST.

LONDON, June 5.

Lieutenants Rice and Thomas S. Creswell, were flying with a hydro-aeroplane near Calshot Castle, yesterday, when they fell into the sea from an altitude of 500ft, and were both drowned.

The body of Lieut. Creswell, who was strapped to his seat, was terribly mangled.

Lieut. Rice fell out of the machine before it touched the water and his body has not been recovered.

The hydro-aeroplane was a very large one, and was fitted with an engine of 200 horsepower. Its condition after the accident suggested that there had been an explosion owing to the escape of petrol fumes, which were perhaps ignited by a spark from the wireless telegraphic apparatus with which the machine was fitted.

THE SUFFRAGISTS.

A PALACE SCENE.

APPEAL TO THE KING.

LONDON, June 5.

During yesterday's Court at Buckingham Palace a handsome, youthful women's suffragist, who was provided with the proper ticket of admission, fell on her knees in the Royal presence, and cried shrilly, with her hands outstretched:

"For God's sake, your Majesty, stop torturing women!"

She was immediately carried out by a group of officials.

The bandmaster signalled his musicians to play loudly and thus drown the interruption.

Neither the King nor the Queen evidenced any surprise at the incident.

LONDON, June 5, 12.10 p.m.

Two women were concerned in the suffragist incident at yesterday's Court.

A GROWING FRENZY.

The emotional outbursts at the weekly suffragist gatherings now resemble Welsh revival meetings. Every sentence of the speakers is unctuated with groans and hisses, and there are continual bursts of frenzied cheering.

AUTHORITIES CRITICISED.

The New York "Sun," commenting on what it terms the "Pankhurst Devil Dancers," protests that "the mushy sentimental chivalry with which the authorities are treating these sisters of Satan is jelly-backed and futile."

The Canadian newspapers comment on the amazing feebleness and supineness of the British authorities.

A SIGNIFICANT STEP.

The law officers of the Crown have now decided that the property of all who have subscribed to the militant women's suffrage organisations can be attached in respect of damage done.

A complete list of subscribers was obtained when the offices of the militant suffrage societies were raided last week.

PRECAUTIONS AT ASCOT.

LONDON, June 4.

Special precautions are being taken against suffragist outrages at Ascot racecourse. The buildings are under supervision night and day, and the watchmen are provided with dogs and alarm guns.

HISTORIC CHURCH BURNT.

LONDON, June 5, 12.10 p.m.

Women's suffragists burned down the famous church of All Saints, a Norman edifice, at Breadsall, 2½ miles north-east of Derby, last night.

The priceless chained Bible in the church was destroyed.

NAVAL WARFARE.

DREADNOUGHTS DOOMED.

SIR PERCY SCOTT'S VIEW.

LONDON, June 5.

Admiral Sir Percy Scott, discussing the advisableness of building Dreadnoughts, states:—"As motor cars have driven horses from the streets, so the submarines have doomed the Dreadnoughts.

"With hydro-aeroplanes for scouting a battleship fleet will be no longer able to put to sea, or even to remain safely in harbour, as the submarines will be able to break all booms.

"The Admiralty should spend its money on submarines, hydro-aeroplanes, and a few fast cruisers.

"As submarines cannot fight submarines, possibly sea-fighting will come to an end.

"The future navy must be a navy of youth, the only requirements being boldness and daring."

OBITUARY.

SIR DOUGLAS STRAIGHT.

LONDON, June 5.

The death is announced of Sir Douglas Straight, formerly editor of the "Pall Mall Gazette," aged 69 years.

SIR WILLIAM ANSON, M.P.

The death occurred last night of Sir William Reynell Anson, Unionist member for Oxford University in the House of Commons, aged 71 years.

ALBANIAN REVOLT.

PROTECTING THE KING.

LONDON, June 4.

Reuter's Agency says that Great Britain and Germany have expressed readiness to send a warship each to Durazzo, if the other Powers do likewise, in the event of Prince William of Wied being in danger.

BRITISH ASSOCIATION VISIT.

TO THE EDITOR OF THE HERALD.

Sir,—You have been good enough on several occasions to draw attention to the approaching visit of this association for the purpose of holding its annual meeting in Australia. The event is quite unique in our history, and is the greatest compliment yet paid to the Commonwealth. The eyes of the world will be focussed on the proceedings, and Australia will be very much in the limelight. It is our obvious duty to see that our reputation does not suffer from the want of proper attention to our distinguished visitors. The Commonwealth and the States' Governments have been extremely generous in the aid which they have given, and a large number of the citizens of Sydney have proffered hospitality for many of the visitors. There still, however, remains a number for whom provision has yet to be made, and, as all the subscriptions of local members go to the British Association to be employed in research work, this provision can only be made by public subscription, and for this purpose £1000 is required. The list which I append, and which I ask you to be good enough to publish, will show with what a generous response we are meeting, but we need to raise the necessary sum quickly in order that time may be given to make our arrangements, and I now appeal to our citizens to assist us. Subscriptions may be sent to Dr. H. G. Chapman, Royal Society's House, Elizabeth-street, or to me. I am, etc.,

RICHARD TEECE,

CRISIS.

DISSOLUTION OF BOTH FEDERAL HOUSES.

EARLY APPEAL TO COUNTRY.

The Governor-General of the Commonwealth has granted a simultaneous dissolution to both Houses of the Federal Parliament.

The Prime Minister, Mr. Joseph Cook, made this announcement in the House of Representatives yesterday, and stated that the dissolution would take place as soon as the necessary supply could be obtained.

It is considered probable that the election will take place some time in August; but the precise date will depend on the preparation of the electoral roll.

It is probable that the new Parliament will meet in October.

The decision of the Governor-General has been received with much enthusiasm amongst Liberals in all parts of the Commonwealth, and it is stated that the Liberal organisation is well prepared for an immediate campaign.

Mr. Cook stated yesterday that the most serious step which had been taken since Federation had been adopted, but that the advice given to the Governor-General was the only means of avoiding the paralysis of responsible government.

Unless this had been done, said the Prime Minister, grave constitutional problems would have arisen.

The leader of the Opposition, Mr. Fisher, stated that the decision of the Governor-General would have far-reaching consequences for the future government of Australia. The sooner the elections took place, however, the better.

Both political parties will now commence immediately a vigorous campaign in all parts of the country.

THE BOMBSHELL.

ANNOUNCEMENTS IN BOTH HOUSES.

MELBOURNE, Friday.

"I have to announce that I tendered certain advice to his Excellency the Governor-General which he has been pleased to accept. His Excellency has decided to dissolve simultaneously both Houses. As soon as provision has been made for the conduct of the Public Service during the time of the elections the Houses will be dissolved."

With these words, the Prime Minister (Mr. Cook), in the House of Representatives this morning, carried the political situation beyond the region of doubt in which it has been for months past. "Provision for the conduct of the Public Services" will be made by the introduction of a bill for three months' supply, and when that has been passed by both Houses Parliament will be prorogued, and the election campaign will be commenced.

The general impression is that polling day will be fixed somewhere towards the end of August.

The news came as a great shock to members of both sides of the House, although there were constant rumours that the Prime Minister had approached the Governor-General on the subject of the double dissolution. Mr. Cook, however, allayed a lot of suspicion by stoutly affirming to friend and foe alike that he would not think of approaching his Excellency until the Senate had dealt with the Postal Voting Bill. He asserted that it would not be politics to seek an end to his troubles with the deadlock occasioned by the rejection of the Government Preference to Unionists Prohibition Bill only. Evidently sounder counsel prevailed, and he was induced to try his luck with the one bill. How good that advice was is shown by the manner in which his application for a double dissolution was received by the Governor-General.

The scene in the House of Representatives when the blow fell was interesting to a degree. There was a large attendance, for both sides wished to have their battalions ready at the opening of business in case of numbers being wanted.

It could be seen at once that there was something in the air. The Prime Minister and his colleagues were smiling, and all seemed well with them. The Opposition were apparently preparing to launch their usual sheaf of questions. Directly the prayers were finished, the Minister for Customs advanced to the table. On the other side, Mr. Fisher jumped up and addressed the Speaker. The Minister got the call, and asked for leave to introduce a bill to deal with trusts. It then certainly looked as if there was nothing in the rumours that a double dissolution had been asked for and granted. Mr. Groom got the leave required, and introduced the bill. He was then moving the first reading when Mr. Fisher again rose to his feet. This seemed to amuse the Prime Minister, for he called out, "For goodness' sake sit down a minute," which advice Mr. Fisher followed, in an apologetic fashion. The first reading of the bill was agreed to, and up jumped the leader of the Opposition again. He was in luck this time, for the Speaker called upon him. The first few words he said were drowned in the babble of conversation which was being carried on in the Chamber, but they were clearly heard by the Prime Minister. They formed an inquiry from Mr. Cook as to whether he had any statement to lay before the House. This was greeted with cheers by the members of the Opposition and a smile by the Prime Minister. Mr. Fisher evidently feeling sure of a reply in the negative, and buoyed up by his colleagues' shouts of encouragement, proceeded with, "Or will he pursue that course which will enable us to look upon his smiling face no longer."

The smile did not disappear from Mr. Cook's face; if anything, it broadened, and it infected the other Ministers, who for weeks had had to sit and face the smiles and jibes of the other side. There was a moment's suspense as the Prime Minister moved to the table. And then, in a clear voice, he said, "I have to announce that I tendered certain advice to his Excellency the Governor-General, which he has been pleased to accept. His Excellency has decided to dissolve simultaneously both Houses."

The effect of these few words was electrical. The Ministerialists, realising the object of their strenuous work had been attained by the double dissolution, burst into prolonged cheers, the Opposition sat dumb. Some laughed, and then a few ironical cheers followed. When silence was restored Mr. Cook continued: "As soon as provision has been made for the conduct of the public services during the time of the election, the houses will be dissolved." Again there was a salvo of cheers, this time from the Opposition and Ministerial side alike. Each tried to outcheer the other.

Amid this display, Mr. Cook said: "Following the usual course, I move that the House do now adjourn." The Speaker put the question, but there was no notice taken of it. Members from both sides were standing up cheering and calling out remarks across the Chamber, and as they filed out the Speaker almost shouted out to them "the House stands adjourned till half-past 2 o'clock on Wednesday."

Then followed a rush to the telegraph office in the basement, and for nearly half an hour members were busily despatching messages to their electoral headquarters. They were for the most part brief and to the point. "Double dissolution granted; get everything ready."

IN THE SENATE.

The proceedings in the Senate occupied even less time than in the House of Representatives. Immediately after the President (Senator Givens) had read the prayer, Senator Millen made a Ministerial statement to the effect that the Prime Minister (Mr. Cook) had advised that his Excellency the Governor-General had decided to grant a simultaneous dissolution of both Houses as soon as the necessary supply had been made to carry on the public service in all its branches. There were faint Opposition cheers.

Senator Oakes (N.S.W.): That's right, whistle up.

Senator Pearce (W.A.): You started it.

Senator Millen: The Ministry did not propose to attempt any further business, except the obtaining of supply. When it had done that Parliament would be prorogued, and the elections would be proceeded with. In consequence of that he moved that the House should adjourn. The motion was agreed to, and the House adjourned until 3 o'clock on Wednesday afternoon.

MEMBERS SURPRISED.

To members of both parties Mr. Cook's announcement in the House of Representatives came as a complete surprise. Ministerial supporters admitted after the House adjourned that they had no suspicion that the Prime Minister carried the warrant for a double dissolution in his pocket. Some of the older members had formed the opinion during the previous evening that something unusual was pending, but they stated to-day that the announcement in the House disclosed a situation quite different from what they had anticipated. The fact that Mr. Cook had paid several official visits to Government House during the previous few days seems to have been successfully concealed from even his own supporters, and members of the Opposition were even more in the dark.

In the lobbies to-day Ministerialists were in particularly good humour, and expressed themselves delighted that the object they had set out to achieve had been gained with so little delay, even if it came with dramatic suddenness. Opposition members simulated an air of light-heartedness, and suggested that they were equally pleased with the Ministerialists at the turn events had taken. Those who by previous experience were confident of again securing large majorities were particularly unconcerned, but members who had won their seats by only narrow margins a little over a year ago found it difficult to assume a demeanour of gratification.

Great reticence is observed by all members of the Cabinet, both with regard to the memorandum which was presented to the Governor-General as an argument in favour of a double dissolution and as to the message which granted it. Private members of the party, however, discussed the subject freely to-day and it was stated that the Prime Minister (Mr. Cook) had his Excellency's decision in his pocket when the House assembled after dinner on Wednesday evening. Those who are usually well informed indicate that the memorandum of the Ministry was presented to Sir Ronald Munro Ferguson by Mr. Cook on Tuesday afternoon. On Wednesday he made further visits to Government House, and called on his Excellency three times on Thursday. Every precaution was taken by the Liberal Whip (Mr. Massey Greene) to prevent Mr. Cook's absence from the House becoming known, and the pairs were secretly arranged for him on each occasion that he found it necessary to be absent for any length of time. Immediately the Cabinet memorandum was presented to his Excellency the Governor-General all of the other copies which had been in the possession of Ministers were destroyed, and it is understood that no other record now exists of the argument put before his Excellency except the one official document which the Prime Minister submitted to him.

QUESTION OF SUPPLY.

At the end of the present month the existing financial arrangement of the Ministry will expire, and it will be necessary to make provision for the period between the dissolution period which must intervene before the new Estimates can be submitted to Parliament. A bill asking for three months' supply is to be submitted to the House of Representatives by the Federal Treasurer, Sir John Forrest, on Wednesday next, and this will enable the Commonwealth activities to be carried on until September 30. It is not considered likely that the Opposition will place any serious obstacle in the way of the bill passing through the House of Representatives, but some members of the party expressed their intention to-day of making pre-election speeches when the bill is before the House, so it is not likely that the session will end abruptly.

On being asked yesterday what course the Opposition would follow in connection with the Supply Bill, Mr. Fisher said that it was rather early to discuss the possibilities at present. A great deal would depend upon the amount which the Ministry intended to ask the House to make available. He indicated, however, that there would be no concerted action to delay any reasonable request, as his party recognised that it was impossible to contest an election without having adequate supplies.

MR. COOK'S APPEAL.

RALLY TO THE FEDERAL STANDARD.

MELBOURNE, Friday.

The Prime Minister (Mr. Cook) this evening issued the following appeal:—

"We have taken a very serious step, the most serious yet taken since Federation began. At the end of thirteen years the Houses are deadlocked, and responsible government is paralysed. We, therefore, 'refer the difficulty to the grand tribunal of the nation.'

This is a special appeal to all Australians to rally to the Federal standard. The plain fact should be stated, namely, that unless the political solution now sought is successful in removing the deadlock, some grave constitutional problems must arise.

"We appeal to the electors with the fullest confidence to join in this effort to preserve and restore to their proper functions the Constitution and Parliament which they have created."

MR. FISHER'S VIEWS.

"A FALSE ISSUE."

The leader of the Opposition (Mr. Fisher), in reviewing the position, said: "After wasting the time of Parliament for one session and part of another, an election of both Houses will take place on a false issue by a discredited party. The principles and policy of the Labour party are too well known to need defining at the present moment. We shall appeal to the electors with every confidence. I think our past record and present policy will secure the return of our party to carry on progressive and beneficial legislation as in the past. The sooner the elections take place the better."

"Will you comment on the Governor-General's decision?" Mr. Fisher was asked.

"No," he replied, "the decision of the Governor-General will have far-reaching consequences in the future government of Australia. I have no intention of discussing it."

PARTY MEETINGS.

MELBOURNE, Friday.

After Parliament adjourned an informal meeting of the Liberal party was held, and members of the Cabinet were congratulated upon the success of their efforts in securing a double dissolution, which would effectively overcome the present intolerable position. The meeting resolved itself rather into a conference of congratulation, and no serious discussion took place. A formal meeting of the Liberal party has been summoned for Tuesday next at 3 o'clock.

Immediately the House of Representatives adjourned, members of the Opposition assembled in the party room, and before any formal discussion could be entered upon a telegram was handed to Mr. Fisher. It proved to be a cheering message from the Premier of New South Wales, and read as follows:—"News of dissolution arrived. Cabinet sitting. Ministers send best wishes for success in struggle. All will give fullest cooperation in campaign."

Mr. Fisher sent the following reply:—"Cordial thanks for hearty support in the impending national contest."

NEW PARLIAMENT.

MAY MEET IN OCTOBER.

MELBOURNE, Friday.

Among all sections of the Federal Parliament it is agreed that steps will be taken which will enable the both Houses to assemble either at the end of September or during the first week in October.

No Cabinet announcement on this point has been made so far, but the fact that supply is to be secured for three months seems to lend colour to the suggestion. All necessary arrangements are being made to contest the election with clean rolls, so that there may be no room for the complaints which followed the last appeal to the people. There are many other details, however, which must be attended to, and the departmental staff is now working at high pressure so that no unforeseen obstacle may present itself.

Assuming that Parliament does not dissolve until the end of the present month, and basing calculations on the maximum time allowed, the electoral authorities state that the writs in the ordinary course will be issued on July 10, and nominations would be due on July 31. Polling day would then be Saturday, August 29, and arrangements in compliance with the Act might then be made, which would enable the new Parliament to be called together by October 9.

Indications are not wanting to show, however, that no such lengthy period will expire between the issue of the writs and the reassembling of both Houses, and it is unofficially stated that as soon as supply has been secured the necessary preliminary steps will be taken, and the stipulated periods in each process towards the constitution of a new Parliament will be cut down to the lowest possible limit.

DATE OF ELECTION.

PROBABLY IN AUGUST.

The date of the election depends mainly upon three factors—the date of the proclamation of the dissolution, the preparation of the electoral rolls, and the question of supply. Sections 12 and 32 of the Constitution Act provide that the issue of writs shall take place within ten days from the proclamation of the dissolution of either House. Sections 87 and 88 of the Commonwealth Electoral Act provide that the nomination of candidates shall take place not less than seven, nor more than twenty-one days after the date of the writ, and that the date fixed for polling shall not be less than seven days or more than thirty days after the date of nomination. These provisions combined mean that the date of polling must take place not less than 24, nor more than 61, days after the proclamation of a dissolution.

The point then arises when the dissolution is likely to be proclaimed. In the ordinary course, when the Governor-General or Governor grants a dissolution, the proclamation follows almost immediately. This is, indeed, a natural corollary of a political situation which necessitates a dissolution, as it is assumed that a Government would not ask for a dissolution unless it were unable to carry on the work of governing the country. If, therefore, in this instance the customary course is followed, and a dissolution of both Houses of the Federal Parliament is proclaimed within, say, a week from to-day's date, the election must take place not less than 24 days nor more than 61 days from June 13. Assuming that the mean of these two periods, viz., 42 days, is occupied in the intervals between the proclamation, issue of writs, nomination, and polling, the election would take place on July 25, this date being a Saturday, the day of the week fixed by the Commonwealth Electoral Act for polling.

If the proclamation of dissolution is not delayed unduly (i.e., is issued not later than June 13), the election must be held, according to the provisions of the Commonwealth Constitution Act and the Commonwealth Electoral Act, not later than August 8, or nine weeks from to-day, this being the latest Saturday which would not exceed the limit of 61 days referred to above.

PREPARATION OF ROLLS.

The question of the rolls may, however, delay matters. The last Federal roll was printed in December last, and the police are still engaged in revising the list. If it is decided to take the election on the old roll, no difficulty would occur. It is, however, very unlikely that this course will be taken. Judging by past experience, the printing of the rolls is likely to take a considerable time, quite apart from their preparation and collation. If the rolls cannot be printed immediately, the provisions of the Commonwealth Electoral Act with regard to objections, appeals, transfers, preparation of supplemental rolls, and so forth, will be difficult to carry out. This will be especially the case if a proclamation or dissolution is issued immediately, as the writs must be issued within ten days after the proclamation.

It may, therefore, be that the difficulties in this connection will be so great that the Government will feel justified in advising the Governor-General to postpone the proclamation. The probabilities are, however, that every effort will be made to have the rolls prepared and printed as speedily as possible, especially as it is doubtful whether the proclamation of a dissolution can, according to constitutional practice, be unduly delayed. If this view prove to be sound, the elections will almost certainly take place some time in August, and they might possibly take place at the end of July.

So far as the Liberal organisation is concerned, it is unlikely that any attempt will be made to postpone the date of elections on electoral grounds, and, although organisation is never absolutely perfect, propaganda work has proceeded almost continuously since the elections last year, and the officials at headquarters are fully prepared for an immediate election. August will probably not be so convenient a month as October for the country generally, but it would certainly be less inconvenient than the end of the year.

The view taken by Labour officials is that they will be benefited by an early rather than late election, and it is considered probable in political circles that the Opposition in both Houses of Parliament will endeavour to press forward the election so that it may take place at the earliest possible date. The Labour party will certainly be able to influence the position, as, by reason of its majority in the Senate, it can control supply.

The Government has obtained supply up till the end of the financial year, i.e., June 30, and it is quite likely that the Opposition would refuse financial provision for any lengthy period after this date. This is an additional reason why the election is likely to be early rather than late.

THE REFERENDUMS.

OPPOSITION SCHEME FAILS.

MELBOURNE, Friday.

A serious phase of the political situation relates to the future of the six bills to amend the Constitution that are at the third reading stage in the Senate. Their history can be told in very few words. On two separate occasions attempts were made by the Labour party to induce the people of Australia to agree to amendments of the Constitution widening the powers conferred upon the Federal Parliament under the Constitution Act. Each time the answer to the country was "No." Last occasion upon which an appeal was made was by the Fisher Ministry at the elections held in May, 1913, which resulted in its defeat. The general impression then was that no more would be heard of the six referendum bills, which had been rejected by the people, as long, anyhow, as the Liberals remained in office; but this was not the view taken by the Opposition, which, relying upon its majority in the Senate, forced through that Chamber last year precisely the same six proposals to amend the Constitution that had been rejected by the country only a few months previously. The six bills were in due course sent down last year to the House of Representatives, but as no opportunity was given by the Ministry for their discussion they "had failed to pass" when the session came to an end.

Immediately the present session commenced, the leader of the Opposition in the Senate (Senator McGregor) put the same six bills on the notice paper, realising probably that the situation was such that delay in proceeding with them would be fatal. This week, by the aid of the numbers he commands in the Senate, he obtained the suspension of the standing orders to enable him to push them through without delay. On Thursday they were passed to the third reading stage, an absolute majority of the whole Senate being necessary to pass the third reading of bills to amend the Constitution. Provision is made for a "call" to be made of the Senate on such occasions, and on Thursday it was decided that there should be a "call" of the Senate next Thursday at 3 o'clock for this purpose. The Opposition in the Senate makes no secret of its intention to send the bills down to the House of Representatives before the prorogation takes place, not in the hope that they will be passed by that House, but in the belief that the Constitution will be interpreted to say that they have failed to pass. It would then, it is held by the Opposition, become incumbent upon the Ministry to cause all the six referendum bills to be again submitted to the people.

Section 128 of the Constitution reads as follows:—"This Constitution shall not be altered, except in the following manner: The proposed law for the alteration thereof must be passed by an absolute majority of each House of Parliament, and not less than two nor more than six months after its passage through both Houses, the proposed law shall be submitted in each State to the electors qualified to vote for the election of members of the House of Representatives, but if either House passes any such proposed law by an absolute majority and the other house rejects or fails to pass it, or passes it with any amendment to which the first-mentioned House would not agree, and if, after an interval of three months the first-mentioned House, in the same or the next session, again passes the proposed law by an absolute majority, with or without any amendment which has been made or agreed to by the other House, and such other House rejects or fails to pass it, or passes it with any amendment to which the first-mentioned House will not agree, the Governor-General may submit the proposed law as last proposed by the first-mentioned House, and either with or without any amendments subsequently agreed to by both Houses, to the electors in each State qualified to vote for the election of the House of Representatives."

"Of course, the view taken by the Opposition of the position that will be created is one-sided, and open to much doubt. The simple fact is that the Prime Minister (Mr. Cook) announced to-day that his Excellency the Governor-General had decided to grant a dissolution, and that no further business would be taken, except to obtain supplies for the services of the country. How, then, it may be asked, can these bills be said to have "failed to pass" when both Houses were already practically dissolved before they had even passed the Senate?

CONSTITUTIONAL VIEW.

STATEMEST BY SIR JOHN FORREST.

"A FOREGONE CONCLUSION."

MELBOURNE, Friday.

The condition of affairs which led up to the application for a double dissolution is analysed in a statement made by the Treasurer (Sir John Forrest), who is the only Minister to review the position. He says:—

"The decision of the Governor-General in agreeing to the advice of the Commonwealth Ministers to dissolve the Senate and the House of Representatives simultaneously under the provisions of clause 57 of the Constitution was, in my opinion, a foregone conclusion, as the terms of that clause are so clear and distinct, and it would be difficult to conceive of a case that would come under the Constitution if the present one did not. The terms of the Constitution were in every respect complied with, and it was fully realised by our opponents in Parliament as well as by the public of Australia the object that was aimed at, and the result that would follow. It has been argued that a single dissolution might only be granted, but that would not have relieved the present situation, as, however large the Liberal majority might be in the House of Representatives consequent upon an election, it would be confronted with the same state of affairs in the Senate. It must be remembered, too, that the Labour majority in the Senate has for two successive sessions made the Parliamentary machine unworkable. It has on many occasions (and it did so only yesterday) taken the business out of the hands of the Government. Last session for several days it refused to do any business at all. And it has been, during the whole term of the present Parliament, determined to obstruct and humiliate the Government. Besides a single dissolution would have been wholly advantageous to the Labour party, who would have been given an opportunity of strengthening their position in the House of Representatives with the knowledge that they had nothing to lose, as they would still have had their large majority in the Senate. The Liberal party, on the other hand, however successful they might have been at the elections, would have been in the same position as far as the Senate is concerned as they are now. It must be remembered, though, that this was not the ordinary case of a defeated Ministry asking for a dissolution. The Ministry has not been defeated. It is in the same position to-day as it was when it assumed office a year ago. The present situation is a case in which a simultaneous dissolution of both Houses is asked for by virtue of the express terms of a certain clause of the Constitution, which was specially designed for the very purpose of meeting cases such as the present one. It was never contemplated by the framers of the Constitution that the state of affairs which has existed during the present Parliament would have been likely to arise. It was thought that the Senate would have been composed of parties of long-tried experienced politicians, who would never, however numerically strong they might be, attempt to coerce and usurp the functions of the Government. All these ideas have gone by the board, and we have had to meet a set of circumstances which I think have probably been unparalleled in constitutional government, certainly unparalleled in Australia. The Liberal party for years had a considerable majority in the Senate. There was never, however, any serious difficulty or conflict between the two Houses, and it is very regrettable that such should have been the case during this Parliament. The idea in the minds of the majority in the Senate seems to have been that their position was impregnable, and they seem to have overlooked the wisdom of those who framed the Constitution and provided for a set of circumstances which were not then expected to come about, but which they carefully provided for. The result, of course, is that a great deal of trouble, unnecessary work, and inconvenience has been cast upon the whole Parliament of the Commonwealth, but, as I have sought to show already, the position had become intolerable, the legislative machine had broken down, and a drastic remedy was not only necessary, but was obligatory. I hope that the people of Australia will realise where the blame lies; that they will be up and doing, determined that constitutional government shall not be made useless and a byword by a set of 'dog in the manger' politicians, who, not having a majority in the House of Representatives, have been determined for over a year to prevent anyone else carrying on the public business of the country."

LIBERAL PARTY.

ORGANISATION WELL IN HAND.

All the while the Liberal Government has been working for the double dissolution in the Federal Parliament, the Liberal Association in the State has been working to perfect its organisation to meet the crisis when it came.

Now that the dissolution is certain, the Liberals are ready for the fray; the organisation is more complete than ever it was before, and the candidates are taking to the field in a fine spirit of optimism.

The Senate campaign can be put in hand at once. All is ready. The State has been mapped out, and as the whole six candidates are good platform speakers, the whole State can be covered and canvassed before polling day.

Ever since the State election the Liberal organisation has been directed towards preparing for the double dissolution; the organisers adapted their work to the Federal boundaries, and steadily and consistently pushed forward their work. Special attention has been given to the electorates in which seats were won by small majorities.

Mr. Archdale Parkhill, who has been directing the State organisation, after outlining the position of the Liberals, said yesterday:—"The announcement of a double dissolution has not found the organisation unready. Such a course was always expected. The instructions of the Prime Minister and the organising committee were to organise on the basis of an election at any time. It now only requires an additional strengthening of the organisation in some of the electorates, and this can be done in a few weeks. Arrangements have already been made for additional canvassers in the districts requiring them. So we are quite ready for the fray."

"A special feature of the organisation work (ever since the second ballots in the State election) has been the particular attention devoted to the electoral rolls. It is absolutely essential that the electoral rolls should be an accurate record of the electors entitled to vote, and so in all the electorates special instructions have been given the organisers to devote their energies to the rolls."

CRISIS WELCOMED.

Mr. Grant, general secretary of the Political Labour League of New South Wales and one of the Labour Senate candidate, stated last night that the P.L.L. movement welcomed the crisis.

The Labour party, he said, had always been prepared to abide by the expressed will of the people. That was the very basis of democracy, and when the intention of the people had not been sufficiently clearly expressed to allow of the government of the country being carried on, there was only one way to ascertain the wishes of the country, and that was an appeal to the people. No one could have possibly failed to see, said Mr. Grant, that the position of affairs in the Commonwealth Parliament had been intolerable ever since the new Parliament assembled, and Mr. Cook and his party must be prepared to submit to the charge of hanging on to office when it was absolutely plain that he could do no work.

"Time was," he continued, "when the very frequent jibe at the Labour party representatives was that they were 'time-servers.' There has never been as glaring an instance in the political history of Australia of pure, deliberate time-serving as that which characterised the Cook Federal Government."

Speaking of the organisation of Labour's forces, Mr. Grant said the P.L.L. executive had held the opinion all along that an election could not be delayed for the usual full time of three years. Consequently, no effort has been spared to urge the supporters of Labour to get prepared for an election. Reports continue to be received from many electorates, showing that the prospects are daily improving, and that Labour leagues generally were sanguine of the result. "It is, no doubt, true," he said, "that very many names of Labourites are not yet enrolled, but steps will be taken to urge them to do so immediately. We are above all things desirous of seeing a pure roll. It is fully anticipated that everyone who desires to see the return of a Labour Government will get into harness in the course of the next few days. Special meetings of branches, electorate councils, and local committees are being convened, and at any centres throughout the State where this is not being done, local secretaries will be requested to see that such steps are taken. It must be most humiliating to realise that a Liberal Government has hung on to office for 12 months, knowing full well that it could not possibly pass any useful legislation."

FARMERS READY.

FEDERAL LIBERAL VOTE SOLID.

Mr. T. I. Campbell, general secretary of the Farmers and Settlers' Association, yesterday expressed pleasure at the news that a double dissolution had been granted. Though it came a trifle earlier than anticipated; he was glad to be able to say that the organisation was thoroughly well prepared to enter upon the campaign. There had never been a year, he said, in the history of the association, in which such pronounced progress had been made, and particularly along the lines of political organisation. The decisions of the last conference with regard to political development had borne much fruit, and nearly every country electorate of the State was now honeycombed with active and enthusiastic branches. Organisers had been engaged for the whole year, and had spared no effort to produce the best possible results. In addition to this, the association was gratified with the manner in which its political aspirations had been recognised by the Federal Liberal party, and particularly by the Prime Minister, Mr. Cook. This meant that a complete chain of organised effort throughout the country was at the disposal of the Federal Liberal party."

"Altogether," said Mr. Campbell, "there are now 430 branches on the register of the association, of which 85 per cent. can be considered as active, vigorous, and ready to take up the Federal political campaign. These are being added to almost daily by the efforts of the 17 organisers now permanently employed by the association.

"As some indication of the extent and influence of the farmers' association to-day," continued Mr. Campbell, "and the advantage of the consolidation of the Federal Liberal vote, I have prepared a statement, showing the position in the rural districts to which we have devoted our attention. It is shown in the appended review of the electorates:—

RIVERINA.—Here we are particularly well equipped to face a Federal election. We have district councils in the Murrumbidgee, Cootamundra, Wagga, and Corowa State electorates, and permanent organisers in each of these electorates. Our branches, which will take up the campaign on behalf of Mr. Falkiner, exist at 52 centres.

HUME.—In this electorate we have active district councils, in Albury, Wagga, Corowa, and Cootamundra, State electorates. Each of these district councils has a special paid organiser permanently appointed, and we can bring behind our President, Mr. Robert Patten, assistance of 42 established branches, many of M.P., in the prosecution of his campaign the these comprising a very large membership.

CALARE.—Here again we are quite ready, and have extensive organisation throughout the electorate. Mr. Piggott can look to Lyndhurst, Orange, Ashburnham, Lachlan, and Macquarie District Councils, and the organisers attached to these, together with the support of 39 established branches.

GWYDIR.—Our organisation in this electorate is giving solid support to Mr. Blakeney's candidature, and he will have the assistance of the Namoi, Gwydir, and Liverpool Plains District Councils, also the active support and assistance of 34 branches.

COWPER.—In the Cowper electorate, we have district councils in the Clarence and Hastings and Macleay and Gloucester State electorates. In addition to this, Mr. Thompson can look to 36 branches for cordial support.

NEW ENGLAND.—In this electorate we have district councils in the Tamworth, Armidale, and Gough State electorates. In addition to these organisations, Mr. P. P. Abbott will have the assistance of 24 branches.

THE DARLING.—The Liberal candidate to be selected to run against Mr. W. G. Spence, can rely upon the effective organisation and enthusiastic support of the Castlereagh and Macquarie district councils and 25 branches.

WERRIWA.—In the Werriwa electorate, Mr. Conroy will have the assistance of Burrangong and Lyndhurst district councils and their respective organisers; also 14 branches.

EDEN-MONARO.—Mr. Austin Chapman will be able to rely upon solid support from the district councils at Bega and Monaro, besides a number of branches.

MACQUARIE.—In the contest against the sitting Labour member, Mr. Carr, Mr. R. Dawson Moore will have the assistance of the Bathurst district council and nine branches.

HUNTER.—The sitting Labour member, Mr. Charlton, will find himself up against recent vigorous organisation by the Durham district council, besides the branches.

RICHMOND.—Mr. Massey Greene will here have the assistance of district councils in the Tenterfield, Lismore, and Casino districts, with the help of 19 branches.

ROBERTSON.—Here Mr. Fleming will have an active campaign carried on for him from branches established at Mudgee and 16 other centres.

CAUGHT NAPPING.

LABOUR LEAGUES UNPREPARED.

MELBOURNE, Friday.

"We are always prepared for any contingency," was the statement of the president of Political Labour Council (Mr. L. Cohen) to-day when asked how the coming election was regarded. "We are surprised at a double dissolution having been granted on the case put up by the Ministry," he added. "All the same, we expect to win the six Senate seats on this occasion, and to improve our position in the House of Representatives."

Notwithstanding the assurances of Mr. Cohen as to the preparedness of the party for an election, it would appear as if it had been caught napping. With the exception of Corio, no candidate has been chosen to contest the seats in Victoria held by Liberal members. Nominations have not even been invited from persons desirous of submitting themselves for selection for Echuca, Wimmera, Indi, Henty, and Balaclava. Action will be taken immediately to have candidates placed in the field in these constituencies.

THE ROLLS.

NOT NEARLY COMPLETE.

The Federal rolls at the present moment are in a very incomplete state. Whilst the police have been engaged in reviewing the rolls for some considerable time, they are still a long way off their completion. And even if the police had finished their work the rolls would not be in any condition for a general election, inasmuch as the electoral registrars have then to take the necessary legal action to purge them.

It is considered unlikely that the election will take place on the present rolls, which were printed in December last, and a suggestion has been made that after supply is granted the Cook Government should prorogue Parliament for so long a time as will be necessary to complete the review of the rolls.

The Acts provide that enrolment may take place at any time up to the date of the issue of the writs for the election.

In connection with the date of the election, strong representations have been made to the Prime Minister to avoid the harvesting season, and Mr. Cook is understood to be seized with the importance of this suggestion.

ENROL AT ONCE.

It is highly desirable that electors who are qualified to vote in the approaching Federal election should attend to the matter of their enrolment.

Under the present Federal system of compulsory enrolment, this matter must receive the personal attention of the electors themselves. No officials are provided to canvass for enrolments or to provide enrolment claims.

These claims are supplied by the electoral office to every post-office in the State, and may be had thereat.

The claim has to be filled in by the elector claiming to vote, and signed by that person and a witness, who must be an elector of the Commonwealth, or a person qualified to be an elector.

Any British or naturalised British subject of 21 years of age or over, and having six months' residence in the Commonwealth, may claim a vote for the subdivision of the electorate in which he has resided for one month or more.

These claims have to be lodged with the local electoral registrar, and every claimant for a vote should be careful to see that he or she gets an acknowledgment from the electoral office of the receipt of the claim.

If this acknowledgment is not received within seven days after its despatch inquiry should be made by the elector seeking enrolment.

Should the claim be found to be in order, the acknowledgment will state that the name has been added to the roll. In that case the responsibility of the elector ceases

Even if his name does not subsequently appear on the roll he will have discharged his liability under the compulsory enrolment measure.

After the acknowledgment that a claim in order has been received, and the name added to the roll, the responsibility to see that the name is on the printed roll belongs to the electoral officers.

If the claim be not in order, on the other hand, or if the claimant be objected to on any grounds, notification of this fact will be conveyed in the acknowledgment, and an opportunity given the elector claiming the vote to set matters right.

The penalty for not claiming enrolment under the Act is £2. Electors should not allow the opportunity of enrolment to pass, in view of the uncertain state of the election arrangements, and of the fact that no enrolment can take place after the issue of the writs.

HASTENING ELECTORAL WORK.

MELBOURNE, Friday.

Senator McColl, Vice-President of the Executive Council, on being asked his opinion on the situation, said: "My feeling is one of intense relief. The position of Ministers during this Parliament has not been a bed of roses. We were completely at the mercy of the Opposition, and they were not too particular how they used their power. We had to suffer a good many indignities quietly, and while of course it would have been very pleasant to feel that there was a five years' term before us, the option of facing an election was, as far as I am concerned, very much better than conducting the work of the Senate as it has been carried on.

"The newly appointed divisional returning officers are now all in their positions, excepting in the Barrier, the officer there having resigned, and a new man has been appointed, who will be in charge in a day or two. The work of revising the rolls in each State has been going on as rapidly as possible. Instructions have been given to hurry matters up, with the view of getting them in the printer's hands. The necessity for cleansing the rolls has been very apparent, and while it would have been desirable to have had more time to complete the work, everything will be done to ensure a good sound roll when the election takes place. It will be a satisfaction to know that we have in each electoral division throughout Australia permanent men acting as divisional returning officers. They will be entirely independent of party, and will be prepared to do justice to both sides, which is all we seek."

STATE CABINET.

SESSION MAY BE AFFECTED.

The State Premier (Mr. Holman) stated yesterday that he was unable to say whether the double dissolution would have any effect on the next State session, which was previously expected to open about the second week in July. He anticipated that, owing to the necessity of getting supply and attending to other matters, the dissolution might not take place for some time yet. While he was aware that the imminence of the Federal elections was calculated to have a disturbing effect on the sittings of the State Parliament, he remarked that in the present state of uncertainty as to when the elections would take place it was impossible to say whether the prorogation would be extended or the session interrupted in order to allow members of both sides to take part in the campaign.

"The question of interrupting the session for a period has not yet been considered," added the Premier.

It was a coincidence that the State Cabinet sat right throughout yesterday, and the afternoon sitting was attended by all the Ministers available. The situation created by the double dissolution can hardly fail to have been debated by the Ministers. The Cabinet did not break up till about 6 o'clock, and the Premier was reticent about the business that had kept him and his colleagues so late. It is regarded as likely that the elections will affect the course of business in the State Parliament, which, however, must meet before very long in order that the Estimates may be presented fairly early in the financial year, which opens on July 1.

Sir Newton Moore, in responding, detailed Western Australia's progress since its foundation by the Swan River settlers, and he added that the State's trade and expansion could not have been achieved without the aid of the financial resources of the motherland

Sir Newton Moore paid a high tribute to the work of Mr. Reginald C. Hare, Secretary to the Agent-General, declaring that the manner in which he had carried out his duties had won for him the keenest appreciation of successive Agents-General.

Mr. G. P. Doolette proposed "The Guests," and Lieut.-Colonel Legge, Representative of the Commonwealth on the Imperial General Staff, expressed the hope that Australia was becoming a military nation, not as a race of swashbucklers, but because Australia was a country worth holding.

THE MINERS.

ATTITUDE OF MINISTERS RESENTED.

"BOARD DEEPLY INSULTED."

NEWCASTLE, Friday.

The miners' delegate board met to-day, but as far as could be ascertained from the executive officers of the Colliery Employees' Federation nothing was done to alter the present position.

Mr. D. Watson, president of the federation, said that the delegate board had considered a lengthy report made by Mr. D. Rees and himself regarding the conference with the western and southern miners over the proposed amendments to the Coal Mines Regulation Act and the Industrial Disputes Act. They also presented a report of their interview with the Minister for Mines and the Minister for Labour and Industry. After discussing the reports the following motion was passed by the delegate board: "That the reports be received, and that this delegate board express its indignation and disappointment at the attitude taken up by the Minister for Mines and the Minister for Labour and Industry in their replies to the deputation, and that this board deeply resents the insult offered to the executive in the statements made, that have appeared in the press, concerning the leadership of the federation, inferring that any disturbance or upheaval that takes place is chiefly the work of the leaders of the organisation."

Mr. Watson referred to the discussion which had taken place between the Minister and himself in regard to the elimination of clause 48 of the Industrial Disputes Act, and said: "As far as the officers of the federation are concerned we have never advised our members to flout the law. In regard to the present stoppage, it cannot be shown that there is any violation of the award, inasmuch as the award does not state that the afternoon shift has to be worked. It is neutral as far as that is concerned. It certainly protected certain employers who are working the shift from an imposition of 25 per cent. which was placed upon other proprietors if they desired to work the second shift. That has undoubtedly led to a great deal of resentment on the part of the employees who have been up till now working the afternoon shift. It is purely on that decision that the present position has been taken up by the members so affected, but the executive officers and the delegate board disclaim all responsibility as far as the position is concerned. The feeling of the delegate board was most distinct in resenting the general statements made in reply to the deputation yesterday by Mr. Cann and Mr. Estell.

Mr. W. Brennan, secretary of the Colliery Employees' Federation, said in respect of the present position that their efforts for a considerable time past had been directed towards staving off this trouble, which they knew must sooner or later come upon them. In telling the miners to keep to their work they had been subject to much abuse for their efforts.

A communication was received to-day from Judge Edmunds stating that the miners' wages board would not meet on June 8 next, as was previously arranged, but on a date to be fixed, of which due notice would be given to the parties.

Although the award of the wages board has been flouted, the delegates to-day adopted the following resolution, which came from the Dudley miners' lodge,—"That, in view of the growing unrest and continued delays and interruptions caused by urgency matters being brought before the miners' wages board, a deputation wait upon the Premier and Minister for Labour and Industry and endeavour to obtain a tribunal whereby the hearing of claims for working the upper Victoria seam may be expedited." Mr. Watson said that the board would like to see some voluntary tribunal brought into operation.

THE PENAL CLAUSE.

"PUT IT IN OPERATION."

Commenting yesterday upon Mr. Estell's statement that the Government would not interfere with clause 48 (the penal clause) of the Industrial Arbitration Act, Mr. W. Rosser, the secretary of the Federation of Labour, said Mr. Estell appeared to favour the kind of legislation that would turn the working community into industrial serfs, with absolutely no freedom.

"It requires," he said, "only another step further for the Labour Government to arrest trades union leaders, as Mr. Wade did. Let Mr. Estell put the clause into operation—the sooner the better, for the workers will then know who their friends are."

UPHOLD THE LAW.

MINISTER'S STATEMENT.

The Minister for Labour and Industry yesterday insisted that the Industrial Arbitration Act must be respected by the miners on strike. Mr. Estell said that he thought this, despite the fact that he personally was opposed to the working of the afternoon shift.

"Judge Edmund's decision," said the Minister, "was only the decision of a wages board, and the men had the right within the law to appeal to the Arbitration Court against the decision regarding the afternoon shift. Besides that the Government promised the men that an inquiry by Royal Commission should be carried out in a most expeditious manner by prescribing that the report should be furnished by Mr. Wise within four weeks, so that finality could be reached without undue delay. The Government did everything possible to fulfil the promise they had given to the men.

"Personally," added Mr. Estell, "I have always been against the afternoon shift. I think it is a shift that gives the proprietors a certain monopoly when the coal trade is in a flourishing condition as it prevents a large part of our coal lands being opened up by other people, who, if they could get into the trade, would be the means of extending it and causing an expansion of the industry, preventing thereby the aggregation of large numbers of people in one particular centre, and spreading the population over a wider area of country. Whilst I am of that opinion, however, I still think that the law of the land should be maintained, and, once a decision is given, whether it is favourable or otherwise the contracting parties should abide by it in an honourable manner, and not attempt to take advantage of any superior position they may hold, for the time being, to do something which would be the means practically of nullifying the law, which we have for the protection of the industrial workers.

Whilst I have had many representations made by all classes of unionists in New South Wales for various amendments of the Arbitration Act, in the bill which I propose to introduce during the forthcoming session I have not had one make any suggestion for the excision of section 48 dealing with penalties."

Asked if he was doing anything to call a compulsory conference of the parties, Mr. Estell said he was not.

PROPRIETORS UNANIMOUS.

LAW TO BE ENFORCED.

The position created on the Maitland coalfield by the refusal of the miners to work the afternoon shift was discussed at a meeting of the Northern Colliery Proprietors' Association, yesterday morning, at the offices of Pitt, Son, and Badgery, Ltd., Mr. John Brown presiding.

In view of the attitude of the Government in determining to have the law observed, it was decided to await developments.

The meeting was attended by Mr. W. Sparks, of the firm of Messrs. Sparks and Millard, solicitors, Newcastle.

The official report, supplied by the secretary of the association, Mr. Clarke, was—"The meeting was very unanimous."

SOUTHERN MINES.

MEN WILL NOT CEASE WORK.

WOLLONGONG, Friday.

Mr. A. C. Willis, miners' general secretary, was asked this morning if there was any likelihood of the Southern miners stopping in support of the Northern miners. He replied: "No; the Southern miners are not likely to take any such insane action."

What was more, he said, the Northern miners had never suggested such action. Neither would it help them if such action was taken. On the contrary, it would certainly hamper them in carrying on their fight on the lines they appeared to have agreed to. He had received a message from the Northern men, expressing hope that no such action would be taken.

In regard to the result of the deputation to the Minister, Mr. Willis said that in connection with the eight-hour bank to bank question, the Minister for Mines had informed the deputation that the bill would be introduced as early as possible. However, Mr. Willis said that the ballot of the whole of the miners of New South Wales will be taken at an early date to ascertain whether miners are prepared to wait for legislation to give them eight hours, or whether they will take steps to refuse to work more than that.

GARAGE BURNT.

DAMAGE £2000.

KEMPSEY, Friday.

A fire broke out in a motor garage occupied by S. Penistan at 5 o'clock this morning. The premises were destroyed, also three motor cars, one owned by Penistan and insured with the Victoria Insurance Company for £150; a second owned by Alf Peade, insured with the Guardian office for £350; and a third, owned by S. Pacey, insured with the Central Insurance Company for £200.

The garage adjoins the building occupied by the Macleay River Shipping Company as their office, also Allen Taylor's local office, and the back portion was used as the billiard-room of Tattersall's Hotel. This building was partly destroyed, but the books and contents of the offices were saved. The billiard table was destroyed. On the other side of the garage was P. O'Halloran's produce store, which was partly burnt, and a quantity of forage destroyed. Tattersall's Hotel, owned by W. M'Kune, had a very narrow escape, and some damage was done to the furniture.

But for the prompt action of the fire brigade, a big loss would have occurred. The buildings were insured with the Norwich Union. No explanation as to how the fire occurred is at present forthcoming. The total damages are estimated at about £2000.

FIRE AT DUBBO.

DUBBO, Friday.

A big fire occurred at North Dubbo shortly after 5 this morning. Hive's cordial factory was completely destroyed, the damage amounting to £1500. The residence also caught, but the flames were extinguished before much damage was done.

The brigade was delayed at the Brisbane-street railway gates, which the public have persistently but unavailingly demanded should be open all night.

THE RAILWAYS.

INCREASED RETURNS.

The railway and tramway revenue shows great expansion. The last week in May marked an improvement to the extent of £28,802, compared with the same period last year, the respective revenues being £182,706, as against £153,904.

The railway service accounted for £21,832 of the total increase, and the tramways £6970, the railway returns being £144,404, as against £122,572, and the tramway returns £38,302, as against £31,332.

POPULATION OF THE STATE.

The population of New South Wales at the end of March was 1,844,985.

During the first five months of the present year, the increase in the number of people in the State is estimated to have been 12,529.

There were during this period 12,992 births, and 4643 deaths, being an increase by births over deaths of 8349. It is stated that there are now 2012 aborigines of full blood in the State. The arrivals by sea numbered 46,352, and the arrivals by land 68,501, while the departures were 42,285 and 67,388 respectively.

The Government Statistician's figures show that there are 968,965 males and 876,020 females in the State.

WOMEN COUNCILLORS.

NOT ELIGIBLE.

CROWN LAW OFFICER'S OPINION.

A deputation from the Political Labour League recently waited upon the Premier with a request that he should consider the question of including some women in any nominations he might make for appointment to the Legislative Council.

The members of the deputation were under the impression that women could legally be appointed to the Upper House. This view appears to be a mistaken one, as Mr. Holman stated yesterday that he had consulted the Attorney-General with regard to the legal aspect of the question, and Mr. Walter Bevan, the Assistant Law Officer, has advised that under the existing law women are not eligible for appointment to the Legislative Council.

VICTORIAN ELECTIONS.

MELBOURNE, Friday.

In a speech at Ballarat to-night, the Premier (Mr. Watt) intimated that, owing to the double dissolution, the State elections would not be held until after the Federal elections.

THE "HERALD" MAP.

The eastern high pressure has lost one-tenth in barometric values, and has moved to the north-east. The sea isobars are now over our western districts, and consequently mild weather, with northerly winds, may be expected there.

In the eastern districts more fogs may be expected, but the weather will be generally fine.

The Antarctic disturbance has moved further south-eastward. It is now centred to the south-east of Adelaide.

A new high pressure is over the south-western districts of Western Australia. The central readings, which read 30.3 inches, are situated over the southern goldfields.

OFFICIAL ERROR.

CIRCULATION OF PRIVATE DOCUMENT.

The announcement made in Thursday's "Herald" that Mr. Holman had declared to the Farmers and Settlers' Association the policy of his Government as opposed to the building of the North Shore Bridge out of public funds, and as opposed to any further increases in Parliamentary salaries unless endorsed by a referendum, has put the Premier in an uncomfortable dilemma.

These two items were picked out of a large number of matters which were returned to the F. and S.A. marked as already adopted in the Government policy, and therefore not requiring any deputation to urge their claims for adoption. It was also stated that the Premier had carefully divided the resolutions of the last conference of the F. and S.A., into three groups, marked hostile to Labour policy, adopted in Government's policy, and worthy of further consideration. It now transpires that this document should never have left the Premier's office, as none of the matters concerned had been submitted to Mr. Holman's Ministerial colleagues.

Writing from the Premier's office on Thursday to Mr. Campbell, secretary of the Farmers and Settlers' Association, Mr. Holman says:—

"Dear Mr. Campbell,—Paragraphs appearing in the press this morning at your instance, regarding the North Shore Bridge and the pay of members of Parliament, impelled me on arrival at my office to inquire into the circumstances under which the basic communication for your statements reached you. I find that, as the result of ambiguity in my instructions after the receipt of your original letter, you were furnished with classified lists intended, for the present at all events, for those of my colleagues who were immediately concerned. As a matter of fact, my classification of the subjects has not been endorsed by the responsible Ministers, and, as already indicated, I was quite unaware until reading the paper this morning that you had been put in possession of it.

"Both matters now in question contain serious possibilities of misrepresentation of the Government's attitude.

"The question of increasing the salaries of members was classified as adopted by the Government simply because our policy on that matter has been entirely worked out—not because we approve of the principle of the referendum.

"Similarly, the general views of your association with regard to the North Shore Bridge were classified as adopted, not because we concur in those views in their entirety, but because our purpose is ultimately to achieve that very end in a somewhat different way.

"As the lists are still, as above indicated, in a confidential stage, and as they have reached your hands by pure inadvertence, I must beg you, at this stage, to be good enough to regard the information as confidential, and not make the contents public until you receive further advice from me.

"At a later stage I shall be quite prepared to receive a deputation in regard to some of the resolutions of your association should the further consideration now being bestowed upon them prove such to be necessary.

"Yours faithfully,

"(Sgd.) W. A. HOLMAN."

FINANCIAL.

RESPONSIBILITIES OF AUDITORS.

IMPORTANCE OF THE SUBJECT.

THE ETHICAL VIEW.

For some weeks past our columns have been open to a great many diverse views as to the responsibilities of auditors. We have had the views of shareholders who are also directors, and of shareholders who are not directors, of auditors upon their legal status and professional etiquette. We have had expressions of opinion from the leading accountancy journals, which, doubtless, voice the view held by those whose ideals are most lofty among those who practise public accountancy. To some extent the importance of the subject has been generally recognised, though it is doubtful whether many of our readers are quite conscious of all that is involved.

Every day the joint stock system is playing a larger and still larger part in the development of our civilisation. There are now but few in the community who are not in some way interested in one company or another. If the Commissioner for Taxation would only allow us a glimpse at the income tax returns sent in to him a month or two back, they would show that the number of persons getting portion of their income by way of dividends from companies is now remarkably large. In some cases the number of shares held is small—perhaps, very small—but here we have a beginning of the cultivation of a taste which, like dram-drinking, will grow. In some cases, of course, the incomes derived in this way are large indeed. Then, too, they are wonderfully spread. To-day it is quite a common thing for a single individual to have an interest in a bank, in a shipping company, in a fire insurance office, in a gas light company, in a brewery, and possibly in half a dozen industrial concerns of a very diverse character. Fifty years ago that would have been quite impossible. Not even the wealthiest of our citizens could have spread his interests nearly as far as they are spread, quite as a matter of course, to-day. Imagine the position of our great-grandfathers a century ago. They might have been partners in a privately-owned bank, and have borne on their shoulders frightful responsibility for the continued integrity of their fellow-partners. They might possibly have owned a share in a ship trading oversea, but probably most of their capital was locked up in the funds or loaned out. Whatever they were interested in had to receive their most wide-awake personal attention. If they were partners in a bank, that involved their being bankers. If they were part-owners of a brewery, they had themselves to learn the art of brewing. And as their physical capacity and mental equipment had natural limitations they could not have very wide interests. How different is the position of their great grandchildren of to-day? But is the position of these grandchildren quite secure? Do they not perhaps trust others over-much? It is just here that the public accountant and auditor comes in. He is the doctor who vouches for the business health of those who employ him, the highly-skilled expert who diagnoses financial diseases, and, if necessary, recommends cures or the removal of causes that make for bad health. But to whom are these business doctors responsible—to those who appoint them and who pay them, or to the directors who have in the last resort to bow to the same masters? A definite decision on this point is very important. It goes to the whole root of the joint stock system.

Now, in considering the responsibility of the auditor, the subject may be looked at from several distinct points of view. We have already given the point of view of the auditor himself, of the board whom he must watch, of the shareholder whose servant he is, and we have also had something to say upon the legal aspect of his position. Just now we will look at the matter rather from the ethical point of view, having not so much regard for what the law lays down in relation to auditors, or for what the etiquette of the profession dictates in relation to their duties, as to what the law ought to be, and along what lines a healthy professional etiquette should move. It would, of course, be foolish for an auditor to overstep the bounds of the law. That would surely land him into trouble. Though he could not wisely go so far, there is no reason why he should not have an ideal, and in equivocal cases live up to that ideal, at any cost.

First of all, the auditor should be efficient. It would be futile for shareholders to lean upon incompetency. This being so, it is alike in the interests of the public and of the profession that the way of the incompetent should be made hard; that, in fact, he should, as speedily as possible, be weeded out, and that the newer generation should have the best educational advantages obtainable, entrance to the profession being restricted to such as have shown the necessary proficiency. Then the high-minded auditor should realise that he has a duty to someone who pays him no fees. He has a duty to the public at large, who trust him, to his brother professionals who rely upon his playing the game and upholding the best traditions of their craft. If all auditors were high-minded and fearless, it would be impossible, for instance, for a board to turn out one of their number who refused to be subservient, because the board would know that their credit would suffer, and that they would be able to get no other responsible auditor to take the vacant place no matter how tempting the fees proffered. Then, again, auditors should realise that their primary duty is to the great body of shareholders, not to the board, even if the board itself consists of large shareholders. They should realise that the future of the joint stock system depends upon the honourable discharge of their duties, not merely in a strictly legal sense, but on a high moral plane. Law is often poor morality. Many shocking things have been done in the name and with the sanction, if not with the approval, of the law. Unless some high standard of this kind be evolved from the inner consciousness of the best men in the profession itself, then the State will surely be called in to do what the individual has failed to do. The joint stock system is not going to decline. It is still a new and imperfectly developed growth with great promise. It rests with the accountancy profession to direct it, to modify its obvious weaknesses, and to add to its stability, so that shareholders may be interested in a hundred different concerns whose officials they do not even know, yet may sleep soundly at night in full confidence that their capital at least is as safe as in a fallible world is reasonably possible. It rests with the accountants to put the quacks of their profession out of practice, to make it impossible for the incompetent to don the garb of the competent, or even a colourable imitation of it. To-day the number of accountants' societies in this State is legion, and this is not for the good of the profession at large.

AMORPHOUS WHITE LEAD.

Mr. Arthur D. Pedley writes:—

Sir,—In your issue of 3rd instant, Mr. Butement says that it is possible white sulphate of lead might have its life shortened by exposure to open air. This is true of all paints, otherwise it would not be necessary to repaint. At the same time, white sulphate of lead is not affected by exposure as much as white carbonate of lead, for it is manufactured with an excess of sulphur from the galena ore, and in consequence cannot take up the sulphurous fumes of cities and factories which destroy both coloured and white pigments.

If your correspondent would look at the basement of the Royal Exchange, Pitt-street, occupied by Messrs. Wunderlich, which was painted over two years ago with the Amorphous White Lead Company's production, he will, I am sure, be quite satisfied on the subject of durability and whiteness.

During the last ten years the production of white sulphate of lead in the United States has increased enormously, showing it has thoroughly established itself in the favour of the trade; in fact, Professor Savin, of New York, the eminent paint authority, told the writer that now it would be almost impossible to produce the highest quality of American mixed paint without it, and in the severe test it has been submitted to at the Government Paint Experimental Institute at Fargo, in North Dakota, it has fully borne out its high reputation when tested alongside leading makes on fences with East and West aspects erected for the purpose in that most trying climate.

INTERCOLONIAL INVESTMENT L. AND B. COMPANY.

The half-yearly meeting of the above company was held yesterday. Mr. Alex. Campbell, chairman of directors, presided. The report and balance-sheet, of which we have already given particulars, were adopted. The chairman, in moving the adoption of the report, said that the transactions of the company during the half-year had been fairly successful, and the statement was a very satisfactory one, though the company had to provide a considerably increased amount for income tax under recent legislation. He made an interesting comparison between the figures in 1904 and at present, showing in that period that the capital had increased from £37,000 to £131,000; reserve fund, from £25,000 to £60,000; secured balances owing to the company, from £60,800 to £204,200; the assets from £95,000 to £273,000; and the dividend from £1475 to £5895; evidencing a very marked increase and improvement in the business. The managing director, in replying to a vote of thanks said the company had step by step been placed on an absolutely sound basis, and they hoped to keep it in such a position.

N.S.W. PHOSPHATES COMPANY, LTD.

At the statutory meeting of the above company, the managing directors' report and balance-sheet, together with the mine manager's report, were presented. The mine manager's report showed that a large tonnage of both grey and white phosphate rock was now in sight, with several hundreds of tons at grass and broken out ready for raising. The chairman, in moving the adoption of these reports said that the assays of samples of those two classes of rock made by Messrs. Dixon and Byrn, were highly satisfactory, and that all development work disclosed an ever-increasing quantity of good grade rock. The latest development—a find of very high-grade white rock—is apparently a large one, and the whole proposition showed very great promise. The retiring directors—Messrs. F. J. Wallis, H. B. Greene, D. Macfarlane, and C. E. Barrett, were all re-elected.

INCOME TAX PROBLEMS.

TAXING THE DEAD?

Mr. H. B. Smith writes:—

Sir,—Would you kindly inform me through your columns if a taxpayer died in July, 1913, has his estate to make a return in 1914? I have always been under the impression that, using the figures for the previous year was merely a method of assessing what his probable income would be for tax-paying purposes in the current year, but understand that the Commissioners are claiming that even a dead man has an income in 1914 for taxable purposes (although he died in 1913), and rely upon section 9 of the 1912 Act to support their contention.

There can be no doubt that this section gives them the power. Under the law as it now stands the income tax is really levied upon the income of the previous year—the previous yeas is no longer used as a basis for the current year, as was the case under the original Act.

COMMERCIAL.

THE MARKETS.

In the oil market yesterday whitelead on spot was almost unprocurable in parcels. Merchants had enough, and, perhaps, not enough for their ordinary distributing trade. Further sales of Champions to arrive were made again on terms not disclosed. The manufacturers still refused to guarantee shipment of orders now given before September. Linseed oil was stronger owing to an advance in prices in Great Britain. Blundell's, for prompt shipment, was quoted ½d up at 2/2 f.o.b, and Thistle oil a penny up at 2/1 f.o.b. for shipment July to September. The advance abroad it was expected would stiffen the prices of those merchants who were distributing first brands below the agreed upon rates of 3/8 and 3/10. Turpentine was quiet at 3/3 for pinetree. Parcels were quoted at 3/2, but with the slight easing of the American market and the moderate replenishment of stocks here some concession would be made to a buyer of a fair-sized lot. Copra, sun dried, in bags, was worth £20/5/ f.o.b export steamer, a fall of 10/ on the week.

Metals were dull in all lines except nails, in which irregular prices continued to rule. Some houses reported that, judging by the heavy sales, nails would not be required by retailers or by contractors for some months after the distributing houses make up their differences.

The tea market was active, and business was done on a satisfactory basis. At auction a parcel of 300 packages of Ceylons offered 250 were sold, prices ranging up to /10½. Of the 316 packages of Indian teas offered 100 were sold, at up to /11½. Competition for the Ceylons was good for all good liquoring kinds. Private sales during the week include 1000 packages of Ceylons up to /13.

The jute market was firmer yesterday in cornsacks and woolpacks. As regards the latter the firmness was owing to lots shut out of the ordinary May boat. In the past there would have been a rush to cover. But to-day the contract is so worded that one boat buyer when goods are shut out of one boat has the option of cancelling or of having his goods brought on by the next boat. As the next boat in this case is only six or seven days later, it is certain that the majority of the short shipped packs will be brought in in her. Sales of spot lots were made at 3/, and of May shipment at 3/1. Cornsacks became stronger, because Calcutta prices advanced /1½ per bushel on the low quotations given before the holiday in that city. For August-September shipment 6/4½ c.i.f was asked. Importers accordingly advanced values of November delivery to 6/6½ net, or to 6/10 delivered, with four months' terms. Spot lots were available at 6/4 net. Branbags were well held, and none on spot were let out under 5/6 net. October-March shipment was offered at 5/1½ to 5/2 ships slings.

THE FALL IN COPRA.

Copra has fallen from its high estate. Since Christmas there has been a fall of £5 per ton, yesterday's quotation f.o.b. export steamer being £20/5/ for sun dried in bags, and there are evidences that the weakness will be manifest for sometime to come. What has caused the latest drop has not been related by cable, but according to mail advices the candle and soap makers were not anxious to operate, as the hardening process of oils recently described in these columns had enabled them to obtain from the fish and seed oils substitutes cheaper than cocoanut oil. Owing to this limitation of buyers the manufacturers of nut butter had practically the market in their hands, and as the supply was, and apparently still is, beyond the demand, the value has fallen. The mild winter in the United Kingdom and on the Continent kept down the price of butter, so that the consumption of nut butter was still further prejudicially affected. The summer is keeping the butter at a low price, and no improvement can be looked for until cold weather is again felt. Even at £20/5/ for copra there is still a considerable margin before a non-paying basis of cocoanut plantations is reached.

HIGH-CLASS TEA AT AUCTION.

It is not often that high-class teas are offered to the trade at auction. Importers prefer to dispose of them by private treaty. Yesterday, however, a line of fine Darjeelings was offered, but the buyers apparently did not appreciate the quality to the full, and would not offer more than 1/6 per lb for it. At this bid the vendor withdrew the lot with the hope of getting his price privately. The other half of the shipment was discharged at Melbourne, where 1/8 per lb was realised.

BREADSTUFFS.

THE MARKET STEADY.

Again there was little to report in the wheat market yesterday. For parcels sellers asked 3/10½ ex trucks Darling Island, but the utmost that shippers would give was 3/10¼, while most would not give more than 3/10½. In the country the shippers were offering up to 3/5¼ in the stacks, equal to 3/10 ex trucks Sydney. Farmers, however, were holding off.

Flour was quiet at £9 per ton for bakers' lots delivered. Bran and pollard had a steady demand at £5 per ton.

At Darling Harbour yesterday 2609 tons of wheat, and 87 tons of flour were manifested to arrive.

GRIEVANCES OF CONSIGNEES.

JOINT COMMITTEE APPOINTED.

The Sydney Chamber of Commerce held a special meeting of members yesterday to consider the present scale of charges for sorting and stacking on the wharfs.

The president of the Chamber, Mr. H. Y. Braddon, presided over a representative attendance of consignees and persons interested in shipping.

In explaining the object of the meeting, Mr. Braddon emphasised the fact that the Chamber of Commerce had nothing to do with the imposition of the present scale of charges for sorting or stacking—in fact, with any such charges. Six years ago, at a meeting convened by the Collector of Customs (Mr. Mills), the chamber unanimously approved of a scale of charges being made, but the chamber, as a chamber, had no more to do with their imposition than the Post Office clock. He hoped that they would consider the question in a calm and impartial manner. Some of the consignees, he understood, had come to the meeting to throw bouquets at themselves. (Laughter.) If that were so, he hoped that it would be done in a spirit of chivalry. (Laughter.) He also trusted that none of them would make the charge that there was no service being rendered to the consignees. It was no use saying that; every shipping agent knew full well what he was spending in order to meet the requirements of the consignees, and whilst the consignees could not know, he did not know. The shipping agent had certain costs piling up, and so far as he, Mr. Braddon, was concerned, he was perfectly willing to show his books to anybody who doubted his word. They had to remember that the shipping agents were not their own masters, they could not pick and choose their own wharfs, they could not erect them: the best they could do was to arrange for wharfs to be leased to them. Some had to work on wharfs and jetties that were admittedly not suited to present day requirements, and it also had to be remembered that it cost them more to work wharfs of this description than if the wharfs were of a suitable order. Further, the labour they had to employ was not so efficient as it used to be, a great deal less work was done under the awards of the courts as they stood at present, and that added immensely to the expenses. He was not there to say there was no cause for complaint, but he would ask them to bear in mind the fact that great difficulties existed, with which the shipping agents could not cope. The port of Sydney had grown enormously during the past 10 years, and the size of the wharfs and the facilities offered had not, as they all knew, been extended proportionately. That was a matter for which nobody in particular could be blamed. When all these factors were admitted, he thought that rather than continue internal troubles between the consignees and shipping agents the best thing would be the appointment of a committee to consist of representatives of both parties, not to consider whether there should be charges, but to deal with cases where anomalies might be found to exist. If the consignees had a committee to appeal to they would find such a body would be able to give them satisfaction, and if such an arrangement as the appointment of a committee appealed to them it might also appeal to the shipping agents. He was of opinion that now he had put forward that suggestion, he might very well vacate the chair to make room for anybody the meeting might care to appoint. At the request of the meeting, Mr. Braddon was asked to continue in the chair.

Sir William McMillan proposed the following resolution:—"That a committee be appointed consisting of three representatives of the shipping agents, and three representatives of consignees, to inquire into the grievances alleged by the consignees regarding the inadequacy of the sorting arrangements, and the question of the rate charged under the present conditions."

In moving the resolution, Sir William said he did not know why the chairman had laboured the non-liability of the chamber in this matter. They, as commercial men, always turned in the direction of the chamber when they had difficulties to overcome, and which needed solution.

The Chairman: The chamber should not be charged with having imposed the duties.

Sir William: Whatever had been done had been done between the shipping people and the consignees. He had a memorandum from his firm which was a strong indictment against the shipping companies and the wharfs, and he thought they must take it for granted that a general feeling of dissatisfaction existed at the way the work was being done. The facilities were better now than they were, so far as the wharfs were concerned, and the consignees thought this was a favourable opportunity to review the position. In this connection the chairman was the defendant, pleading for the shipping companies against the plaintiffs—poor seamen. (Laughter.) However, for the moment, they would have to believe that he was immaculate, and that they were at fault. They were all honest people, and had carefully investigated the matters in dispute before asking for a meeting. Every one present, he took it, was present to protest against the non-carrying out of the original bargain between the shipping companies and themselves. He favoured the appointment of a committee to take evidence to see whether grievances did exist, and to deal with the offenders if grievances were proved. (Cheers.)

Mr. F. J. Hitchin, of the Chamber of Manufacturers, was of the opinion that consignees were not getting an adequate service for the charges being made. At certain wharfs before charges were made, the facilities offered were as good as those existing to-day. (Hear, hear.) Under the present scheme certain wharfs had been a failure.

Mr. S. Hordern, president of the Master Retailers' Association, said a great injustice had been done to retailers. They did not mind paying 8½d a ton for stacking and sorting, providing the work was properly done, but it was not. His association wanted value for its money. (Cheers.). It would be interesting to ascertain what money was being collected from the consignees by the shipping people. His association had made an estimate that the companies were collecting £1000 a week, and spending £200 of it. (Loud laughter.) Yes; his association had hunted round, and believed they were on the mark. The shipping companies would have a hard job to convince consignees that they were spending the whole of the money they received. (Laughter.) He complained of excessive charges on low-grade goods.

Mr. W. B. Larke, who said he represented the motor car interests, asked how motor cars could be sorted and stacked. (Laughter.)

The Chairman, dealing with the alleged excessive charges on low-class goods, said it was not only the consignees who had cause for complaint—the shipping agents could present their side of the case.

An amendment to the resolution to the effect that the grievances alleged by shipping agents should also be inquired into was carried.

Sir William McMillan said he had no objection; the grievances of shipping agents were an unknown quantity. (Laughter.)

The Chairman: You will soon know all about them. (Laughter.)

The resolution was carried in its amended form.

A DAY LABOUR JOB.

QUIRINDI, Friday.

Members of the local rifle club are incensed at the department paying £71 to carry out work at the local rifle range which the club offered to do for £45. The work was left in a most unsatisfactory condition, and the club could get no satisfaction till they threatened to report the matter direct to the Minister. An officer was then sent up, and the work has been condemned, although previously passed and paid for, having been carried out under departmental supervision by day labour. The department has now promised to send up a man to complete the work to satisfaction, but by the time it is completed the cost will be fully £100.

SMALLPOX.

Three cases of smallpox were reported by the Board of Health yesterday, all being of the mild type. Two of the patients were adults, and the third a child, two coming from Annandale, and one from Waterloo, the infection being traced to the Newtown-St. Peters' area.

I have found a cure for lazy boys, declared a doctor at a meeting of the Paris Medical Society. He then detailed how he had found that boys who were backward or lazy at school were suffering from various ills like an incompletely developed throat, bad circulation, or exhaustion of the grey matter of the brain. In such cases he prescribed gymnastic exercises, and he had known "dull" boys get to the head of their class. Medical treatment, not the rod, he averred, is the specific.

AUSTRALIAN JOCKEY CLUB.

WINTER MEETING.

FIRST DAY.

ANTICIPATIONS.

The winter meeting of the Australian Jockey Club commences at Randwick this afternoon, and the outing provided for metropolitan sporting folk promises to be a most enjoyable one. The bill of fare to be discussed is varied and attractive, large fields seem assured, and the quality of the horses engaged foreshadows high-class sport. The course and its surroundings are looking their best, thanks to the recent favourable weather, and the track is excellent going. The transit arrangements include special trams, starting from Circular Quay via Oxford-street and from the Railway loop and western suburbs via Cleveland-street at short intervals after midday. The customary provision has been made in the catering and other departments for the requirements of a large attendance, and everything else tending to make a successful reunion has received the attention of the management.

The sport commences at 1 p.m. with the First Hurdle Race, which promises to attract a large field, and a number of fair performers over the battens are engaged. Among the aspirants for distinction over the sticks is Maltchester, and should he take kindly to the game he should give a good account of himself under 11st 7lb. With 5lb less Special Messenger reads well, while Loughrea, Briarberry, Zoeholme, Quedong, Hampden Lad, Foothold, and Ubique should run well. An interesting contest seems assured, and at its close the numbers may be hoisted for Special Messenger, Briarberry, and Zoeholme.

A large field for the Novice Handicap looks a certainty, and the race wears a very open appearance. On recent performances, the most likely to run prominently are Marchwood, Chid, Thooloomi, Booyamurra, Meecal, and Grab Apple, and the judge may declare for Chid, Meecal, and Booyamurra.

An interesting battle is promised for the First Steeplechase, in which the most prominent parts should be taken by Lougarea, Wadden, Altar Boy, Don Q., and Nolinga, and the situations may be filled by Wadden, Altar Boy, and Nolinga, unless separated by Don Q.

Another large field may be expected at the post for the First Nursery Handicap, and a good contest should ensue, in which Mount Mostyn, Haut Special, Flavorous, Mythic, Royal Navy, and Little should figure prominently, and honours may be divided by Haut Special, Flavorous, and Mount Mostyn.

The June Stakes should be answerable for a big field, and the quality of the contestants suggests an interesting encounter. The most attractive at the weights appear to be Sylvander, Sweet Malt, Averse, La Fiancee, and Arianza, while Sweet Malt, La Fiancee and Arianza may pass the post in that order.

The afternoon's sport will be brought to a close with the Ellesmere Handicap, in which Malthusian, Firm, Limelight, Owen Roe, Sunlike, St. Carwyne, Sir Vive, and Trinobantes seem to have the best chances, and the numbers may be sent up for St. Carwyne, Sunlike, and Limelight.

The National Coursing Association wrote that Mr. Barker had appealed to the association, and asked for particulars of the evidence on which Mr. Barker was disqualified. The club decided to ask the judge for a report, and to get sworn statements from the judge and any other prominent citizens who heard Mr Barker's remarks. INTERNATIONAL RUGBY.

ENGLAND v METROPOLIS.

TWO POWERFUL TEAMS.

To-day's meeting of teams representing England and Metropolis at the Sydney Cricket Ground will be the initial appearance of the Englishmen in a tour, the primary object of which is the recovery of Northern Union football "ashes."

The English managers are playing twelve of the men who reached Sydney on Thursday, though the public would have liked to have seen Harold Wagstaff, Stanley Moorhouse, and A. P. Coldrick in action. However, these men could hardly have been expected to strip so soon after their arrival. The Englishmen will be led by William A. Davies, the great Welsh centre three-quarter, who has international honours under the Rugby Union code against South Africa, Scotland, and Ireland. He will be supported by a fast, heavy, and clever back division, with a set of forwards of remarkable physique (they average 14½st) and noted for their pace in the loose. Of the team chosen, B. Jenkins (centre three-quarter) is the only player who made the last tour to Australasia.

In the opening match of 1910 New South Wales won by 28 points to 14. In to-day's game a great deal will depend on the front rank of both set of forwards. Should Pearce succeed in beating Clampitt for the ball, the Metropolis backs should be hard to check. The younger men who are to fill the places of such experts as H. H. Messenger, the Farnsworth brothers, Herbert Gilbert, D. Frawley, Albert Broomham, have their chance to-day, and should they rise to the occasion a new era of football prosperity will be opened up for this State. The teams are as follow:—

England (colours: red and white bars).—Full-back, Alfred E. Wood (Oldham); three-quarters, J. R. Robinson (Rochdale Hornets), William A. Davies (Leeds), captain, B. Jenkins (Wigan), Frank Williams (Halifax); half-backs, J. Rogers (Huddersfield), G. Prosser (Halifax); forwards, Walter Roman (Rochdale Hornets), J. L. Clampitt (Broughton Rangers), William Jarman (Leeds), John W. Smales (Hunslet), J. W. Geurin (Hunslet), D. Holland (Oldham).

Average weight: Backs, 12½st., forwards, 14st.

Metropolis (colours red and black bands): Full-back, Howard Hallett (South Sydney); three-quarters, Walter Messenger (Eastern Suburbs), S. Deane (North Sydney, captain), W. Kelly (Balmain), H. Horder (South Sydney); half-backs, Ray Norman (South Sydney), A. Halloway (Eastern Suburbs); forwards, E. Courtney (Western Suburbs), S. Pearce (Eastern Suburbs), Frank Burge (Glebe), F. A. M'Cue (Newtown), C. Sullivan (North Sydney), J. Watkins (Eastern Suburbs).

Average weight, backs, 11½st; forwards 13st 6lb.

Referee: Mr. T. M'Mahon. Touch judges, Messrs. A. Farow and C. Hedley.

THE PRELIMINARY GAMES.

Early matches will be played as follow:—

12.30 p.m.: Queensland Railway Juniors v New South Wales Railway Juniors (Referee: Mr. A. E. Martin).

FOOTBALL.

TO-DAY'S FIXTURES.

The return Interstate engagement between Queensland and New South Wales at Brisbane will comprise the most important fixture in Rugby Union circles to-day. The visitors have won two games, and are regarded as likely to complete their tour without a defeat.

Two attractive first-grade matches are listed for this afternoon. University and South Sydney, who are leading in the competition, will meet at the University Oval. South Sydney are at present undefeated, but have played two drawn games, while University have only been beaten once. Another interesting contest will be that between Newtown and Glebe at the Wentworth Park Oval. It is noteworthy that this is the first occasion that the Union has played a game on this oval for eight years. Following are the fixtures:—

INTERSTATE.

New South Wales v Queensland, Brisbane.

FIRST GRADE.

University v South Sydney, University, 3.15 (B. I. Swannell); Glebe v Newtown, Wentworth, 3.15 (O. H. Harding); Randwick v Manly, Rushcutter Bay, 3.15 (A. C. W. Hill); North Sydney v Western Suburbs, St. Luke's, 3.15 (E. E. Keary); Balmain v St. George, Drummoyne, 3.15 (E. A. Hansen). Eastern Suburbs have the bye.

SECOND GRADE.

Manly v Newtown, University, 2 (W. G. French); Glebe v Eastern Suburbs, Wentworth, 2 (S. H. Slater); St. George v South Sydney, Hurstville, 3.15 (G. C. Brice); University v S.T. College, Alexandria, 3.15 (R. C. Brown); North Sydney v Randwick, Randwick, 3.15 (R. P. Cohen). Western Suburbs have the bye.

THIRD GRADE.

Manly v Bondi, Rushcutter Bay, 2, (A. N. Northcott); Newtown v Darlinghurst, Alexandria, 2 (T. O'Neill); Glebe v Chatswood, Jubilee, 3.15 (F. A. Randle); Randwick v South Sydney, Randwick, 2 (E. A. Ashworth); Y.M.C.A. v Fivedock, postponed; Ryde v S. T. College, Ryde, 3.15 (J. Bruckhauser). Eastern Suburbs have received a forfeit from North Sydney.

A NEW UNION.

BOWRAVILLE, Friday.

The New South Wales Rugby Union having given permission for the foundation of a union in the Nambucca district, the following officers were elected:—Patron, Mr. H. D. Morton; president, Mr. Wallace; vice-presidents, Messrs. McNiven, Coonan, Eichmann, and Howe; treasurer, Mr. Eames; secretary, Mr. Fotheringham; representative on the council, Mr. F. Barnett.

BATHURST, Friday.

Mr. L. Critchley, secretary of the Rugby Football League, has received a communication from the secretary of the Annandale team, advising that that team will not be able to visit Bathurst on the holiday.

RUGBY LEAGUE.

N.S.W. Tramways v Queensland Tramways and Railways was played at the Sydney Cricket Ground No. 2 yesterday, and resulted in a draw—8 points all. Teams:—

N.S.W. Tramways: Full-back, L. Eyles; three-quarters, J. Donohue, G. Duffin, W. Grenfell, T. Bruce; half-backs S. Waight, C. Madden; forwards, A. Kennedy, W. Milne, J. Lewin, P. Conroy, J. Moroney, C. Search.

Queensland Tramways and Railways:—Full-back, C. Sullivan; three-quarters, T. Strover, H. McCosh, J. Patrick, A. McAnelly; half-backs, J. Nethercote, W. Patten; forwards, W. Warren, G. Page, J. McKinnon, G. Beaumont, A. Leigh, C. Schulte.

Referee: Mr. L. H. Kearney.

The opening half was very evenly contested, with New South Wales displaying better knowledge of the finer points of the game, but the Queensland forwards were aggressive in the open, and their deadly tackling kept the New South Wales backs fairly well in check. During this period tries for New South Wales were scored by Grenfell and Donohue, whilst for Queensland Warren scored a try, and Strover kicked a penalty goal.

After the interval Kennedy kicked a penalty goal for New South Wales, and M'Kenna scored a try for Queensland. New South Wales held a decided advantage during the closing stages of the game, and on one occasion Bruce scored after a brilliant burst of handling by the backs, but the ex-Eastern Suburbs' three-quarter back lost the ball as he was diving to score. Full time scores were New South Wales, 8; Queensland, 8.

AUSTRALIAN.

TO-DAY'S LEAGUE GAMES.

The most important of to-day's series of matches is the Paddington-Central Western fixture. Excellent form has been shown by both teams of late, and if the play does not become congested through the small playing area at Hampden Oval it should be a fine contest. At the Australian Football Ground Newtown and North Sydney will meet for the first time this season, and as a win means much at this juncture to either team, a keen struggle can safely be anticipated. South Sydney are not likely to lose their unbeaten record in to-day's contest unless their opponents—East Sydney—provide the surprise of the season. Following are the fixtures:—

League.

North Sydney v Newtown, Australian Football Ground (L. J. Pitcher, field umpire); Paddington v Central Western, Hampden Oval (H. J. Reynolds, field umpire); South Sydney v East Sydney, Erskineville Oval (A. Dunsmore, field umpire); Sydney have the bye.

Second Grade.

Newtown v North Sydney (W. Vickers, field umpire); Paddington v Central Western (J. Blackaby, field umpire); South Sydney v East Sydney (E. McDonald, field umpire). All second grade matches start at 1.30, and precede the League fixtures.

NAVAL COMPETITION.

H.M.S. AUSTRALIA V ENCOUNTER.

The first match for the Naval Shield presented by the Victorian Football League for competition amongst the warships of the Commonwealth Navy took place on Thursday at Erskineville Oval between H.M.S. Australia and H.M.S. Encounter. At half-time the scores stood, Australia, 2—9; Encounter, 2—3. The same evenness of play continued to the end, H.M.S. Australia winning with 4—17 to 4—8.

BRITISH ASSOCIATION.

THE GARDINER CUP.

TO-DAY'S MATCHES.

The games scheduled for to-day mark the opening round of the historic Gardiner Challenge Cup competition, which carries with it the State Championship, now entering on its twenty-seventh season, and as the competition is conducted on the "knock-out" principle, the keenness to be among the survivors is often responsible for some startling surprises. The sole country representative in the cup games to-day is Portland, whose team is:—Thomas; Garrard and McEwen; Clark, Ramsbottom, and Woods; Clough, Simpson, Baxter, Fairhurst, and Mower. Holroyd will need to be at their best, as Portland has already beaten last year's Western District premiers (Lithgow Thistle) twice—4 to 1 and 2 to 0—this season. Good ties will take place at the Sports Ground and at Epping. Unless interfered with by the disposition of the State Championship games, all other leagues will go forward a step.

The Victorians will open their campaign at Clyde against a representative Granville Association team, and that fixture will be preceded by an inter-association junior game. Following are the fixtures:—

GRAND PRIX OF AUSTRALIA.

SANCTION FOR A COURSE.

GOULBURN, Friday.

At the last meeting of the Mulwaree Shire Council a letter from the Motor Cycle Club of N.S.W. was read, asking for permission to hold a road race on the shire roads. It was stated that it was proposed to hold the race over the Goulburn-Bungonia-Windellama course, and to call it "The Grand Prix of Australia."

It was resolved to raise no objection, providing every precaution is taken to prevent accident. Councillor Old moved,—"That, in view of the probability of the Sydney Motor Club holding future speed trials on the roads of the shire, this council request the club to intimate whether it is prepared to grant a subsidy during the present year for construction of repairs to certain roads, and the amount of such subsidy." The councillor suggested a subsidy of £50. Some of the councillors were opposed to the matter being taken up officially, and an amendment was carried that no action be taken until the council acquired greater power in the regulating of motor traffic. The president said if Councillor Old were prepared to enter privately into negotiations with the club he (the president) would be pleased to receive, say, £100, for the roads.

BOXING.

WORLD'S MIDDLEWEIGHT CHAMPIONSHIP.

JEFF SMITH v JIM CLABBY.

To-night, at the Rushcutter Bay Stadium, one of the most important boxing matches of recent years will take place between Jeff Smith and Jim Clabby in what is termed an eliminating contest for the world's middleweight supremacy. Both men are extremely clever exponents of boxing, and both are young, Clabby being 24 and Smith 22. Clabby has had a much longer public career than Smith, but in his two contests in Sydney against M'Goorty and Bradley the latter demonstrated that he is a hard hitter, as well as being extremely clever. As Clabby is also clever, a most scientific contest should be witnessed, especially as both men are in excellent condition. The booking for the contest has been very heavy, and as a precaution against congestion of traffic the doors of the stadium will be opened at 6 o'clock, or earlier if the circumstances warrant it. Each man is bound down by forfeit to make 11st 6lb ringside. Preliminary contests will begin at half-past 7 o'clock, and will consist of six rounds between Art Tierney and Joe Lonegan, and ten rounds between Sid Moss (England) and Eddie Regan. The match for the world's title will begin at half-past 8, with Mr. Harold Baker as referee.

OLYMPIA TOURNAMENT.

There were four contests in the £1000 tournament promoted by the Olympia Athletic Club, and four special bouts decided at the Newtown Stadium last evening, when there was again a large attendance. Mr. Wally Weekes was the referee. Results:—

TOURNAMENT CONTESTS.

8st 6lb Division.—Billy Molyneux (Newtown) and Young Nelson (Arncliffe) went the full term, when Molyneux, who attacked throughout, gained a points decision.

9st 9lb Division.—Arthur Tierney (Newtown) beat Ben Pengelly (Redfern) after a strenuous six rounds. Both shaped well. Eddie M'Lean (Newtown) and Reg. Sproule (Redfern) provided the best contest of the evening, Sproule being outpointed at the end of six rounds.

Heavyweight Division.—Jack Hall (Glebe) easily accounted for Jim Redmond (Glebe), knocking him out in the second round.

SPECIAL BOUTS.

Bantams.—Jack Freeman (Randwick) won from Sid Cooper (Newtown), the latter's towel being thrown in at the conclusion of the third round.

Featherweights.—Herb Williams (Newtown) and Jack Humphries (Alexandria), two clever lads, provided an interesting six-round bout, Humphries winning by a small margin of points.

Lightweights.—Tom Blackmore (Daceyville) and Fred Harrison (Neutral Bay) put up a strenuous contest for four and a half rounds, when Blackmore cried enough, Harrison gaining the decision.

Heavyweights.—In the bout between Chewy Williams (City) and Peter Murphy (Newtown), who took the place of Frank Backstock, who was ill, Williams was down twice for some seconds in the third round. His towel was then thrown in, but the referee would not give a decision, and declared the contest "no fight."

RICE BEATS KELLER.

LONDON, June 5.

Bandsman Rice outpointed Terry Keller in a 15-rounds' bout at the Liverpool Stadium last night.

AMUSEMENTS.

THE DOLORES' CONCERTS.

Mlle. Antonia Dolores, a singer of especial charm, as familiarly known and admired in the great Continental capitals from London to Warsaw, as she is throughout the United States, South Africa, and Australasia, will open her sixth tour of the Commonwealth at the Town Hall to-night. The star soprano will be heard in Mozart's lovely aria, "Deh Vieni," in the brilliant polacca, "Je Suis Titania," from "Mignon;" and in songs by Brahms, Strauss, and Tchaikowsky. Her recital will also include several favourite English songs, such as, "O, Bid Your Faithful Ariel Fly," "Echo, Tell Me," "Dear Heart," and "On the Ling Ho." Mr. Boyd Wells, the American pianist, who has been absent for seven years, will play pieces by Chopin and McDowell. The brief season will be continued with recitals next Thursday and Saturday. The plan is at Paling's.

"GIPSY LOVE."

In "Gipsy Love," Lehar's comic opera to be presented by the reorganised Royal Comic Opera Company at Her Majesty's on Saturday next, the following will be the cast: Mr. Derek Hudson, Jozsi, a gipsy musician; Mr. J. Ralston, Andor, an inn-keeper; Mr. Julius Roscius, Jonel, betrothed of Ilona; Mr. Phil Smith, Kajetan; Mr. V. Lauschmann, Kajetan's father; Mr. Field Fisher, Dragotin, a Roumanian nobleman; Miss Elsie Spain, Ilona, Dragotin's daughter; Miss Celia Ghiloni, Julesa, Ilona's nurse; Miss Dorothy Brunton, Jolan; Miss Olive Godwin, Zorika, a gipsy; Miss Gertrude Glyn, Lady Babby, an English girl; Mlle. Vlostus Novotna will be the solo dancer. The curtain will rise at 7.45, after which there will be no admission until the end of the first act.

"READY MONEY."

On Saturday, June 20, "Ready Money" will be staged at the Criterion Theatre by the same company now appearing in "The Argyle Case." The new production—a comedy by James Montgomery—deals with the influence of money to attract money. It is an amusing satire on the human weakness of following success, or the semblance of it. Mr. Charles Millward will figure as the man with "the ready," and associated with him in a good comedy role will be William Harrigan. The producer of "Ready Money" will be Mr. E. W. Morrison.

HER MAJESTY'S THEATRE.

This afternoon and Monday (1.45) there will be extra matinees of "The Forty Thieves" at Her Majesty's Theatre, after which the final matinee of the season will be given on Wednesday next. The farewell to Messrs. Lupino, Brett, Athelwood, Misses Lonnen, Firmin, Dickinson, and other favourite artists is announced for Friday next. Tuesday, Wednesday, and Thursday will be souvenir nights, the gift consisting of a portfolio of photographic reproductions of scenes and artists.

CRITERION THEATRE.

There will be a holiday matinee on Monday (2 p.m.) of "The Argyle Case" at the Criterion Theatre, where that clever detective drama is now in its last 12 nights. The serious side of the plot is not everything in this play, as, thanks to the talent of Maggie Moore in the first act, the character of the fussy black cook causes uproarious laughter.

THEATRE ROYAL.

Besides the extra holiday matinee on Monday (instead of to-day), Mr. Harry Lauder will appear next Wednesday afternoon, whilst every evening the Scottish humorist is sending large audiences away in high good humour to their homes, after joining in "A Wee Deoch and Doris." Messrs. J. and N. Tait's new English vaudeville party provides capital amusement in the first part. The plan is at Nicholson's. On the holiday the plan will be at the theatre all day.

LITTLE THEATRE.

Brinsley Sheridan's brilliant comedy "The School for Scandal" is drawing large audiences at the Little Theatre, with Miss Violet Paget as the flighty Lady Teazle, Mr. G. Kay Souper, as the fretful Sir Peter, Mr. Hugh Buckler, as the light-hearted Charles, and Mr. Alfred Bristowe as the saturnine and deceitful Joseph. Thus young play-goers are able to enjoy all the wit and satire which surrounds these, and other fine characters, in the classic play. There will be a holiday matinee on Monday.

PALACE THEATRE.

"Lured to London" will be the new production by Messrs. Dix and Baker's company at the Palace Theatre this evening, when Miss Ethel Buckley will appear in a bright and telling boy-part as Natty, the hero of the slums. There will be no lack of sensational incident picturesquely staged in this melodrama, in which Mr. C. R. Stanford, Mr. Robert Inman, and others, will appear. There will be a holiday matinee on Monday.

ADELPHI THEATRE.

To-night at the Adelphi Theatre, the George Willoughby Dramatic Company will play the successful London melodrama "The Girl Who Took the Wrong Turning," with Mr. George Cross in the leading role of Willie Mason, and Miss Vera Remee in that of Sophie Coventry, the girl who took the wrong turning, with Miss Gwendoline Doris as the girl who took the right one. The drama will be mounted on an excellent scale, and should enjoy a successful six nights run. There will be a holiday matinee on Monday. The plan is at Nicholson's until 1 o'clock to-day, and then at the White Rose, Adelphi-buildings.

SYMPHONY ORCHESTRA MATINEE.

Mr. Leonard Borwick will make an appearance at the Sydney Symphony Orchestra matinee at the Town Hall to-day (3 p.m.), when the famous English pianist will play Schumann's "Piano Concerto in A Minor," under Mr. Joseph Bradley's baton. Brahms's "Symphony in D Major," Wagner's "Faust Overture," and Saint Saens "Marche Militaire" will be rendered. The return of Mme. Slapoffski will be welcomed. The operatic soprano will sing the "Jewel Song" and "Joan's Last Farewell" (Tschaikowsky), with orchestra. The plan is at Paling's.

THE BORWICK RECITALS.

On Monday evening Mr. Leonard Borwick will give his third recital at Concordia Hall. Opening with his own transcription of the Bach "Organ Fugue in G Minor," the pianist will render a Beethoven "Rondo," three of Scarlatti's "Harpsichord Lessons," and the Chopin "Sonata in B Minor." Besides a fine Schumann group, there will be Mendelssohn's "Spring Song," a Rachmaninoff "Prelude," a Sgambati "Minuet," and Liszt's "Hungarian Rhapsody No. 12," the whole forming a strongly attractive programme. The plan is at Paling's.

TOWN HALL HOSPITAL CONCERT.

At the Town Hall on Monday, June 15, in the presence of his Excellency Sir Gerald Strickland and Lady Edeline Strickland, the Hon. W. P. Cullen, K.C.M.G., and Lady Cullen, and Lady Patey, and other patrons, an orchestral concert will be given in aid of the Royal Hospital for Women and the Renwick Hospital for Infants, when a special programme will include the entr'actes to the third acts of "Lohengrin" and "Die Meistersinger," and the "Entrance of the Gods" ("Rheingold"), under Mr. Joseph Bradley's baton, and items by Mrs. George Earp, Miss Dorothea Spinney, and Mr. Philip Wilson. The plan is at Paling's.

ROYAL SYDNEY LIEDERTAFEL.

The Royal Sydney Liedertafel will give their next concert at the Town Hall on Wednesday, June 17, when Mr. W. Arundel Orchard will conduct Gernsheim's "Salamis," a stirring work extolling the triumphs of the Greek fleet, Elgar's "Leveine," a setting of Bret Harte's poem recalling the Civil War, and Dudley Buck's setting of Tennyson's "Bugle Song." Miss Ross Langenegger, a new dramatic soprano from Paris, will sing Weber's "Softly Sighs," and Mr. J. Wellby, a new basso, will be heard in "She Alone Charmeth My Sadness." Mr. Frank Hutchens will be the solo pianist. Plan at Paling's on Wednesday.

"MERRIE ENGLAND."

The third concert of the seventh season of the Chatswood Musical Society was held at Chatswood on Thursday evening, when Edward German's "Merrie England" was rendered in concert form for the first time in New South Wales. The concert, which proved most enjoyable, was largely attended. The principal characters were: Bessie Throckmorton (Miss Jean Cocks); Jill-all-alone (Miss Muriel Casey); Queen Elizabeth (Miss Rita Hogarth); Sir Walter Raleigh (Mr. Percy French); the Earl of Essex (Mr. Charles Schmidt). Mr. H. Sherlock acted as conductor, and Mr. W. J. Grieves leader of the orchestra.

AUSTRALIANS IN VIENNA.

On March 20 Miss Daisy Kennedy, the young Adelaide violinist, and Mrs. Carmen Pinschof Harris, a Melbourne contralto, joined in a concert at the Large Hall of the Music Verein, Vienna. The "Fremden Blatt," of March 21, states that Miss Kennedy played Mozart's "Violin Concerto in D" with the Tonkuenstler Orchestra, "with resolute bowing and eminent facility," and also praised the contralto, who was "boisterously encored."

MISS DAGMAR THOMSON.

At the Repertory Theatre, on Tuesday evening next, Miss Dagmar Thomson (from the studio of Mr. W. J. Coad), will give a violin recital. This artist will play "Concerto" (Paganini), "Sonata in D" (Hadel), arrangements by Kreisler, and several well-known works. Assistance will be given by Mr. Philip Wilson and Mr. J. Carlton Fay. The plan is at Paling's.

THE SALON TRIO CONCERT.

At the St. James's Hall on Tuesday, June 16, the Salon Trio, comprising Miss Florence Brown, Miss Dorothy Curtis, and Mr. Frank Hutchens, will give their third concert. The plan is at Paling's.

MR. COAD'S CLASSICAL RECITAL.

At the King's Hall on Thursday, June 18, Mr. W. J. Coad will give his second violin recital. He will play concertos by Mozart, Truman and Vieuxtemps, in the course of a fine programme. Assistance will be given by Mr. J. Carlton Fay, as pianist.

THE HAROLD BAUER SEASON.

Messrs. J. and N. Tait announce that they will present the celebrated pianist Harold Bauer at the Sydney Town Hall, commencing on Saturday, June 27. This great artist occupies an acknowledged position of eminence in Europe. Moreover, the great position Harold Bauer holds has been achieved at a time when the standard of pianistic attainment seems to have absolutely reached the limit of human possibility. Now at the very zenith of his powers, Australian music-lovers should give him an enthusiastic welcome. The box plans for Sydney season open at Nicholson's on Monday, June 22.

TRINITY COLLEGE, LONDON.

It is announced that next Saturday will be the last day for the receipt of entries for the practical examinations of Trinity College of Music taking place in September-October. On the same day the theory examinations will be held at the Cleveland-street Superior Public School.

AUSTRAL STRING QUARTET.

The Austral String Quartet (Messrs. Cyril Monk, L. D. Hage, S. Vost Jansen, and Carl Gotsch) will give the second concert of their 1914 season at St. James's Hall on Tuesday next at 8 p.m. The programme will include Dvorak's String Quartet, Brahms' Pianoforte Quartet, Slow Movement from Schubert's D Minor String Quartet, and the first performance of Sonata for 'cello and piano by Rex de Cairos Rego. The assisting artists will be Miss Phyllis Seed and Mr. Frank Hutchens. The plan is at Nicholson's.

JENSEN'S ACADEMY OF MUSIC.

The half-yearly distribution of medals and prizes to the pupils of the above academy took place on Wednesday evening at Paling's concert hall, in the presence of a large audience. An enjoyable programme of instrumental items was contributed to by Misses Smith and Heather (cornet), Miss Linda Hanson and Mr. S. Tomkin (banjo duet), Miss Green and [illegible] Master Weber (violin), and Mr. V. Tobin (flute), whilst orchestral items and mandoline and banjo ensembles, with songs by the Misses Merrick and Bishop, were also included.

N. J. GEHDE'S CONCERT.

Mr. N. Gehde's next Sunday concert will be held in the Town Hall on the afternoon of June 14. Miss Elsie Pearless will sing the "Polacca" (Mignon) and "The Irish Folk Song."

BERTRAM FLOHM RECITAL.

Among the students who are to take part at the Bertram Flohm recital on June 12 will be Madame Shaw-Mayer in some of her own musical monologues, Miss Gypsy Middlehurst and Miss Meta Brayford (of the J. C. Williamson companies), and Miss Elsie Kingwell, Newcastle representative of the Bertram Flohm School. The programme will include some comediettas and humorous sketches. The plan is at Paling's.

MISS HELLMRICH'S RECITAL.

Among the many smaller concerts given in St. James's Hall this season, one of the most enjoyable was that given last night by Miss Dorothy Hellmrich, a singer who has the advantage of a charming platform presence. The programme opened with Brahms' "Sapphic Ode" and "Down in the Forest," by Landon Ronald—two popular items that evoked considerable applause. Possibly her best item was the last, a group of songs of the Northern Hills by Oliver. In the first, "Memory Song," the singer exhibited a delightfully pure soprano voice, employed in a subdued and idyllic manner. In "When the Ships Come Home," Miss Hellmrich's rendering vividly suggested the girl's plaintive song, full of patience and hope, in contrast with the fervour which inspired the last of the group, "Spring's on the Mountains." In all these, Miss Hellmrich was materially assisted by her teacher and accompanist, Mr. Beattie. Among the assisting artists was Miss Kathleen Beattie, who gave Liszt's "Lie Bestraum," and later two etudes by Chopin; and Mr. Henri Staell, who was heard in the first movement of Brahms' Sonata in A major, and a "Rondo Capriccioso" by Saint Saens. There was a large and enthusiastic audience.

THE WALTER BENTLEY PLAYERS.

The Walter Bentley Players will give their usual monthly recital at the St. James' Hall on June [illegible] next. The programme will include serious and humorous sketches, and a scene from "Richelieu," with Walter Bentley as the Cardinal. In every way an attractive entertainment has been arranged, including such sketches as "The Bashful Man," "The Green-eyed Monster," and "A Little Mistake."

MISS ALICE FORSCUTT'S RECITAL.

Miss Alice Forscutt, from the Bertram Flohm Studio, gave a humorous and dramatic recital at [illegible] Hall last night, before a fairly large audience. Miss Forscutt, who has appeared recently at Mr. [illegible] recitals, describes herself as an entertainer. This designation would be perfectly justified if applied solely to drawing-room entertaining. As a platform artist she just lacks the necessary power to hold an audience of two or three hundred people. In one of her monologues, "His First Long Trousers" (Shaw-Mayer), she was good excepting in the part where the boy is supposed to cry, during which she was quite incoherent. The same fault must be noted in the "Mad Scene" from "Hamlet," most of which was quite unintelligible beyond the first two or three rows. However, Miss Forscutt possesses a refined voice and pleasing manner, and, within her scope, should be popular. Miss Dorrie Ward was amongst the assisting artists, and pleased the audience with "A Chain of Roses" (Lohr) and other songs. Mr. Bryce Carter contributed several items, including [illegible] "Romance." Others assisting included Misses Evelyn Douglas and Winnie Morse, Messrs. Charles Walsh and George Edmondson.

MISS GRACE STAFFORD'S RECITAL.

Miss Grace Stafford's students' recital at St. James' Hall this evening will include musical monologues, a scene from "As You Like It," the performance by the Stafford Strollers of "Dearest Mamma," the costumed comedy "Catching the Cat," and selections by Mrs. Gibbons' orchestra. The plan is at Paling's.

MANLY MUSICAL SOCIETY.

The Manly Musical Society will give the final performance of their successful revival of "A Country Girl" at the Victoria Hall, Manly, this evening.

ROCKDALE MUSICAL SOCIETY.

A new musical society, to be known as the Rockdale Literary Institute Musical Society, has recently been formed at Rockdale. Over 100 members have so far been enrolled. Mr. John Mansfield, L.A.B., the well-known conductor of the Western Suburbs Philharmonic Society, has been appointed conductor; and Mr. P. E. Craven, of Bexley, hon. secretary.

SPENCER'S LYCEUM THEATRE.

"'Neath the Lion's Paw," a three-reel photo-play, by the Gaumont Company, teems with excitement, and contains apt illustrations of the perils and risks cinema actors undergo. Incidents of a thrilling nature include a fight for life by a girl who is attacked in a room by a lion that actually stands on its hind legs, pins her to the floor, and severely mauls her. According to the Spencer management, which presents the new feature at the Lyceum this afternoon, "'Neath the Lion's Paw" must rank as the most sensational picture play of the year. The programme contains in addition an interesting selection of topical, scenic, and comedy subjects.

PICTURE BLOCK THEATRES.

The star attraction at the Crystal Palace for Monday evening will be a powerful drama of New York Society, entitled "Clothes," a vivid contrast of love and desire, deceit, and sincerity.

The programme at the Lyric Theatre is more than usually interesting, and includes a pathetic domestic subject, "In the Watches of the Night."

At the Colonial Theatre the star film will be a series of Sherlock Holmes, dealing with the mystery of Boscombe Vale, in which the murder of Charles M'Carthy was solved.

"The Fatal Three" is the feature drama of the new series at the Empress Theatre. The last of an ancient lineage and a young diva of operatic fame are linked together in this graphic portrayal of the fulfilment of a tragic tradition.

WEST'S PICTURES.

There will be two performances both to-day and on Monday, at West's Olympia, in Oxford-street. To-day will see the final screening of the "[illegible] Vengeance," or "The Conscience of the Great Unknown." This is a powerful sensation, well produced, and has attracted crowded houses for the three nights. On Monday a big exclusive entitled "A Soldier and a Man," which is said to be a thrilling and touching story of love, war, and the triumph of a great friendship, will be screened, and is both realistically and artistically produced. Groom's Vice-Regal Orchestra will supply the incidental music.

Another high-class programme is being submitted at the American Picture Palace, the star film being "The Fall of Troy." Others in the programme are:—"Deceivers and Deceived" (drama), "The Decoy" (drama), "Wiffles' Tricks the Tecs" (comedy), and "Giletta is Jealous" (comedy).

"THE SILENCE OF DEAN MAITLAND."

A cinematograph presentation of "The Silence of Dean Maitland," in all its completeness of characterisation and scenic detail, from the studio of the Fraser Film Company, is to be submitted to local audiences. On Tuesday afternoon next, June 9, at the Criterion Theatre recipients of invitations will assemble to witness the initial screening of the film. On the following Saturday night, June 13, the picture will be staged at the Palace Theatre, under the direction of Dix and Baker, for twelve performances—six matinees, and six nights.

THE GLACIARIUM.

Ever since the opening night the Glaciarium has had big attendances of skaters, who have taken up their favourite winter sport with enthusiasm. In addition to the usual muster, the hockey players have also been on the rink, and a practice game was played last night. Another match has been arranged for Friday night. The three international skaters, Professor Hans Witte and Professor and Miss Muller, have also given a number of exhibitions during the week. The first-mentioned will give a display again to-night.

ROYAL ROLLER RINK.

A skating arena, double the size of any other in Australia, is available to skaters at the Royal Roller Rink, Moore Park, and the immense maplewood floor is proving a great attraction to skaters from every part of Sydney and suburbs. Free instruction is provided, and there are separate learners' rinks for both ladies and gentlemen. There is also a refreshment room and a strong band of 11 performers. Each of the three sessions daily is well patronised by skaters, who are keen to appreciate the splendid opportunities offered for their recreation.

IMPERIAL SALON DE LUXE.

The Imperial Salon De Luxe appears to grow in popularity every day, for the crowds who follow the art are becoming larger. There are two sessions daily, with Thespian suppers from 11 p.m. to 1 a.m. on Fridays. On Monday there will be a grand festival night, from 8 p.m. to 1 a.m.

THE DANDIES.

The Dandies, at the Coronation Theatre, Bondi Junction, are still drawing large and enthusiastic audiences. Messrs. Cashman, McAlister, Brooks, and Hall are specially popular, and the concerted items are a feature of the programmes.

SKATING.

The half-mile open handicap skating race at the Royal Roller Rink, Moore Park, was won by A. Pick (45yds), with R. Walton (60yds) 2, and E. Gooding (scr.), 3. Time 1m 24s. The two preliminary heats in the Half-mile Novice Handicap resulted as follows:—First heat, H. Griffith ([illegible]) 1, J. Pick (80yds) 2, C. Jackson (scr) 3. Time, 1m 32s; second heat, C. Hale (30yds) 1, G. Britt (80yds) 2, J. Flockhart and W. Lester, equal 3. Time, 1m [illegible]. The final will be run on Tuesday night.

RAILWAY INSTITUTE.

WELCOME TO QUEENSLAND FOOTBALLERS.

At the Railway Institute last night a welcome was tendered to the members of the Queensland railway football team. Mr. Scholer, works manager, presided. The Minister for Railways, Mr. Hoyle, and Mr. Page, manager of the team, were present.

The chairman said that the visit of the Queensland men showed a happy disposition on the part of the States to come together. He extended, on behalf of the railway employees of New South Wales, a hearty welcome to the northern representatives.

Mr. Hoyle, in proposing the toast of "Our Guests," said that the league was now a power in the land. It gave the best game that could be seen here, and the play was fast and clean. As long as the game was kept clean he was sure that the league had a bright future before it.

Mr. Page expressed the hope that the visit would at no far distant date be returned. He thanked the chairman and the Minister for their cordial welcome.

Viscount Hampden has offered to defray half the cost of a new water supply for the village of Codicote, Kimpton, and Whitwell, Herts. The total estimated cost of the scheme is [illegible].

MINING.

LEAD AND TIN BETTER.

MARKET UNAFFECTED.

SPECULATION STILL SLACK.

The fact of cabled information to hand yesterday morning stating that the prices of lead and tin were slightly better had only a slight effect upon the operations of the Sydney Stock Exchange. Operators appeared to place very little reliance on the better prices quoted as indicative that the home market had taken a turn for the better or was likely to continue on the strong side. This lack of confidence in metal values is due to the manner in which they have jigged up and down for some months past.

Indeed, there is a growing suspicion amongst local operators that metal quotations are often "rigged." The London Stock Exchange did not on Thursday respond to the better prices ruling for tin and lead, for in the majority of the cabled share quotations values were on the easy side. Several stocks were unchanged in price, whilst a very few indicated a fractional improvement. Taken altogether, however, there was nothing in the quotations to show that the depression had passed away.

It is quite true that a slightly better feeling pervaded the local market, more especially in the case of silver and tin stocks. This had the effect of preventing values going further to leeward, whilst, in a few instances, they recovered a shade. But a return to activity or buoyancy was never threatened. Shortly after noon the news was circulated that the Governor-General had granted a double dissolution of the Federal Houses of Parliament. The chief topic of conversation then ranged around the question, "How will this affect the market?" The view largely held was that it could hardly affect the amount of business now transacted daily, as it is small enough already; but as to whether or not share values would be effected operators were silent.

A glance at the list of Stock Exchange sales will show that in the copper section, Mount Morgans at 51/6 were unchanged from the previous day, whilst Wallaroo and Lyell Fertilisers sold steadily at 22/9. Hampdens commanded steady offers. In Barriers sales were recorded on solid lines in the case of British Broken Hill (old), Broken Hill Proprietary, and Broken Hill Souths (paid), whilst buyers of New Burragorang had to pay higher prices.

The gold division was again listless. Tin stocks were also quieter than usual, the slight recovery in the price of tin not having the least effect in stimulating business, though it undoubtedly stopped a further fall in share values.

The number of stocks dealt in during the afternoon corresponded with that of the morning, but the number of shares that changed hands was on a much smaller scale. Generally speaking, values were practically unaltered. The most noticeable business was the steady sales recorded in British Broken Hill (old), Tongkah Harbour (paid), and Carpathias.

According to our London correspondent, the metal quotations at the close of Thursday presented a more hopeful aspect. Both the "spot" and the three-months' price for copper was a shade better (1/3), but electrolytic copper was 5/ down since last Tuesday. On the other hand, the "spot" price for tin recovered £4 to £142/10/, whilst three months' contracts were recorded at £144/5/, or £3/15/ better. Lead at £19/5/ showed an improvement of 1/4, whilst spelter was unchanged at £21/.

MINING NOTES.

For the week ended June 5, the dredges of the Araluen Redbank Company washed up [illegible] dwt smelted gold.

The No. 1 plant of the Turon River Gold Dredging Company, in a run of 137 hours, recovered [illegible]oz of gold.

Operations at the Junction North Broken Hill mine, for the fortnight ended May 30, are officially recorded as follows:—Surface: The shaft from the surface to the 420 feet level advanced to 215 feet. No. 4 level: The 423 winze to meet the surface winze advanced to [illegible] feet. Foundations for 175-h.p. motor for concentrating mill have been completed, and a start has been made with erection of motor. The new electrically driven fan on No. 13 level was put into permanent use, and is effecting cooler conditions throughout the mine. A Dorr Thickener and tanks have been erected, and put into use for disposal of slime residues from the flotation plant.

It is reported that a small prospecting party, under the direction of Messrs. B. Ross and C. M. Miller, has located a copper lode near the rifle butts about two miles from the township of Condobolin. When first struck, the ore was two or three inches wide. A shaft is down about 15ft, and the ore has increased to 12 inches in width. No assays are yet available, but local men with a practical knowledge, estimate it as carrying 25 per cent. of copper. It is also believed to carry other minerals.

Mr. A. E. Cross, secretary of the Kingscott Gold-mining Company, Limited, Uralla, writes: "The chairman of directors reports that the crushing of stone that has been at grass for about 14 years commenced on the afternoon of June 4. It is not expected the yield will be more than 4 dwt to the ton, but it will pay all costs of unwatering the mine, and timbering the shaft to the second drive, in all about 225ft in depth. There are about 300 to 400 tons of ore to crush. The unwatering of the shaft was kept back until the machinery was properly fixed and in good order, so that the water could be utilised, and the refuse allowed to flow into the dam erected for future use.

The Broken Hill Proprietary Company, Limited, has received a cable message dated London, June 4, giving the following quotations:—Silver, 2/1 15-16 (official quotation); lead, £19/17/6 (buyers' price); shares, £1/16/3 (buyers' price); spelter, £21/10/ (buyers' price); and copper, £61/17/6 (buyers' price).

The official report of the Mount Lyell mine, for the fortnight ended May 27, states, amongst other things:—"Three blast furnaces in continuous operation during fortnight. For the current half-year 1004 tons blister copper consigned to the Electrolytic, Refining, and Smelting Works, Port Kembla, for refining. Lake Margaret Water Power Scheme: Erection of wood pipes and laying of steel pipes making satisfactory progress. Main power house walls completed and roofing in hand. Transmission line nearing completion. At the reduction works end erection of concrete walls of sub-station and blower house in progress. Weather conditions fair."

The manager of the Cope's Creek Dredging Company reports for week ending May 30, as under:—"All work running smoothly. Stripping overburden. Boxes were run down for about 2½ tons. This old dredge ground prospects poor."

HAWKINS' HILL GOLDFIELD.

BATHURST, Friday.

Reports received from Hill End state that in a crosscut being driven east in the Hawkins' Hill Reward mine here, certain changes have been met with, which are held to indicate that the mine is on the verge of an important discovery. The Reward is stopping on payable stone in No. 1 winze. It is expected that the main unwatering level being driven by the Reward Company to intersect the Robert Emmett crosscourse will be completed within the next three months. The Golden Key syndicate have partly paid the cost of this work, as it will drain the whole of their property to a great depth. The Golden Key syndicate own the old Scandinavian, Carver's, and other claims, from which a great amount of gold was won from the higher levels. Deeper mining was stopped by the heavy inflow of water. The present unwatering level will drain all this, and give a new lease of life to the property.

It is reported that the Golden Key syndicate intend forming a public company to work the mine.

The tribute let on the mica veins of the Amalgamated Hill End has been withdrawn, and it is being worked by labour men. The tributers on the Star of Peace reef are still working. Ore taken from Phillipson's by the tributers was crushed last week, and resulted in 15oz of retorted gold being obtained from about 17 tons. This will give the tributers wages. As far as can be gathered locally, matters are in an undecided state as to what is going to be done. The contract being carried out by Mr. C. Scantlebury has been temporarily stopped, owing to some dispute among the men. The Amalgamated has made an application for exemption from labour conditions on the ground that it has been employing more than its complement of men.

BARRIER MINES.

BROKEN HILL, Thursday.

Mr. Samuel Mayne, well known in connection with the B.H. South Mine, as manager and underground manager, and closely connected with other companies, has been appointed manager of the Rupee mine, and takes charge from Monday next.

At the B.H. North mine, during the last official fortnight, section 10 winze from the 1250ft level was started, and deepened to 11ft in 17 per cent. ore. Section 12 winze was deepened in 15 per cent. ore. At the 1400ft level section 11 crosscut was carried 17ft into the lode in 16½ per cent. ore. The drive along the lode was carried to 53ft, also in 16½ per cent. stuff.

BROKEN HILL PROPRIETARY.

MONTH'S OUTPUT.

MELBOURNE, Thursday.

The B.H. Proprietary Co.'s output for four weeks ended June 3 was as follows:—

Refinery products:—From own ores, 916oz of gold, 145,284oz of silver, and 2098 tons of soft lead. From purchased ores, 248,033oz silver and 4919 tons of soft lead. The antimonial lead product is estimated at 58 tons. Zinc concentrates produced 5290 tons, containing 66,822 oz of silver, 310 tons of lead, and 2495 tons zinc.

ELEANOR MINES, LIMITED.

The superintendent reports as follows for the fortnight ended June 2:—

Four hundred and seventy-five tons were crushed for 180 ounces gold bullion, with 11 tons concentrates, of an estimated value of 4 ounces 8dwts per ton. No. 7 level: Drive on No. 3 reef advanced 30ft to 120ft. No. 8 level north: Advanced 33ft to 480ft. Stopes north of "J" winze: Stopes merging into each other. Stopes south of "J" winze: Back of both stopes were inaccessible for sampling at time of measurement, but from appearances should assay well. Now hauling good stone from these stopes. No. 9 level north: Advanced 31ft to 162ft. The slimes treatment plant was engaged clearing foundations for new plant. As soon as the timber is to hand the work will be pushed ahead.

Pindora Mines. No. 1 shaft, width 35 inches, value 1 per cent., not on eastern wall. No. 2 shaft, 200ft level, north drive, width 66 inches, value 10 per cent., on both walls. South drive, width 40 inches, value 5¼ per cent., on both walls. No. 3 shaft width 34 inches, value 5¼ per cent., not on eastern wall.

MOURAMBA COPPER MINES.

Synopsis of general manager's report fortnight ended June 3:—

No. 4 Level: South main drive extended 5ft 6in, total 962ft 6in. Ore in face very dredgy. Putting in crosscut east to prove whether a better grade lies in the eastern side. The crosscut, which is in section 34, has been advanced 6ft in same class of ore as in the main drive.

No. 5 Level: Cistern completed, and driving north and south; south main drive advanced 4ft 6in, north 4ft 6in.

Diamond Drilling, No. 5 Level, Section 28: No. 8 borehole continued from 164ft a further 9ft, ore being proved, making a total width of 17ft in the second vein. Total width of ore proved 24ft, extended to 199ft without showing further values. Will continue boring when new rods come to hand. Section 29, bore hole No. 9, started, and extended to 67ft, slate showing to 59ft. At this point a formation was struck which carries a little copper for a width of 8ft, value about 1 per cent.

Prospecting Shaft.—Sunk 5ft, total 54ft. As the ore was very narrow at this point, started driving southerly. Drive in 9ft from shaft, face showing ore four feet wide, carrying some high-grade carbonates, and should bulk 3 to 4 per cent. copper. This material is very silicious, and should mix well with the basic ores in smelting. Plant in good order, and running well.

VULCAN TIN MINE.

For the four weeks ended May 25, the manager reports as follows:—

Adit Level Stope.—Breaking good quantities of payable ore from below the adit tunnel.

400 Foot Level.—Have started to crosscut from this level to connect up with the 550ft rising stope. Twenty-one (21) feet have been driven, leaving a further 30ft to drive before reaching the point where we expect to connect.

550 Foot Rising Stope.—This stope is now up about 200ft. The tin values have practically given out in the immediate vicinity of where we have risen, but when connections have been effected with the level above, we have a fair chance of again picking up the chute of ore.

840 Foot Stope.—Breaking payable ore over a fair area, with hand steel labour.

900 Foot Stope.—Two machine drills are constantly employed breaking ore. The stope still keeping about the same value. The bulk of the stone crushed during the month was obtained from here.

1050 Foot Level Winze.—The winze has been sunk to a depth of 20ft, following down a well-defined lode three feet wide, which carries nice tin in places, but the bulk so far is not payable. A fair amount of water is making.

Ore Treated.—During the four weeks we have crushed 625 tons 11cwt 1qr of ore, producing 33 tons 18cwt 3qr 12lb of tin concentrates, which have been sold for a gross return of £2060 11s 1d.

MAMMOTH COPPER MINE.

IMPROVED PROSPECTS.

The mine manager's progress report for the second half of May states:—

Chieftain mine.—No. 3 level: South drive advanced 19½ft, total 241ft 6in. Drive has been continued in footwall ore body; expect to connect with No. 2 winze Wednesday evening, when crosscut will be driven through full value and width of ore body.

No. 2 level: North drive advanced 27ft 8in, total 106ft 6in, width ore exposed 4ft, assaying 8½ per cent. copper, 3¼oz silver, and 1dwt gold. Solid ore extends back beyond drive towards the hanging-wall. Level now on footwall side of ore body. Side stripping first 20ft of this drive, preparatory to stoping as proved, ore body is not less than 10ft wide. Stoping now being carried on by three stope drills in No. 1 level and No. 2 level for a production of 80 tons ore daily, output will be increased to 120 tons daily when alterations to air main are completed, thus allowing use of extra machines. Have arranged tributing agreement to mine carbonate ore from a few of the company's outside leases. Sorting plant has been practically completed, except installation jig, which has not arived here from south.

GREAT BRITAIN SLUICING COMPANY.

THE DECREASED PRICE FOR TIN.

The thirteenth ordinary general meeting of the above company was held yesterday at the company's office, 16 O'Connell-street. The chair was taken by Mr. John Kirkland.

The chairman, in moving the adoption of the report and balance-sheet, enlarged upon the reasons set forward in the report for increasing the reserve fund. He suggested that the knowledge that the company had such a reserve, and is thus making provision for the future, should tend to steady the value of the company's shares on the market. He also intimated that the decline in the market price of tin was causing concern to the board, who are watching the position, and shareholders must not be surprised if a further decline, coupled with the high rate of wages now being paid, and the still higher rates demanded, rendered it necessary to shut down the mines till better conditions prevailed.

The directors' report showed that the production of tin ore during the half-year was 75 tons 8cwt 2qr 12lb, as against 58 tons 12cwt 3qr 9lb during the previous period. The average price realised was £120/18/0 per ton, as against £136/11/10 per ton during the last half-year, and £156/13/3 per ton during the corresponding period of last year. Operations were continued uninterruptedly throughout the half-year at both mines. At the Britain, it is to be noted, the company is now working in the widest portion of the main lead, and towards the head of it. At Y Creek the pontoon was floated from its building site on the surface to the bottom, which has, so far, proved to be mainly hard and very bouldery. Indications are that these conditions, which have reduced the possible yardage, will become more favourable as the face is advanced up stream. The profit for the half-year was £1982/8/11, which, with a balance of £1257/3/2 brought forward, made a sum of £3239/12/1 available for distribution. After paying £1500 in dividends, providing for depreciation, and adding £150 to the reserve fund, which now stands at £3000, a balance of £1070/1/4 was left to be carried forward.

The report and balance-sheet having been adopted, the retiring director, Mr. Robert Sands, and the retiring auditor, Mr. Albert Borchard, were re-elected.

LIFEBELTS.

INSTRUCTIONS FOR PASSENGERS.

Although the ferry steamers on the harbour are required to have sufficient lifebelts for all passengers carried, it has recently been pointed out that probably not one in every ten of the regular travellers on the ferries would know how to adjust properly a belt when an accident occurred.

In order that passengers may obtain the requisite knowledge of how to handle and adjust such life-saving appliances, Mr. W. A. Mackenzie, general manager of the Sydney Ferries, Limited, has arranged for the principal wharfingers on the Mosman, Cremorne, Neutral Bay, Milson's Point, Lavender Bay, and Parramatta River wharfs, Circular Quay, to provide the necessary information.

Notices will accordingly be posted on these wharfs informing passengers that the necessary instruction in lifebelt adjustment will be given on application being made to the principal wharfinger.

DOGS' HOME GRANT.

The committee of the King Edward Dogs' Home at Kensington yesterday waited upon the Minister for Public Health and asked for a £ for £ subsidy, estimated at over £300, on the total collection of subscriptions for the year. The deputation, which was introduced by the Assistant-Treasurer and Minister for Railways, Mr. Hoyle, was informed by Mr. Flowers that he would place £100 on the estimate on behalf of the institution.

BOWLING RINK CHAMPIONSHIP.

TO THE EDITOR OF THE HERALD.

Sir,—I have just read Mr. Leitch's letter appearing in your issue of the 2nd instant under the above heading. I regret exceedingly that that gentleman should have allowed himself to write in so intemperate a fashion, for it has led him into being unjust not only to me, but to himself.

Mr. Leitch challenges the accuracy of the statement in my article, that the jack was thrown about 14 feet from the ditch in the last end of the semi-final game between Mr. Colquhoun's rink and my own; and he adds: "As a matter of fact, it was nearer 40 feet, and Mr. Waxman with his own figures proves that it was so." The following is Mr. Leitch's argument in support of that proposition: "Mr. Waxman states that his leader played both bowls 9 feet behind. That would, according to him, place them within 5 feet of the ditch; but, as a matter of fact, when they were measured against Colquhoun's first bowl, which they only beat by an inch, they were quite 15 feet from the ditch, a special string having to be obtained to measure with, and they must have been in front of the jack if the jack was only 14 feet from the ditch before being driven by Mr. Waxman's third player." Mr. Leitch's memory has failed him in this connection, the fact being that the only bowls which were measured at all (and Mr. Moore, the umpire, can verify this) were Mr. Colquhoun's first bowl and my own. The other 6 bowls of our side being obviously well within both of these bowls, were, therefore, not the subject of an unnecessary measure. May I suggest, whilst on this point, that Mr. Leitch (accompanied by any bowler who saw the particular game at Newfarm, Brisbane, now under review) measure 40 feet from the ditch of any bowling green in the State recognised by the Association, and place the jack and the mat in the proper position for play (the front of the mat being not less than 6 feet from the opposite ditch in line of play), and then give your readers their candid judgment on the point raised by Mr. Leitch?

Another excerpt from my article, whose accuracy is questioned is that "Leitch, becoming anxious, indicated in an unmistakable fashion to his captain (who was just about to play) that his first bowl was short, and that it was absolutely necessary for him to be well up with his last." Mr. Leitch's reply in support of his "absolute denial," is as follows:—"It was my duty to tell my skip the position, and I did it as he stepped on to the mat by saying, in a quiet tone of voice: 'Just a yard on your last.' If I had not taken this course I could have been blamed, and justly so, too." Mr. Leitch's denial, therefore, amounts to the difference between directing his captain "in a quiet tone of voice," and "indicated in an unmistakable fashion." I was, of course, alongside Mr. Colquhoun keenly watching for, and awaiting the result of, his last bowl (I having one yet to play), and I have no hesitation in saying that Mr. Leitch betrayed obvious anxiety (which, in the circumstances, was perfectly natural and understandable), and in that anxiety "in unmistakable fashion directed his captain" not to be short. As a matter of fact, I have in my possession several newspaper accounts fully corroborating my own notes on that particular end.

Finally, may I be permitted to ask Mr. Leitch this question:—If the jack was 40 feet from the ditch (as he avers), and, therefore only 74 feet from the front of the mat, how was it that he failed to get either of his two bowls amongst any of our six, which ultimately counted, and at least two of which he says were quite 15 feet from the ditch?

I am, etc.,

LOUIS WAXMAN.

Melbourne, June 4.

For "placing an obstacle on the rail, thereby causing a train to stop," a peasant of Nijny Novgorod has been fined £1. He was trying to commit suicide, and the "obstacle" was his own head.

THE "TRAVELLER."

(BY SWAGMAN.)

It is a rule of station life in Australia—a fixed hereditary custom—to fill up the traveller's ration bags as he passes through in search of work. At some stations the way-farer introduces himself to the storekeeper, who replenishes his stock of tea, sugar, flour, salt, and mutton (at Grong Grong and Groongal the worker received tobacco as part of travellers' perquisites). At other stations a man interviews the hut cook, who hands out bread, meat, and brownie, in lieu of the mutton and flour of the storekeeper. If a man wants to wash his clothes, or wait for a letter, no objection is taken to him camping a spell. In fact, men come and go, and come and camp, and little notice is taken of them at all in the valley of the Murrumbidgee. As a matter of course, some men abuse the privileges extended to travellers, and camp on till the cook gives them the cold eye or the pointed inquiry: "Can't you blokes give the other chaps a show?" Then they get a move on to the next station. Some station cooks possess a sardonic sense of humour, and good stories are current concerning their reception of travellers. Late one evening the writer called at Yarrowbee (Mr. Jno. McCaughey's) station for rations. In answer to his rap at the door, a deep bass voice inquired: "Who's there?" I answered "A stranger." "Come in. Well, what do you want?" asked the cook, "A hand-out?" (hand-out is the vernacular for rations). "Ha, right oh! Put it here, old man," he said, as he extended his hand. I shook hands with him. Then his hand closed on mine, and he led me out of the door, saying, as he did so, "Good-night, you've got a hand-out." I was a bit angry, and said, "Confound you! It is tucker I want; not horseplay." "Well, why didn't you say so?" said the wag laughing. "Come in. Have you got a mate?" "Yes," "Well, this will carry you over to-night. Bring the mate up to breakfast in the morning. And then I'll fix your bags up for the track."

In the early days Tonganmain and Benerembah stations, on the Murrumbidgee and Bolinda Vale, outside Melbourne, displayed an extraordinary tolerance of campers. Indeed, within the last five years I have seen forty men camp at Sir Rupert Clarke's station for ten weeks, and receive rations every evening. At Tonganmain years back I have seen an average of seventy men put the winter in, right up to shearing time at the huts. Work was not too plentiful in those days, and some good toilers were to be found among the professional campers.

Harry Jones threw his swag down in the travellers' hut at Benerembah, and went up to the cook for rations. He observed, in a casual sort of way, that his "gammy" leg felt a bit crook, and he was going to camp a bit. Jimmy Gigg gave him his tucker and said merely "Just so." Interwoven with the story of Harry Jones's lame leg is the history of a Riverina blood feud. Bubs Jones, brother to Harry aforementioned, disputed with Bogan Bill for the title of champion bushfighter of the west. Nor did a hundred Homeric 20-round battles decide the question at issue. So it came that whenever Bogan arrived at a shed where Bubs was camped, for both men followed the call of the sheds, he dumped his swag with a yell, and made for his foe at a hand-gallop. Such formalities as referees and Marquis of Queensberry rules were dispensed with, and the encounter was an allout mix-up of fists, boots, bricks, bottles, pickets, and any other available implement of assault, variegated with exhibitions of footwork and displays of collar and elbow and catch-as-catch-can styles of wrestling. The fight invariably ended in a draw in favour of Bubs, who carried more science than his adversary, or a knockout. In either case it meant merely a postponement of the fight till the next time they met. If Bubs called at a station and heard Bogan was in the district, he'd travel forty miles out of his way to exchange insults, right hooks, and other courtesies with his inveterate enemy.

One day Bogan called at a station where Harry Jones was engaged at the unusual task of earning a few pounds. Bogan, who had never seen or spoken to the man in his life, recognised him from his brother. He went up to him and said, "You're a Jones." Then he fell on the astonished stranger and smote him hip and thigh, and smashed his leg in two places. Bubs Jones at this particular period was having an argument with the Law in Melbourne. The result was an "indeterminate" sentence. It was thus Bogan Bill lived to tell the tale, and Harry to carry a lame leg round the stations of the Murrumbidgee.

Jones was as good as his word. He "camped a bit." At first he came for his rations every night. Then he began to drop in at tea time, and was invited to "sit in." Shortly afterwards he rolled up to dinner. Finally he arrived at breakfast-time, and made himself perfectly at home in a genial, easy-going sort of way. He read all the station books, and as many others as he could borrow from passing travellers. He did a good deal of washing and sewing, and was the cleanest dressed and freshest-looking working man on the place. He still camped in the travellers' hut. Indeed, the only menial work he did was to carry rations down to the travellers of a night. For this he received tobacco and books from the men. He had camped on the station just twenty-six weeks when he caught the boss's eye. Being a clean and likely-looking fellow, the Boss decided to give him a billet. He left word with the cook that Jones was to come up in the morning for orders.

In the morning there was no Harry visible. In the night "he had folded his tent like the Arabs and silently stole away." The Boss rang up the other stations and made inquiries about the missing camper. He was reported off Kuba station, twenty-three miles distant, at 6 a.m., making for Narrandera as hard as he could lick. Not a bad night's tramp for a lame man.

Jones possessed a good eye for a camp, and deposited his swag under the bridge at Narrandera. Plenty of good water was flowing by. Fishing was to be had in the river. A tomato and melon patch belonging to the Chinese was on his left hand. On his right not more than a hundred yards distant stood the Narrandera brewery. Harry profited fully by the obvious advantages of his camping ground. He made himself decidedly comfortable for the rest of the summer. The Benerembah boys took a friendly interest in Jones's mode of life. They visited him when they went into Narrandera at Christmas time, and of course "dooked" him a few shillings a piece. In the intervals of catching a few shillings from other bushmen of his acquaintance he continued to use the soap and the needle, and was always well dressed and respectable looking, though "he toiled not, neither did he spin." He loved the easy life, and the peaceful way of living, but unfortunately one day a "mulga wire" came through to say that the turbulent Bogan Bill was making Narranderawards from Bundure, and once more Harry lit out for parts unknown, carrying a stone and a half more avoirdupois than when he came to the traveller's hut at Benerembah twelve months previously.

FOREIGN LECTURES SOCIETY.

The sixth and last of the French series of lectures was delivered on Monday night at the Royal Society's rooms, by Dr. Thibault, who chose as his subject "Anatole France." The lecture proved a literary treat, and its interest was added to on account of the relationship existing between the writer and the distinguished man of letters.

At the conclusion of the lecture, Dr. Reuter Roth, who presided, cordially thanked Dr. Thibault, and announced that the series of six German lectures would commence at the end of July.

ABATTOIRS COMMISSION.

The South Australian Royal Commission which is inquiring into the abattoir systems of the various States, sat again at State Parliament House yesterday.

Mr. Charles Harford, master butcher, and Ald. C. Mallett, also a master butcher, gave evidence. The Commission will visit Homebush Abattoirs to-day, and resume taking evidence in Sydney on Tuesday morning. It will leave for Adelaide in the evening.

KING'S BIRTHDAY.

ARRANGEMENTS FOR MONDAY.

King George's birthday will be celebrated on Monday as a public holiday, and an extensive programme of amusements has been drawn up for the occasion.

The second day of the A.J.C. Winter Meeting will attract large crowds to Randwick, no doubt, but this event will have a powerful counter-attraction in the match between the English and New South Wales sides, to be played at Sydney Cricket Ground. Other sporting engagements to be decided on Monday are the hockey carnival at Sydney Grammar School, when 5 Goulburn teams will turn out; the sports meeting at Marrickville Oval, Rugby Union matches, the amateur golf championship matches at Kensington links, interstate lacrosse at the Domain, with a Queensland team as the visitors; baseball at Waverley, and British Association games at Wentworth Park, Glebe.

Special postal arrangements have been made for Monday. At the G.P.O. the delivery and registration offices will be open from 9 o'clock till noon. Stamps will be sold from 9 o'clock till 6 o'clock. The parcels and money order offices will be open between 9 o'clock and noon, and the chief telegraph office as usual. The pillar boxes in the city will be cleared only in the forenoon and at night, and in the metropolitan suburbs at the ordinary hours in the morning, or alternatively in the evening.

Special matinee performances will be given at the Royal, where Harry Lauder and company are entertaining; Her Majesty's, at which the pantomime season is nearing a close; the Little, Criterion, Adelphi, and Palace theatres. There will be a grand festival night at the Imperial Dancing Salon. The skating rinks and picture palaces will be open as usual.

The interstate chess match between New South Wales and Victoria will commence in Sydney.

Special railway arrangements have been made, by means of which the public will be able to reach seaside places on the Illawarra line at frequent intervals, National Park, and the Mountain resorts. The tramway services will also be supplemented to meet increased traffic.

The Domain fire-place will be available for billy-boiling. Dry firewood is supplied, and fresh water may be obtained from the fountain near at hand. The gymnasium will be open as usual.

VANMEN'S GRIEVANCE.

TOUTING AT THE CENTRAL STATION.

A deputation composed of representatives of the Sydney Vanmen's Union, the Sydney and Suburban Cabmen's Union, and the Chauffeurs and Taxi-drivers' Union, waited on the Minister for Railways, Mr. Hoyle, yesterday, to point out that undue privileges were enjoyed at the railway station by one carter, who was allowed to "tout" and secure custom, while others were debarred. The deputation was introduced by Mr. Keegan, M.L.A.

Mr. J. Fletcher, secretary of the Cabmen's Union, said that at present neither cabmen nor carters got fair play; one man only used the premises as a stable and depot combined. If he had no license he had no right to be there. If he had a license then every carter was entitled to one also. The privileged person referred to was allowed to tout and use the railway luggage trolleys. Two of the largest hotels in Sydney also sent vans. If they had a right to do that, so had the vanmen.

A wharf vanman said that the trouble was as great at the Quay. If one license per vehicle were issued it would stop a good deal of touting; at present one man stayed in charge and several others did the canvassing.

The Minister said that he was certainly opposed to allowing any man to have a prior claim. He understood that there were stringent regulations against touting. He would ask for a report from the Chief Commissioner regarding the carter mentioned. If there was no special regulation dealing with that man, he should be stopped. He would recommend that provision be made for a stand for a van.

PROPOSED NEW RAILWAY.

INVERELL TO GUYRA.

The Public Works Committee heard further evidence yesterday concerning a suggested line of railway from Guyra to Inverell.

Mr. E. T. Pittman, Under-Secretary and Government Geologist, Department of Mines, said that practically half of the country through which the line would pass was without mineral resources, but in the other half tin, diamonds, and silver-lead and copper ores were found. There were 171 leases for tin, tin and diamonds, lead and tin, diamonds, tin, etc., tin and silver, with an area of 1488 acres. The area held by authorities and agreement was 199 acres, and the area of country on which recovery of minerals was authorised was 4687 acres. The revenue therefrom was £1578 18s. There was every reason to believe that the tin field would be permanent. He was inclined to think that the land on the alternative route (Inverell to Glen Innes) was much better from an agricultural point of view than on the line under discussion.

THE ANTI-SYDNEY AGITATION.

TO THE EDITOR OF THE HERALD.

Sir,—With reference to the reply of the secretary of the Northern Decentralisation League to a letter of mine, published under the above heading in a previous edition of the "Herald," I desire to say that, leaving abusive words to my opponent, I do not aspire to the championship in inaccuracy or rashness of statement, even if he does. I said broadly that the so-called port of Newcastle was almost wholly formed by the lavish expenditure of public money. I say, further, that it owes little or nothing to nature, and that if the three immense breakwaters—that from the mainland to Nobbys, that out into deep water from Nobbys, and the corresponding one out from Stockton—were removed, the estuary of the Hunter that would remain would be open to the ocean, and unfitted for any anchorage or traffic. But these great breakwaters—two of them still unfinished—are not the only works that are required, for every flood and fresh in the river brings down vast quantities of matter, which, meeting the incoming tides, is deposited on the estuary's floor and so involves constant dredging. And despite it all, it is not seldom the case that vessels of heavy tonnage have either to go to Sydney or to Port Stephens to complete their loading, otherwise they could not get out, and as the tonnage of ships gets greater, this difficulty will be recurring with increased frequency. I say, generally, from the extreme easterly termination of the seaward pointing breakwaters, right out past Waratah, the harbour or its foreshores is one big scene of public expenditure. Further, that this favoured spot has no Harbour Trust, because it wants no taxation; that it was specially exempted from the Holman wharfage dues that it has insufficient room at its wharfs for the traffic it now handles; that vessels lie along the western shore of Stockton for long periods waiting a chance to load, and that, despite all these facts, the grasping port cries, like the daughter of the horseleech, "more," ever "more."

Your correspondent asserts that the coal trade contributes a net profit of £200,000 to the State. How he arrives at that interesting result is unknown to me; but, with all the figures available at my hand, I find that the gross total of all charges whatsoever collected in the year ended June 30, 1913, from coal and coke coming into the port of Newcastle was £312,796, and that, seeing that this class of traffic is charged the lowest of all rates, except manure; in fact, that it is an open question whether it pays its way at all. The £312,796 gross would, I fear, show a lamentably small net profit, if any at all. Moreover, the year 1913 was an exceptionally good one, for in the corresponding period of 1912 the gross earnings were £263,040, and the two amounts mentioned were collected on 5,524,465 and 4,979,560 tons respectively. Truly, a heap of work for very little profit; but, so saying, I am not writing to depreciate the coal trade. It gives employment to thousands of people, and good luck to it; but not one of those thousands would be a whit worse off if the coal was shipped from the great natural deepwater of Port Stephens, which could be reached over a nearly dead-level country from Maitland by about the same mileage as it is to Newcastle from that town, and this railway would be paid for in no long time by the saving of vast expenditure on Port Hunter.

Whether Newcastle will get the trade of northern New South Wales away from Sydney or not is a matter beyond my present knowledge. And not being, like your correspondent, a prophet in such matters, I leave it to the future to decide. But this I do know: It is, that there are men in Sydney who are at last waking up, and that is is likely the abolition of zone rates beyond Newcastle will not take pace as readily as your correspondent predicts. It is not reasonable to believe that all exceptions will be made in favour of Newcastle. Sydney has still some rights, and so have the country producers who prefer her market.

CHESS.

N.S.W. V. VICTORIA.

The annual telegraphic match, 10 men a side, between New South Wales and Victoria, will be played on Monday next. The Sydney representatives will be accommodated at the School of Arts Club. Play is expected to start at 10 a.m.

The local players are Messrs. W. S. Viner, D. M'Arthur, J. L. Jacobsen, S. Crakanthorp, H. V. Crane, L. S. Crakanthorp, T. M. Bradshaw, W. Crane, H. B. Bignold, B. Parker. The Victorian men are Messrs. C. G. Watson, C. G. Steele, H. E. Grant, E. B. Loughran, W. F. Coultas, J. Erskine, G. F. Harrison, M. H. Read, G. A. Russell, and Mountain.

Great interest will be attached to the game at board No. 1 between Mr. Viner, champion of Australia, and Mr. Watson, champion of Victoria. They played a match some years ago in Western Australia, when Mr. Viner won his title and the match by 7 wins to 1. Mr. Watson, however, is just now at the top of his form, and is sure to give the champion a good game.

A BRILLIANT BREVITY.

White—F.J.W.	Black—X.
1. P to Q 4.	1. P to Q 4.
2. P to K 4.	2. P takes P.
3. Kt to Q B 3.	3. Kt to K B 3.
4. B to K Kt 5.	4. B to K B 4.
5. Q to K 2.	5. Kt to Q B 3.
6. Castles.	6. P to K 3.
7. P to Q 5.	7. Kt to Q Kt 5.
8. Q to Kt 5 ch.	8. Q to Q 2.
9. Q takes Kt P.	9. Q to Q B 1.
10. B to Kt 5.	10. Kt to Q 2.
11. P takes P!	11. B takes P.
12. R takes Kt!!	and Black resigned.

Position after White's 11th move: P from Q 5 takes K P.

(a) Brilliant play. If Q takes Q, then White mates with B takes Kt.

(b) Still more beautiful. If in reply B takes R, then Q takes K P and mates next move. If Q takes R, then White mates with Q takes R. If P to Q B 3, then follows R to K 7 ch, and mates next move.

VINER CHESS FUND.

A SUCCESSFUL APPEAL.

The promoters of the movement to send Mr. W. S. Viner, jun., chess champion of Australia, to London to represent the Commonwealth in the British chess tourney, have every reason to be satisfied with the response to their appeal. Already about £50 has been collected. In addition to the sum named, the residents of Bellingen, where Mr. Viner lives, have collected £25, the Lord Mayor having received a telegram to that effect. The sum of £50 has been collected in Western Australia, and other States have also taken the matter up.

It is hoped that the entertainment which Madame Boult is organising, and which is to be held in the Town Hall on Friday evening, the 19th inst, will add considerably to the funds. Though the character of the entertainment calls for a large outlay, popular prices will be charged, and seats may be reserved on the opening of the plans at Paling's. Among the special attractions will be an exhibition of living chess, a living representation of Tennyson's "Dream of Fair Women" (the lines of which will be recited by Mr. Lawrence Campbell), living statuary, and old-world dances. The programme will be unique.

It is Mr. Viner's intention to leave Sydney on the 24th inst, and, should he meet with success in England, arrangements are to be made for him to play matches with the great masters of the game on the Continent.

A meeting of the committee will be held at 7.30 on Tuesday evening next. The Lord Mayor has accepted the position of president of the fund. Subscriptions should be sent to Mr. V. A. Spence, hon. treasurer, 10 Hunter-street, city.

THE DENTAL HOSPITAL.

The Minister for Public Health (Mr. Flowers) received a deputation yesterday in connection with the Dental Hospital. It is only this year that the hospital has been granted a Government subsidy, and during the 10 or 12 years that it was without such assistance, a fairly large debt was accumulated. To liquidate this debt money was required, and the deputation asked the Minister's assistance. The deputation also asked for an amendment of the Dental Act, making it possible for patients to be charged fees for attendance received at the Dental Hospital, according to the means of the patient, and on the lines of the medical hospitals.

Mr. Flowers promised to give the matters consideration.

INCREASE OF INSANITY.

TO THE EDITOR OF THE HERALD.

Sir,—In your issue of the 15th inst., reference is made to various matters, which the Minister for Public Health is now dealing with—in pursuance of the policy of the present Government to make the conservation of the public health one of its most prominent considerations, a policy which surely its most strenuous opponent will not cavil at. Bush-nursing, which has already proved an inestimable boon to the residents of the Jindabyne district and other outback centres, is to receive departmental recognition and support—financially and otherwise; it is also hoped that the Education Department may be able to give useful co-operation. The proposal of the Victorian Board of Health that a large and expensive Commonwealth effort should be made for the purpose of carrying out research work in connection with cancer—a disease that has been gaining a tremendous hold on Australia during the past decade—has been turned down on the very reasonable suggestion of the Director-General of the Board of Health, Dr. Paton, who recommends that Australian research should wait till the Imperial Cancer Research results are available shortly. Mr. Flowers said he thought Victoria was following the lead regarding Australian research work given by Mr. Holman at the recent Auckland congress, and is satisfied that Mr. Holman's address had stirred up the whole of the States. There is good reason for Mr. Flowers' belief for Mr. Holman's attitude amongst the medicos at Auckland was that of a broadminded statesman, endeavouring to give a practical turn to the views expressed by the leading representatives of the various branches of medical science in Australasia. But why should the Minister controlling the Department of Public Health of this State wait for the Board of Health of another State to take the lead in acting upon the suggestions of his chief? One of the subjects on which Mr. Holman laid most stress, treating it as a national calamity, was the alarming increase in insanity—especially the neurasthenic form—which has developed, and is now further developing at so rapid a pace. One of the most serious questions of the day to those who have the future welfare of the race at heart is what is to become of the next and succeeding generations. That doctors differ we all know, but that there should be possible such a wide divergence of opinion by a dozen of our leading medical authorities as was exhibited at the inquiry of the unfortunate man at the Reception House a few weeks ago, shows how little is really known about insanity, and how much of that little is but guess-work. This man was committed to a lunatic asylum on a barest majority of professional opinion, and the protection of the public, of which a very large proportion is already "on the way," and the interests of justice alike demand a fuller measure of knowledge on this most vital subject. The Hon. the Minister for Public Health would undoubtedly be giving effect to the views expressed by the Premier at Auckland, if he initiated and encouraged some scheme for more specifically determining the causes which are contributing to the increasing insanity in this and the other States, and some means of checking or curing the ill.

MENS SANA.

There is an old tradition that March borrowed her last three days from April, and for some reason, never clearly explained, they have been therefore regarded as unlucky. In particular, no man would lend his money or goods during the "borrowed days," the belief being that any article lent during those days could be used for purposes of witchcraft against the lenders.

JUMP FROM A BRIDGE.

A SAFETY UMBRELLA.

CAPTAIN PENFOLD'S DEVICE.

In order to test the efficacy of his safety device for airmen, which, it is claimed, could also be used as an emergency escape from the upper stories of high buildings, Captain Penfold, the Australian aeronaut, yesterday made a descent from the North Sydney Suspension Bridge, which at the prevailing tide was 150 feet above the waters—or rather mud flats—of Middle Harbour.

The question to be decided was whether the device, which was in the form of a parachute, would come into operation in such a comparatively short fall, the ordinary form of apparatus, it is stated, not being considered dependable when used at altitudes of less than 500 feet. Captain Penfold's device, however, opend up in the form of a big umbrella within the first forty feet of its descent, the aeronaut falling lightly in the shallow water exactly seven seconds from the time he released the patent catch by which the fabric was attached to the ironwork of the bridge. "I landed as lightly," Captain Penfold said, "as if I had only stepped from a tram, and the device would have carried two or three people just as safely." The exhibition was watched by a large number of interested persons, who loudly cheered the aeronaut. Captain Penfold said he thought tors, and would ultimately be adopted as a that the device would prove a boon to aviafire escape in all high buildings.

CADET COMPETITIONS.

BRISBANE, Friday.

The interstate cadet competitions to decide the champion team of the Commonwealth commenced to-day. Rifle shooting and skirmishing were the events. In shooting, Victoria scored 81, Queensland 60, Tasmania 55, South Australia 53, New South Wales 50, and Western Australia, who shot during a downpour of rain, 29. The results of the skirmishing will not be available till to-morrow.

DAY BAKING.

TO THE EDITOR OF THE HERALD.

Sir,—Day baking has now been in vogue for four weeks, and a short review of its results may be of interest to the parties concerned. From the master bakers' standpoint it has not proved at all satisfactory. The waste of bread necessitated by always having two days' bread in hand is very serious, and will become a big factor in the cost of production. No baker could keep his customers by sending out bread two days old; consequently, the bread returned every evening by the carters must be wasted. This is a fact now when the weather is cold, and a baker's requirements are fairly regular; what it will be in the summer time, when the daily quantities vary very much more, and the public is harder to please, it is indeed hard to say. Even the fair minded operative baker, who gives the matter any consideration, will readily admit the difficulty. Added to this "waste" difficulty is the certain reduction in the output by all factories, owing to a lesser consumption, due to bread being staler than under the old system of night work. This must tell its tale against the operatives themselves, as it must mean doing away with a percentage of labour. This reduction of hands is already taking place, and will undoubtedly grow as the summer comes in. The officials of the union have always said in the press that the public would not notice any change in the bread. They must now know that there is a big difference, and that the public knows it also. One firm composed of operative bakers only, started a small suburban business recently, and its members always worked for and voted for day labour, with their fellow operatives. Now, however, that the master bakers employing labour are compelled to do day baking, this family firm of unionists have remained at night baking. What clearer evidence could there be that there is some advantage to be trade in the old system? It also discloses a new brand of black-legging, which will be hard to beat, and should appeal to all unionists. The known attitude of the Government in the matter was almost alone sufficient to induce leading members of the Master Bakers' Association to consent to a 12 p.m. start. Where was the sense of taking on a bitter struggle only to find day baking given the men by Act of Parliament, whereas now, as it is proving unsatisfactory, evidence can be put before the wages board, which may not only alter the Government's view of the matter, but may also convince a majority of the men that it is not so much to be desired as they once thought. This practical trial of day baking may in the end effect a satisfactory and permanent settlement to suit all parties.

LIBERAL ORGANISATION.

TO THE EDITOR OF THE HERALD.

Sir,—I was much interested in Mr. Wade's remarks on the necessity for closer organisation, and your able leader on the same subject, but it appears to me that the same sentiments have been aired and the same advice given to Liberals for the past four or five years, and so far without tangible proof of solid result. In my humble opinion it is high time that we left the realms of "air" and came down to the solid ground of hard endeavour. As at present constituted, the Liberal Association, even in the eye of its best friend, is not doing what Mr. Wade and your own editorial urge should be done, and so long as the association continues to centralise its spasmodic effort so long will the Labour organisations keep ahead of us. It is the habit in many a profession in Australia to look to England for its best methods of work, and we can hardly do better than follow the English lead in the matter of political organisation also.

There each district or division has its resident political agent of each political party, who spends his whole time in doing thoroughly that very necessary ground work which is essential to political success. The various leagues attached to the party, and consisting as ours should of political enthusiasts, have a right to the agent's services, and get them. He is responsible to the Central Conservative Club or the National Liberal Club, according to which party he represents, for the careful scrutiny of the rolls, the conducting of canvassing, the organisation of meetings, and the thousand and one details—small but important. I have a South London paper before me as I write, and I find reports of speeches by the selected party candidate, who has been officially selected and sent into the district to work many months since; in fact, since the last elections. The wisdom of this policy is obvious. By the time the election comes along the candidate knows his followers thoroughly, and, what is more important, the followers know him.

What an advantage this is in comparison with our slip-shod, unmethodical system, under which nothing is done till about six months before an election, and then an unholy scramble ensues for selection, generally with the result that the candidate is not announced till a few weeks before election day, and a bad feeling is engendered amongst those who should be the best of friends. Why, in the name of common-sense, we cannot follow out a sane system, when we know of one, I cannot conceive, and I trust, Sir, you will use your very great influence to bring these methods into operation here. There can be no valid reason why all the Liberal candidates for the next election, both State and Federal, should not be already in the field. With regard to the first question of decentralised organisation, there is absolutely no difficulty in the way. I am certain that the members of the existing Liberal leagues, whose efforts are very often lost because not supported by the central body as they should be, would be willing to pay a bigger subscription, the difference of which would go to pay a permanent resident agent, say, eight branches to one division.

My association will probably have a motion to this effect on the next Liberal conference paper, but from my knowledge of these conferences nothing follows but the usual slight atmospheric disturbance consequent upon the manufacture of too much "hot air." If you with the powerful instrument at your hand will press the necessity for some such reasonable and common-sense methods being followed, probably we shall see that closer organisation of which so much has been said and so little done. It must be admitted as a hard and unpleasant fact that the present haphazard method of "an organiser here to-day and gone to-morrow kind," together with the no organiser at all in some parts scheme, is too hopelessly futile and fatuous ever to effect what everybody in the Liberal ranks hopes for, and nobody appears to have had the brains or energy to do. Please pardon the length of this epistle; the urgency of the case must be my excuse, and do, I beg, use your best endeavours in the direction suggested (with all respect) to bring about the consummation devoutly to be wished—a healthy, intelligent Liberal party in power.

SAFETY AT SEA.

MR. HOLMAN'S SUGGESTIONS.

"TRY THE DIRECTORS."

The State Premier yesterday referred again to the Empress of Ireland disaster, and answered Canadian and local opinions regarding his remarks on the culpability of directors of shipping companies in such cases.

"I notice," said Mr. Holman, "that certain newspapers in Canada are reported to resent my utterances about the disaster. I am not surprised at this. Shipping companies are good advertisers all over the world, and the press is very helpful in time of calamity. If, as I now understand, the Empress of Ireland belonged to the Canadian Pacific Railway Company, of course they have sufficient influence in Canada to get anything said that they desire.

"I am also asked—quite gratuitously—to suspend judgment until the facts are known. I am suspending judgment. Saying people ought to be put on their trial is not saying that they ought to be acquitted or that they ought to be condemned. I do not know whether the directors of this Canadian line should be acquitted or condemned. I have never said either. What I say is that they ought to be put on trial to find out. I say that the inquiry which is to be held ought not to be confined to the conduct of a few unfortunate seamen or officers of the company, but ought to extend to those who are chief in responsibility.

ON TRIAL.

"My view is," added Mr. Holman, "that where commercial men agree to send the public from Canada to Europe, and, as a matter of fact, send them from Canada to the next world, that fact alone is immediate and sufficient ground for putting those men on their trial. I do not say, of course, that they ought to be convicted. If they can show that they have taken every possible precaution, and if they can show—as we are effusively assured by their press backers—that their ship represented the last word in naval architecture and skill, then going to trial would not hurt them. They would be triumphantly acquitted. But, until they can show that, the fact of the calamity having occurred under their direction, and to men and women who trusted themselves to their invitation, is a prima facie case against them.

FIVE QUESTIONS.

"I am not going to bandy argument with the various self-styled experts who have come into this controversy in defence of the shipping company. I only put these questions:—

1. Is it, or is it not, a fact that one well-known company, the Cunard Company, makes it its first boast that in its many years of navigation it has never lost either a passenger or a letter entrusted to it? 2. Do the vessels of this company navigate the most dangerous portions of the Atlantic Ocean; do they encounter all the risks arising from ice and from fogs? 3. Is it a fact that they have always successfully surmounted those risks? 4. Does this illustrate what naval architecture and naval skill can really accomplish to secure the safety of the travelling public, when those powers are directed primarily to maintaining public safety and not to inflating dividends? 5. If the Cunard Company has been able to secure that measure of success in maintaining pubic safety, is there any reason for any other company which enters upon this business to be permitted to be content with a lower standard?

THE RAILWAY PARALLEL.

"I am no expert," said the Premier further, "but perhaps some experts who have been favouring me with a little condescending advice during the last two or three days will answer these questions. I have also been asked by one of the well-meaning enthusiasts who have rushed in with that singular zeal which is always shown on behalf of shipping companies at times like this, whether I should like to be put on trial if a railway accident occurs. The parallel is not quite exact. I have no private interest to serve out of our railways, and, therefore, I am not acting under the circumstances of suspicion which directors of private enterprises, having private objects to gain, necessarily are. While I am Minister for Railways I have no objection to be tried for any accident that may occur on our lines involving loss of life, and, if it can be shown that any proper precaution has been neglected by me to serve any personal or financial interest of my own, and, of course, it may be added, any political interest—if, for example, in order to boom a surplus I had starved the system and made it unsafe—then certainly I ought to be convicted and punished."

PERTH STRIKE.

CHURCH COMMITTEE'S EFFORTS FAIL.

PERTH, Friday.

The Labour Federation Council last night unanimously rejected the Church committee's proposals for the settlement of the trouble in the building trade which include a recommendation that all shops reopen under the conditions prevailing prior to the dispute; and that in the meantime the question of the conditions of the employment of non-unionists at Miller's be referred to an arbitrator for decision.

One delegate said that he was at the meeting at the Esplanade on Sunday, but he did not hear any resolution regarding the no-rent campaign. He wished to know the reason for the omission.

"I forgot all about it," remarked the president of the Council. One of the delegates from the Plumbers' Union said that body had decided in favour of the question of a 44-hours week being brought into the present dispute, particularly in the event of the trouble lasting very much longer. Prior to the council going into committee to deal with the building trade crisis, the secretary of the Operatives Bakers' Union (Mr. Johnson), said he did not wish to alarm delegates that night, but it was just as well to notify them that during the next week or so the trade might be up against the day-work question.

ANTI-TRUST LAWS.

A FEDERAL BILL.

MELBOURNE, Friday.

In the House of Representatives to-day the Minister for Customs introduced a bill to amend the anti-trust law so as to give more effective control over combinations. It is provided that the Comptroller-General of Customs may certify in writing that he has reason to believe that, in relation to trade or commerce, there is a contravention of the law, namely, restraint of trade or monopoly. The Federal Executive may then refer the matter to the Interstate Commission, and any single member of the commission will have jurisdiction to investigate, either in public or in private, the powers of investigation under the Interstate Commission Act, to apply if the commission is satisfied that there is reasonable jurisdiction. The assumed offender may be called before the commission to show cause why an order should not be made against him as regards any goods specified in the summons. Penalties by fine and forfeiture of goods are provided.

DEPOSIT OF A CONTRACT.

Mr. A. J. Barnes, referring to the case of Wilhelmina Schmidt v Albert James Barnes, heard in the Banco Court on Thursday, states that he did not sign the contract in question, but, as instructed by his principal, left it with his solicitors for his principal to sign, which he failed to do. Mr. Barnes states that his agency in the transaction was never in question, consequently the vendor did not return the money to him on the ground that he was not acting as his agent.

LIVERPOOL RIOT.

A SHARP LESSON.

PRAISE FOR THE BRIGADIER.

Keen interest is being shown by military officers in the extraordinary position which has arisen as the result of the Military Board's action in connection with the events which took place at the camp of the 5th Infantry Brigade at Liverpool.

One officer who was on the scene throughout, and saw everything, is of opinion that the full facts of the case will quite justify the Brigadier, and he made some observations which put a somewhat different aspect on the position. "It is reported," he said, "that the Military Board has called upon Colonel E. C. Cooke, Lieutenant-Colonel J. M. Antill, and Captain J. Bilton to show cause why they should not be dealt with in connection with their actions during the camp of the 5th Infantry Brigade held in Liverpool in December last.

"From a military point of view this is an extremely unfortunate position for the Defence Department to place itself in when the whole of the surrounding facts are considered; more especially in the present state of the Australian militia, which is admittedly far from that state of efficiency which is required for troops to take the field. The most friendly critic would not, at the present time, describe the best of them as being more than half trained, whilst a considerable proportion of the troops from the outlying centres cannot, with the greatest stretch of imagination, be regarded as anything but the rawest of recruits. It is not expected, with the opportunities which they have had, that they could be otherwise.

"The troops were mobilised under a Brigadier who only received his appointment a few days before the mobilisation, and who was therefore in no way responsible for the state of efficiency in which the brigade then was. It was found that a part of the brigade was not only inefficient in every possible way, but even got into a state of open revolt on learning the contents of the first brigade order issued. The order which is supposed to have led up to the greater part of the trouble was worded as follows:—'No leave is to be granted from camp except in special cases to be approved by the Brigadier.' This was a perfectly reasonable order for any Brigadier to issue if he considered the circumstances warranted it. The board, however, is apparently of the opinion that the Brigadier was wrong, and condemns him because he acted in a way which the members of the board choose to describe as 'harsh and unsympathetic.'

"Had the members of the board been present on the occasion of the trouble on the bridge at Liverpool they would probably have acted in exactly the same manner that Colonel Cooke did; but unfortunately they were not present. Had they been they would have seen that the who is capable of grappling successfully with a dangerous position and turning it to good account. At that stage it became necessary to take steps to show the trainees that they were there to obey, and that discipline must be maintained. The Brigadier was evidently of the opinion that strong measures were necessary, and he directed accordingly, with the result that after three days and two nights out of camp the troops returned showing a marked improvement, which everyone present highly appreciated. A sharp lesson was wanted, and it was given, with results that would be lasting had not the present position arisen. But what might be expected now? Political interference in a matter of army discipline is not going to improve matters with the Australian Army; and if such is to be permitted, then the present great shortage of officers will be considerably increased, for it is not reasonable to expect that officers who endeavour to maintain discipline will tolerate the treatment which is now being meted out to those concerned in this trouble.

"That the Brigadier acted for the best under most trying circumstances there is no shadow of a doubt in the minds of those who saw the whole thing through, and personally I am thankful that Colonel Cooke was in charge of such a difficult position. In stating that the Brigadier was 'harsh and unsympathetic,' the members of the Board of Inquiry were evidently not aware of the many acts of thoughtfulness on the part of the Brigadier. Mentioning one only will show whether there was any want of sympathy shown. On the first night that the troops were out of camp an Army Service cart taking bread to one of the battalions got off the track, and the men had no bread. The Brigadier personally undertook a search over rough country in his own motor, and it was not until 1 o'clock in the morning that the cart was discovered. This was a case that might arise in any camp, and which frequently does arise on service. It is, however, no part of a Brigadier's job to scour the country for miles round searching for Army Service Corps carts. But Colonel Cooke did this for the sake of the men under his command, and he is then dubbed as 'harsh and unsympathetic.'

"It is reported," concluded the officer, "that the whole matter is to be reopened, and the case gone into fully, and until this is done it is only fair that the public should reserve its judgment on this important matter."

RULE OF THE ROAD.

TO THE EDITOR OF THE HERALD.

Sir,—Your correspondent's, Mr. Sherden, argument in favour of keeping to the left, to my mind, is sound. But right or left, why should not the municipal orderlies be made to school the pedestrians in observing the regulation side? Those officials might just as well be doing something useful, instead of wandering about with a far-away look in their eyes. I am, etc., BUMP.

TO THE EDITOR OF THE HERALD.

Sir,—In reading Mr. W. Sherden's letter in this morning's "Herald," I am not quite clear whether he is arguing in favour of or against the rule of "keep to the right." He says he was in favour of it until he got a horse and cart; "then I soon found that the habit of keeping to the right rendered it necessary for me to be very careful, and to drive slowly." Surely this is a reason in favour of it, and no doubt the very reason why such a rule has been adopted by all civilisation, to to speak. We pedestrians are in quite sufficient danger from the reckless drivers of silent motor cars and cycles at present without having them coming up behind us. I think it would be well to let the old and almost universal rule remain. But our friend says, "let us be original." There is a class, but a very small class indeed, of native born Australians who would alter any custom to be different from the English, showing, as they suppose, independence and originality. Possibly the originator of this "keep to the left" idea is one of this small class. I am, etc., RIGHT IS RIGHT.

It will be necessary to widen the channel by about another twelve feet, and this will be carried out by the dredge Iota.

In one case an employee informed the court that her employer, Frank Elias, had only paid her 20s a week. He dissented from the decision, and told Kritch that it was for him to apply for a mandamus to compel the Bench to grant the application.

FACE MASSAGE, which has been proved to be the best means to restore the contour of a withering face and drooping complexion. By its means the skin is cleared of retained sebaceous matter, intermingled with dirt and infective germs that cause inflammatory skin lesions, such as PIMPLES, BLACKHEADS, DISCOLOURATIONS, shrivelling, and premature WRINKLING, and at the same time a new life is given to the sluggish circulation with a persistence that eventually builds up the sunken hollows, and produces a HEALTHY GLOW and TEXTURE.

MOTOR DRIVING MEANS MORE MONEY if you are trained at DOHERTY and ADAMS' MOTOR SCHOOL.
Judge us by Results.
Since January 1, out of 100 pupils, 94 passed city test first try. Of these some had 10 days' training, others 15 to 20 days. Our tuition does not cease with license. Our pupils are welcome to extend their Mechanical and Electrical knowledge in spare time, without any time limit, until perfectly satisfied.
Our Pupils are TRAINED TO BE EXPERT TRAFFIC DRIVERS.
If you are content with only a suburban or country license, then you are courting disaster, as the majority of accidents have been due to the improper training of holders of suburban licenses.
Our city-trained men have not only entire confidence in themselves, but also that supreme control over the car, which alone can secure and hold the cream of the positions.
EMPLOYERS DEMAND THE CITY LICENSE ONLY.
Remember, our certificate is always a passport to a good position. Don't be rushed. If you rush into this business you will soon find yourself rushed out of it again. Call and let us show you the glowing letters from satisfied pupils; also others from the principal Motor Car Firms in Sydney. Country pupils find their lodging expenses light who attend our school.

SHORTHAND IN THIRTY DAYS.
BOYD SHORTHAND.

Following are some of the sentences from lesson 1A, which the student is now given to write after the FIRST POSTAL LESSON IN BOYD'S SHORTHAND:—
1. It appears to have occurred to the people to accept the offer of the Commission under the circumstances.
2. The circumstantial evidence brought forth was exceedingly pressing for the prosecution.
3. The health of the community prohibits further action in this direction.
4. Flax grows quickly under proper control, and then the flux is scanned by those controlling it.
5. The aboriginals are affected harshly by the elimination of the grant.
6. The swan is swimming to attain to the shore, while the ox chews the grass complacently.
COMPARE THIS WITH THE DRUDGERY OF OTHER SYSTEMS.

A postal student writes us:—
"I have studied 'Pitman' and 'Gregg' systems, and in those I found that, after going through a lot of drudgery in the earlier lessons I had practically to forget most of it later on to become a speedy writer. I FIND THERE IS NOTHING OF THE SORT IN THE 'BOYD' SYSTEM. The great thing I see about the system is that ONE DOES NOT GET AWAY FROM THE ORIGINAL CHARACTERS LEARNED—IN THE ABBREVIATING AND PHRASING THEY ARE ONLY CARRIED OUT; there seems to be no fresh signs to learn, no 'sign words,' no 'grammalogues,' or final hooks, loops, etc. The Boyd Shorthand seems VERY EASY TO READ—for instance, although I knew nothing about the system until I received your first lesson on 25th of last month, now to-day, on receipt of your 'Instructor,' I CAN QUITE DISTINCTLY READ THE READING EXERCISES AT THE END FROM page 81 on."
A Paddington pupil writes us:—
"Now at the end of my course—(sixty days for both shorthand and typewriting)—I should like to tell you how pleased I am with the progress I have made in Boyd Shorthand.
"Though previously I had no knowledge whatever of shorthand, I WAS ABLE, AFTER FORTY HOURS' STUDY, to write a business letter at the rate of over ONE HUNDRED WORDS A MINUTE.
"Since then I have had practice in taking down all sorts of matter, and have REPORTED SEVERAL LECTURES.
"I am perfectly satisfied with the ease with which I READ NOT ONLY MY OWN NOTES, BUT THOSE OF OTHER STUDENTS IN THE SCHOOL."
EVERY STUDENT WHO HAS COMPLETED THE 150 HOURS FOR SHORTHAND AND 150 HOURS FOR TYPING IS NOW IN EMPLOYMENT.

THE WORST SKIN MADE BEAUTIFUL.

(BY ADA GOODSELL.)

If, instead of rubbing skin foods and creams, and waxes, and snows, and goodness knows what else that women use, on the skin, women folk were to follow out the common-sense plan adopted by American women, there would be very little work for beauty specialists to do. Skin foods and creams spoil the complexion, for they fill the pores with grease, and cause open pores and blackheads. When the skin is freckled and tanned, brown, sallow, muddy, and displeasing, then it simply shows that there is something to COME AWAY. That "something" is an accumulation of cast-off tissue clinging to the surface of the skin, and the only preparation that will remove it is THERMOL. This white ointment starts to act the second day it is used. Away come the freckles and tan, the browness, and other worries, and the skin that you see in a fortnight or so is one of delightful whiteness and freshness. For pimples, blackheads, open pores, eczema, ringworm, and all skin diseases, LETHOL Ointment has an honourable record. THERMOL is 3/9 (post free 4/1), LETHOL is 3/ (Post Free 3/3), from DURNO, LTD., Chemists, Pitt-st, Sydney.

ANALGESIA IS WANTED BY ALL TOOTH SUFFERERS.

Analgesia is the new Anaesthetic that has made it possible for Spencer Nolan to treat every form of Tooth trouble without inflicting one twinge of pain.

This should be good news to you. Remember that Spencer Nolan has a reputation of 30 years' successful experience behind him, and guarantees utter freedom from pain.

If you have experienced the unpleasant sensation of the drill grinding on your teeth, you will appreciate the painless fillings.

Perhaps your Teeth have passed their usefulness, if so, you really ought to have them painlessly extracted. Bad teeth mean bad health. It stands to reason that the foulness which issues from decaying Teeth and is swallowed and taken right through the system, must be detrimental to good health. It pollutes the breath, too.

Let Spencer Nolan remove them, and fit you with a set of his famous Artificial Teeth. They neither wobble or drop, and are becoming and serviceable. The Set, upper or lower, at One Guinea, is wonderful value, and meets every demand of critical people.

Spencer Nolan's Coralline Gum Sets are absolutely unbreakable, and are exceptionally efficient and becoming. For comfort and appearance my Patent Suction Sets at Three Guineas each are unsurpassed.

Guaranteed Painless Extractions, 2/6.
Painless Gold Fillings, from 10/6.
Painless Amalgam Stoppings, from 5/.
Gold Crown, from One Guinea.
Single Teeth, from 5/.
Gold Teeth on Plates, from 15/.
All other fees equally moderate.

THE "NEW HOME" AGAIN!

ANOTHER TRIUMPH FOR THIS GRAND MACHINE.

NEW HOME. (repeated)
The "New Home" Sewing Machine has eclipsed its previous accomplishments—and proves to be a marvellously light-running Machine.
TWO Machines are shown daily in our window, with the mechanism of both in full action. The SOLE propelling power is the current of air supplied by a fan which is close to the flywheel of one of the machines.
The demonstration is plainly visible to all—there is no possibility of doubt on the matter.

THE LIGHT-RUNNING "NEW HOME" is just as light in actual use as this display indicates.

A light touch of your foot on the treadle will keep it whirling away, and so you can finish your work in quick time without fatigue. Call and see this demonstration, or write for our Illustrated Catalogue. Our terms of purchase are remarkably easy.

TOOTHOLOGY BY A NATIONAL DENTIST.

THE NECESSITY OF TEETH

TO HEALTH.

Your health depends largely on the proper mastication of your food. Thus good, sound teeth are essential.

Decayed teeth are dangerous, because once begun the decay will eat inward to the body of the tooth, and until recent times when this happened it meant the entire loss of the tooth. But to-day we can build up and save your natural teeth by removing the decay matter and thoroughly cleansing the canal of all bacteria, and filling the cavity, thus restoring it to its former shape and usefulness. The most common fillings are Gold and Amalgam.

TO SAVE AND REPAIR TEETH PAINLESSLY

REQUIRES EXPERT KNOWLEDGE,

for upon the work of the Dental Surgeon depends the safety and comfort of the tooth. The "National" Dentists are duly qualified Specialists, and men with years of experience in every branch of Dentistry. YOU can come to us, and we will painlessly fill and correct your teeth, and in doing the work give you unfailing consideration.

May we look YOUR case over to-day?

J.S.W. HAIR FOODS.

The fact that Farmer's stock J.S.W. HAIR FOODS is in itself testimony that these Hair Tonics are of proved excellence. It is woman's pride to attend to her hair, and thereby maintain or improve her personal attractions, and with J.S.W. PREPARATIONS to aid her the task is not difficult. At present, when keen winds make the Hair unusually brittle and dry, an application of J.S.W. HAIR FOOD will prove most effective. But the efficiency of J.S.W. Hair Tonics does not merely consist of endowing the Hair with glossiness, and producing an abundant growth; they are also invaluable to the general health of the scalp, and quickly eradicate scurf and dandruff. WHAT IS THE BEST BEAUTY SOAP?

Ladies who have been looking for a pure soap for their skin, a soap without any added colouring, without a lot of common perfume added to it, but just a soupcon of fine perfume to make it agreeable to use, will find that PURITOL WAX SOAP is such a soap. It also leaves a trace of the wax on the skin, which acts as a protection to sun and winds. It is very suitable for use on fine skins and for babies. Ladies will find that a little of PURITOL WAX itself applied on retiring will keep the complexion clear and free from blemishes.

While we stock English Blankets for those who want them, we give pride of place to the home-made article, and can thoroughly recommend the product of colonial mills.
As the various processes, from the shearing of the wool to the delivery of the Blankets at our door, keep the money circulating among your own people, patriotism should prompt you to support local industry—other things, of course, being equal. STOP EXPERIMENTING

SUPERFLUOUS HAIRS.

Perhaps you have been experimenting with one or the other of the Home remedies, and have been disappointed. Very likely they have made matters worse.
If you could only realise that the root of the hair must be destroyed, and removed before the hair growth can be eradicated for ever, you would see how useless these home treatments are. Most of us have to buy our experience, but here is a case from which you can benefit by someone else.
One of my patients writes to me,
Dear Miss Carrington,
I am so delighted with your treatment I thought you might like to have a few lines from me. Not a single hair of that unpleasant growth has reappeared, and as nearly a year has now elapsed, I feel sure that at last my cure is permanent. Very many thanks to you. Yours gratefully, M. L.

If you are similarly afflicted, there is no reason why you should not come and see me at once.

PERMANENTLY AND PAINLESSLY.

This is my claim, and to convince you of the thoroughness of my method, I am willing to give you a FREE TRIAL TREATMENT, when I will demonstrate to you the permanency of my cure. Do not hesitate to take advantage of this splendid opportunity, as calling upon me for this FREE TRIAL places you under no obligation whatever.

and the operation is not successful—which means that hairs removed by me have grown again, or others in their places—

AND A CLEAN STOVE,

With the increasing price of meat, greater care should be exercised in the cooking to get the most goodness out of each joint. The butcher cannot be held responsible if he delivers you a tough roast, or a leg of mutton which is mostly gristle—the real test only comes in the eating.
But no matter how inferior the joint, the Savoury Roaster makes it tender and delicious, and keeps all the nutriment in the meat, whereas the ordinary roasting process robs it of many of its qualities.
The Savoury Roaster is a hollow-bottom utensil of scientific construction, designed for perfect cooking of roast meats and vegetables. It is equally effective in any stove, and keeps the inside of your stove always scrupulously clean and sweet.
ROUND, 12in wide, 8in high, 6/6.
